Some compare it with Watergate

Few residents surprised by grand jury investigation

Most Wheeling residents contacted by The Herald yesterday expressed little surprise over the current federal grand jury investigation of alleged shakedowns of developers by public officials.

Some residents compared the investigation to the Watergate scandal. Others said they had heard rumors of political corruption in Wheeling for so long that the news of the investigation did not shock them.

Otto "Skip" Hedlund, who ran for village president on the Wheeling Independent Party in April, said he was not surprised by the investigation.

"I had heard many rumors to this effect, so I wasn't really surprised," he said. "I imagine where there is smoke, there is fire. We'll just have to see what happens."

HEDLUND said, however, that he was concerned over the impact of the investigation on the community.

"It is probably going to reduce the confidence people have in the government," he said. "We're going to get a black eye out of this no matter what happens."

According to Hedlund, the village will be in for "another rocky year or two" if indictments are returned as a result of the investigation. "This would impede the progress in the village because they (village officials) are going to be spending their time staying out of trouble or getting out of trouble."

Gene Sackett, Wheeling park board member, said he had heard about the investigation six or eight weeks ago.

"We get a lot of people in the store and someone six to eight weeks ago made the statement that this was going to happen," he said. "If we hadn't heard rumors, I would have been surprised."

Sackett said he was hopeful the investigation would not turn up any wrongdoing by village officials.

"If there is nothing to it, nothing will happen," he said. "After all, it's only a subpoena. If it's not true, no one should be hurt."

Lillian Stiller, school board member, said she thought the news of the investigation would prompt people to become more active in village government.

"Now that the growing pains are over, we're kind of forgotten that we can't let down," she said. "Whether this is true or false, I think more people will become interested."

MRS. STILLER said she was not surprised by the investigation because there have been rumors of political corruption circulating for many years.

"I've heard bits and pieces for so long, you don't know what's fact and what's fiction," she said. "Most of it has been rumor."

Richard Calfo, president of the Wheeling Chamber of Commerce, said he was primarily concerned that the investigation would lead to indictments.

"I do know for a fact that the grand jury is making an investigation of every community," he said. "As it stands right now, my main concern will be if they develop anything that is worthy of prosecution."

Two active community residents said they were surprised to hear of the investigation. Richard Missing, candidate for trustee on the To Overall Progress Party in the April village election, said he had had no indication of wrongdoing by village officials.

"I was a little surprised to hear about it," Missing said. "I thought everything was pretty much above board in the village. If anything was wrong, they'd have done something about it before this."

Tony Altieri, former president of the Wheeling Jaycees, said he, too, was surprised by the investigation.

"I can only say I just hope the charges are not really founded," he said. "I've always heard what I would hope are unfounded accusations."

Several residents contacted at random expressed concern about the investigation. Mrs. Richard Chandler, 10 Cedar Dr., said she had heard rumors of "crooked politics" in Wheeling.

"I'm a little distrustful of the fact that I'm living in a village in which this is going on," she said. "I just hope it all comes to the top. There's nothing like having a little Watergate."

Mrs. Chandler said she thought the results of April's closely contested village election would have been different if news of the investigation had been available before voters went to the polls.

"I think if some of this had come out before, the banner would have waved in the other direction," she said.

MRS. CHARLES Brownfield, 326 Edgewood Dr., said she had heard of the investigation but had little comment. "Everything's a mess — the Watergate and all," she said.

Mrs. Robert Lemm, 952 Garden Ln., said she had not heard of the investigation, but was disturbed about alleged corruption in local government.

"I was aware of a very crooked government, and I think that's why we're going to be leaving the area," she said. "I hope they get everything that's coming to them."

Tiny Korean orphan finds love here

by JILL BETTNER

Little Amy Krisanne squeals with delightful laughter as her new daddy snuggles her playfully high above his head. Rosy-cheeked, happy, she looks like any child responding to love.

The response is immediate, not learned, but natural for all children — even this tiny Korean orphan who's finding love for the first time.

Amy has her first real home now with the Joe Schermer family, 693 MacArthur Dr., Buffalo Grove, halfway around the world from the Korean town where she was born six months ago.

IT WAS A LONG, rough trip for everybody.

Joe and Phyllis said when they decided a year ago to adopt an overseas orphan, they had no idea there was so much red tape involved.

The Holt Adoption Agency in Eugene, Ore., handled most of the arrangements. Mrs. Schermer said, along with the Illinois Department of Children and Family Services, who conducted a home study on the Schermers.

There were interviews at home, interviews downtown, applications to fill out, medical tests for the entire family and references to obtain from friends and relatives. The Schermers compiled all the information and then they waited — and waited.

"From the time we got the applications, the whole process took from a year ago June to August," Mrs. Schermer said. "After we turned it all in, we heard nothing for two months."

SHE WAITED as long as she could. Mrs. Schermer said, and finally called the Holt agency in October. The agency told her the information on the family and Amy was in the hands of the Immigration and Naturalization Service and it would probably be another three to five months before they would know anything.

To pass the time, Mrs. Schermer went to work as a secretary at Adlai Stevenson High School in Prairie View. The women there later gave her a baby shower and another group of neighbors also surprised her with gifts.

The five-month wait stretched to six and then to seven and the Schermers learned the immigration service had lost Amy's birth certificate and some other important papers.

"It was so frustrating," Joe said. "It was like hitting our heads against a brick wall."

Finally, the Schermers learned the last week in May that Amy would arrive at O'Hare Airport Friday, June 1.

THE FAMILY, that includes three of the Schermer's own children, was ecstatic to have the baby home at last, said

Mrs. Schermer, but Amy spent only two nights with them. It was then learned that she had to go to the hospital to be treated for rickets, a vitamin D deficiency disease.

Amy spent 10 days in the hospital, but she's healthy now and home to stay.

"She just fits in beautifully," Mrs. Schermer said. "We couldn't ask for a better baby."

Mrs. Schermer is anxious to be the friend and confidant she didn't have to other couples interested in adopting overseas children.

"IF ANYBODY wants help, perhaps I could give them a few shortcuts," she said. "I know I would have appreciated just having somebody to talk to about it."

The couple agreed that despite the frustrations in getting Amy, they'd go through it all again.

"It's all worth it," Mrs. Schermer said. "It requires a lot of patience and there were a few tears shed in between time, too. You think it will never happen, but it does."

The Schermers feel giving Amy a home is their way of helping someone who needs them.

"We always wanted to do something for somebody and this seemed a good way," Mrs. Schermer said. They will go

No charges yet in tri-fatality on tollroad

Charges had not been filed as of late yesterday in a triple-fatality auto accident on the Northwest Tollway near Higgins and Oakton roads. The accident occurred at 1 a.m. yesterday.

Illinois State Police said Robert Lilley, 28, of 1125 Perth Dr., Schaumburg, was traveling westbound about 1 a.m. when he lost control of the car and crossed the median strip, striking an eastbound car head-on.

Killed in the eastbound car were Anthony Wilson, 29, of Island Lake, Beverly Mackson, 27, and Ralph Peters, 39, both of Chicago. All were dead on arrival at Northwest Community Hospital.

Lilley was admitted to Northwest Community Hospital with face cuts and leg injuries.

According to an Elk Grove Village Police Department report, Lilley walked away from the accident and was found dazed, in the Hyatt Chalet Motel, 1920 E. Higgins Rd.

According to the report, Lilley said he had been boating on Lake Michigan with friends and then went to a party. He said he did not remember what happened in the accident and kept asking if anyone had been hurt, police said.

A spokesman for the state police department said an investigation was under way, but there was no indication what charges, if any, would be filed.

Qualified residents needed for vacant village positions

Wheeling officials are seeking qualified residents to fill several vacancies on village commissions, some of which have been open more than a year.

Trustee Al Lang said his committee has interviewed some applicants for the important positions on the zoning board and plan commission. He said, however, most of those interviewed did not appear qualified to sit on these boards which are responsible for recommendations on building and zoning in the village.

THE SEATS ON the zoning board and plan commission have been vacant more than a year, because of the resignations of Douglas Cargill, who held both posts.

Lang said these two positions have not been filled because of the April 17 village election. "When it came near time for the election, we tried to hold off until after the election," he said.

The trustee said that if the village board had appointed new commissioners, it might have resulted in charges that the board was politically packing the commissions.

Likewise, Lang said he held off recommending appointments to the newly created environmental commission because of the election campaigning. "I didn't want to start on anything until after the election," he said.

LANG SAID HE is now seeking three qualified residents to serve on the environmental commission, which will conduct studies and make recommendations on various local pollution problems.

The trustee said his committee will begin interviewing applicants for all commissions in early July. He said he is now waiting to hear from the various commission members to find out when their terms expire and if they will serve again.

Lang has also proposed changing the terms of the commissioners to run from July 1 to June 30, instead of the present May 1 to April 30. He said this will take the politics out of appointments to the commissions, since the village elections in April will be over and a new board elected.

According to Lang, the delay in finding residents to sit on the plan commission and zoning board has caused some difficulties for these advisory bodies.

Herb Lortz, chairman of the plan commission, said the vacancy on his board has made it more difficult to get enough members present for a quorum.

Lang noted, however, there was no requirement in the village ordinances that all seats on a commission be filled. He said the vacancy merely caused inconveniences for the various advisory boards.

Peter Guttilla says 'it was political'

Wheeling police chief traced to 1962 Sheriff Dept. firings

by ROGER CAPETTINI
Copyright 1973, by Fairchild Publications, The Herald

Wheeling Police Chief Peter Guttilla was fired from the Cook County Sheriff's Police Department during a 1962 housecleaning by reform Sheriff Richard Ogilvie in a district where open gambling was notorious.

Herald reporters learned of the firing while investigating, for the past six months, alleged political corruption in the village. Much of the information uncovered by Herald reporters has been turned over to investigators from the U.S. attorney's office, which currently is conducting a federal grand jury probe of suspected extortion by village officials against housing developers.

Guttilla, reportedly a one-time precinct captain for former Wheeling Township Democratic Committee Chairman James Stavros, denied his firing was connected in any way with gambling investigations or the lack of them. He said about 95 per cent of the division under Democratic Sheriff Frank Sain was fired by the incoming Republicans for political reasons. No official charges of misconduct nor any criminal charges ever were filed against Guttilla.

GUTTILLA ALSO said he believes there was more gambling in the district under the Ogilvie administration than when he was with the department. Moreover, he said, his job was administrative and he was not involved in any investigations. He said the policemen at the substation made arrests whenever they found violations and the gambling never was "cleaned up" by Ogilvie's men.

"Just because I'm Italian, does that mean I'm connected to the Mafia?" he asked. "I'm clean. They can investigate all they want. They've investigated me before and have come up with nothing," he added. "If I was Irish or Polish no one would say a word."

Guttilla, who was appointed to the rank of captain in the Wheeling department last June and then named chief in February, 1973, was fired from the sheriff's department in 1962 by the reform administration of then-Sheriff Richard Ogilvie.

For much of the 10 years prior to his appointment in Wheeling, Guttilla was employed as a road equipment operator for two governmental agencies, once apparently holding two jobs at the same time.

Guttilla, who lives in Glenview, was appointed as a captain in the Wheeling Police Department after Chief M. O. Horcher became ill. In February, 1973, Guttilla was named chief and Horcher, who was not able to resume full duty as chief, was named administrative assistant to Village Mgr. George Passoli. Passoli has been served with a subpoena from the U.S. Attorney's office directing him to produce certain village records pertinent to the investigation of alleged extortion by village officials against housing developers.

Guttilla, 54, joined the county sheriff's police June 7, 1947, as a patrolman and was promoted to plainclothes detective in December, 1961, under then Sheriff Frank Sain. As a detective he was assigned to Division 1 headquarters on Milwaukee Avenue in Niles during the time illegal gambling operated virtually in the open.

WHEN OGILVIE assumed office Dec. 3, 1962, Ogilvie named Arthur Bilek as chief of the sheriff's police and James McGuire was named commander of Division 1.

McGuire, now director of the police academy for the Chicago Police Department, told Herald reporters he was "surprised" to learn of Guttilla's appointment in Wheeling. "I'm surprised they would name him chief," he said. "I thought they were building a good department up there."

Bilek, past director of the Illinois Law Enforcement Commission, said Guttilla was one of 157 policemen he fired when he took office, including about 85 per cent of the Division 1 staff.

Bilek said he fired the men because, "There had been open gambling in the division prior to the administration of Sheriff Ogilvie, especially in several spots along Milwaukee Avenue, close to the sheriff's headquarters."

Bilek said he gathered all the evidence he could to determine why gambling joints were operating openly within three blocks of the sheriff's substation, yet never were raided by the police.

The former sheriff's chief said the Villa Venice restaurant was in its heyday at that time and celebrities such as Frank Sinatra, Dean Martin and Sammy Davis Jr., were appearing at the posh night spot. He said a shuttle service was being operated between the Villa Venice and several other clubs, including the Quonset Hut at River Road and Milwaukee Avenue and the Dam Inn at Hintz and River roads.

Bilek said many sheriff's policemen and forest preserve rangers moonlighted at the Villa Venice, parking cars and directing traffic. "How they were unable to determine there was gambling three blocks away was hard for me to imagine," Bilek said. He said he can no longer remember if there were any specific allegations against Guttilla, however.

McGUIRE SAID Guttilla was fired because of "admittedly hearsay evidence" he and Bilek obtained against Guttilla, who McGuire said "seemed as if he ran the detective operation at the Niles station." McGuire added, however, "Our sources were pretty reliable."

McGuire said the sheriff's police department was the least effective law enforcement operation in the state at the time Sheriff Ogilvie took office.

Other area police sources have told Herald investigators Guttilla once worked at the Niles substation for Jack Johnson when Johnson was in charge of investigations there. Johnson later became warden of the Cook County Jail.

Guttilla was fired from the sheriff's department less than a month after Ogilvie took the oath of office. Four months later, county payroll records show, he was hired by the county as a road repairman in the county highway department at $295 every two weeks. His employment, coincidentally, started two months after Jimmy Stavros began working for the same department.

From that point, the careers of Stavros and Guttilla follow each other quite closely.

STAVROS, COUNTY records show, worked for the highway department from February 1963 to December 1966. At the same time, however, he is listed in county records as having worked for them. County Board Pres. Seymour Simon. Stavros supposedly worked for Simon from 1962 to December, 1966, apparently collecting two county paychecks at the same time.

After 11 months with the highway department, Guttilla switched jobs in March, 1964, also becoming an investigator for Simon.

When Simon, a maverick Democrat, was dumped by the party powers from renomination in 1966, both Stavros and Guttilla left the employ of the county.

Guttilla next appeared on the public payroll in November 1967 when he rejoined the county highway department as a road equipment operator, paid $40 a day. He remained in that position, working his way up to $42.40 a day until he resigned April 3, 1969, according to county payroll records.

According to State of Illinois payroll records, however, Guttilla joined the state highway department March 24, 1969, a job he held until June 16, 1972, when he resigned to become the only captain in the Wheeling police department.

C&NW riders delayed by stall

A stalled engine slowed or halted commuter runs on the Chicago and North Western Rwy. during rush hour last night.

The engine stalled at the Mount Prospect station, causing several other trains to stop behind it about 5:30 p.m. Appreciation swept through the 5:20 express when it began backing up, as passengers mentally recalled the tragic Illinois Central commuter train crash in Chicago this year.

Farther up the line, persons waiting for commuter passengers were surprised to see trains arriving out of order as they switched to other tracks to get around the stalled engine.

The mishap in Mount Prospect caused further problems as crossings were blocked by the stalled train. Traffic backed up heavily on Ite. 83, and motorists had even more problems because of a malfunctioning traffic light at Northwest Highway and Central Road. That light was out about 25 minutes.

Bar car riders who claimed the train was late may have met with unbelieving spouses last night — but it was true. The usually reliable C&NW was delayed.

Are they poultry?

Homing pigeons to be homeless?

by JEANNETTE DE WYZE

Frank Link loves his pigeons. And now that a conflict has developed between Link and Wheeling officials over the birds, he says he'll fight to keep them.

The Links have around 50 pigeons, housed in a coop behind their house at 642 Merle Ln. The birds are racing-homing pigeons, specially bred for speed. Although the Link family and their birds have been in Wheeling for over a year, they had no trouble until a Wheeling Building Department enforcement officer appeared at their door a few weeks ago, telling them that they would have to get rid of the pigeons.

Link talked to other people in the department and wrote a letter which was read before the village board, explaining why he feels he should be allowed to keep the birds. But as of yet, the Links have heard nothing further from the village.

"So we're going to just sit here and wait until we get a ticket or something. And then we'll take it to court and fight if we have to," Sue Link said.

APPARENTLY the village is still deciding the question. At the center of the controversy is a Wheeling ordinance which prohibits residents from keeping poultry on their property. The ordinance mentions chickens but not pigeons. While the building department officials say that they feel the ordinance extends to pigeons, the Links argue that it shouldn't.

Village officials also say that they've had complaints from the Link's neighbors about the birds, but the Links say that no one has ever complained to them.

Out by the wooden frame which serves as the birds' coop, a soft cooing signals the pigeons' presence. Mrs. Link said that's the only noise the birds make.

"I don't see how that could bother anyone," she said.

LINK BUILT the coop for the birds in November, to replace a smaller coop. While he's still working on improving the new coop, he said he's temporarily stopped working on it until he gets the word from the village.

"I've put over $1,000 into those two coops, and I don't want to keep pouring money into them if we're going to have to move," he said.

Link's fascination with pigeons began when he was a little boy. His father brought home a common city pigeon for him one day and he's had pigeons ever since. When the Link family moved out to Arizona several years ago they took all their pigeons with them and when they moved back to the Chicago area — back came the pigeons.

The pigeons play a big role in the Link's life. Mrs. Link said she's learned how to take care of the birds since she and her husband were married.

"I MARRIED a husband and a flock of birds," she jokes. Even the two children in the family seem to love them.

Both Link and his wife tend to the birds. Besides feeding them and cleaning the coop, the pigeons which race must also be exercised twice a day.

For exercise the pigeons are let out of their coop to fly. The Links say that the flock will fly around the area of the house and then return to the backyard when they are tired.

"Sometimes they'll fly around for an hour or so when they're feeling good," Mr. Link said.

The pigeons are also taken out two or three times a week to be trained for racing. Training begins before the birds can even fly. According to Mrs. Link the young birds are let out in the back yard so they can become familiar with the area.

Then when the birds are five to six weeks old they are taken short distances away from the house. The birds which don't return home are ignored and the remaining birds are taken out for increasingly longer distances.

A good bird can fly home from distances of more than 600 miles, Link said.

LINK, ALONG with around 30 other members of a Palatine-based pigeon club, races his pigeons several times a year. All the pigeons in a given race are taken to some spot equidistant from the homes of all the members entered in the race. The members then log in the time when the birds return on a special racing clock.

When a bird consistently wins races, its owner will use it for breeding and then auction it off for further breeding. Link said all the members of the club donate the money from auctioned birds to provide scholarships for student nurses. The Links said they can't understand why anyone would complain about the birds. "They won't land on anybody's roof but our own. They know where to go. They're very intelligent birds," Mrs. Link said. The birds even return home when her husband shakes their feed can and whistles for them.

"THEY KNOW his whistle," she said. Link said the birds also know when they're being properly treated. They won't return home unless handled gently and carefully.

Explaining why he likes the birds, Link said, "Maybe I like the way they return home."

If the village absolutely orders him to get rid of the birds, Link will ask the judge to have the birds locked up long enough for him to sell his home and move. But the Links intend to fight the village before they do that.

"I just can't live without them. They're like a part of the family," he says.

SUE LINK HOLDS one of the many racing pigeons owned by Sue and her husband. The Links keep the pigeons in a coop which they fixed up in the backyard of their Wheeling home. The village has told the Links that they must get rid of the birds because of a village ordinance prohibiting poultry. The Links say that they will fight to keep the birds.

Mosquito forecast bugs two experts

It's been an all right year, so far as mosquitoes go. But mosquito watchers differ in their forecasts of what to expect this weekend.

John L. Clarke Jr., vice president of Clarke Outdoor Spraying Co. Inc., La Grange, predicts the pesky insects will be out in full force over the weekend.

However, Wilbur R. Mitchell, director of the Northwest Mosquito Abatement District, Wheeling, says the mosquitoes shouldn't be bad at all.

Both authorities base their outlooks on the heavy storm which hit the Northwest suburban area June 16, but draw opposite conclusions from the storm and ensuing weather conditions.

CLARKE SAYS the storm produced the usual effect of carrying mosquito eggs to bodies of standing water, where, with the subsequent two weeks of warm weather, they're about ready to hatch.

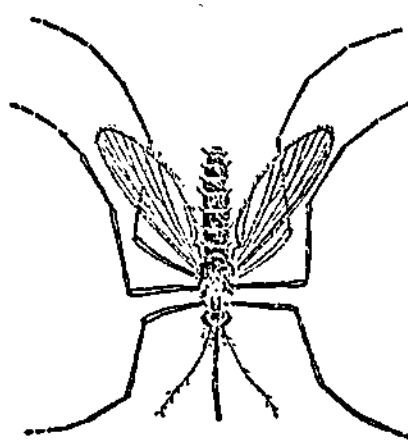

Mitchell, on the other hand, says "good

Mitchell, whose abatement district handles anti-mosquito efforts throughout the Northwest suburbs, said regular checks on the mosquito population showed "a drastic drop" in the past two days.

ORIGINAL estimates for a bumper crop of mosquitoes this season, he said, have not been fulfilled. "So far, it's shaping up real good," he added.

Clarke, whose firm has been engaged for mosquito control by 120 Chicago area communities, including Palatine, Hoffman Estates and Schaumburg, says, "At this point, the mosquito population throughout the Chicago area is very light. We are more or less between broods."

However, "we still have eggs out there," he added. "How bad it will be depends on the rainfall. The potential is still there."

Clarke gave the following yardstick for anticipating mosquito population: Half an inch of rainfall, followed by warm temperatures, produces "mild annoyance" two weeks later. An inch and a half to two inches of rainfall produces "high annoyance." Four inches of rainfall — "extreme annoyance."

"everyday"

Interest. That's pretty special. But there's more. That daily interest is compounded daily. Paid quarterly. So you can deposit when you like. Withdraw when you need to. Never lose interest provided you maintain $25 or more in your account at the end of the quarter. In fact, you even gain. All money deposited by the 10th earns from the 1st ... If you leave it on deposit until the end of the calendar quarter. Sounds interesting? But what does "everyday" interest mean in dollars and cents? It means that our 5% passbook interest actually earns more when compounded every day the First Federal Savings way. It makes a difference.

Schools budget OK expected

The Dist. 21 school board tonight is expected to approve the tentative $11,550,210 budget for the 1973-74 fiscal year.

The proposed budget is up about $300,000 over last year's total cash outlay of $11,250,210.

Any district residents objecting to items in the budget may express their feelings at tonight's public hearing. If there is no opposition, it is likely the board will officially pass the budget.

An executive session to discuss personnel is the first item on the agenda of the meeting that is scheduled to begin at 8 p.m. in the board room of the Dist. 21 administration building, 909 W. Dundee Rd. in Wheeling.

The board is also to consider bids for the installation of acoustical tile and plaster repair at Whitman School. The work is part of a $75,000 renovation program that has already begun at the district's oldest building.

OTHER ITEMS on the agenda include:

—General bids for shades, towel service, gym dividers, stage curtains, machinery, music equipment, heating at Twain School, a Howard Roto-Tiller, paint and a delivery van and maintenance truck.

—Attendance boundaries for the two new schools in the district, Washington Irving School in Buffalo Grove and Robert Louis Stevenson School in Wheeling.

—Proposal for air conditioning Holmes Junior High School in Wheeling.

—Annual budget for the Northwest Educational Cooperative.

—Building fund for a center for the education of trainable mentally handicapped children.

—Salaries for school principals for 1973-74.

to court in about six months to legally adopt Amy.

THE COUPLE first considered adopting an American child, but they learned that there is a two or three-year waiting list of couples who want babies.

Negotiating team to weigh pay proposals

Negotiating teams of the Prospect Heights Dist. 21 school board and the Prospect Heights Education Association (PHEA) will exchange salary proposals at a special meeting June 13.

Members of both teams will meet at 7:30 p.m. July 10 to discuss the proposals and to tentatively approve the procedural part of the teachers' 1973-74 contract.

Several items — including a teacher's grievance procedure, faculty advisory committees, binding arbitration and a no-strike clause — were dropped by both sides.

"We found out we wouldn't be doing anything by applying for an American child," Joe said, "so we decided to try to get an overseas child who otherwise wouldn't have a chance."

This isn't the first time the Schermers have shared their home with an orphaned child. They have had four foster children at different times in the past nine years.

The last foster child was a baby, Mrs. Schermer said, who was very hard for the family to give up. That's when the couple began discussing a permanent adoption.

"We're all so happy to have Amy," she said, "when we had our own kids, Joe and I shared in the happiness, but with Amy the happiness is multiplied because they can share it too."

12 gallons of milk a week, for instance...

Raising 13 kids isn't easy or cheap

by DIANE STEFANOS

When you're feeding 13 kids, 10 pounds of potatoes doesn't go very far. In fact, it's the minimum amount required for any one meal.

So attests Mrs. Ann O'Malley of 137 Bradley Ln., Hoffman Estates, the mother of 13.

In a large house upon which extra rooms have been added, each room rings with the sounds of television, radios and records, and the cries of human laughter and play a good part of 24 hours each day.

Raising 13 children hasn't been and still is not an easy job. It's not an inexpensive operation, and it definitely is a job that requires considerable amounts of humor, patience and firmly established inter-cooperation, according to the O'Malleys.

"Raising a family however small or big requires the same elements of love and understanding and discipline. There have been unique rewards from raising a big family like ours, but also it has had its drawbacks when it came to expenses," said Mrs. O'Malley.

Everyone's struggling with rising food and clothing costs. Considering the weekly grocery bill, the only way to get around the high prices is to do like other mothers do — compare prices closely and shop in large quantities on sale items.

"WE BUY ABOUT six gallons of milk twice a week and at least 10 dozen oranges a week."

One refrigerator stores the milk and fruit while another stationed in the family's kitchen houses other refrigerated goods. With a large freezer, sale turkeys and pot roasts are bought in quantities.

"I sadly hauled out our last turkey the other day. I bought it on sale for 39 cents a pound. Now they are all 69 cents a pound and they only last a meal," she said.

As with most economically minded women, Mrs. O'Malley has been using more macaroni and rice in her meals. Her family indulges in a special concoction of Lipton noodle soup with lots of rice added to offer a "filling and inexpensive meal in itself."

"In fact, my kids love soup. They eat that and Campbell's soups for every meal of the day. Most of them eat soup and cream cheese on rye bread for breakfast, and soup and sandwiches again for lunch," said the mother of 13.

Although it's more economical that way, conventional breakfasts of eggs, bacon and toast are Sunday morning traditions.

Leftovers are unheard of in the O'Malley house. Friday night is snack night for the younger children who are allowed soft drinks and special treats of candy and Fritos.

"The older children who are over 16 pay for their own snacks and soft drinks. They even pay for their own clothes and personal items because they have jobs. The ones out of high school pay for room and board. They realize the expenses we incur as they grow older," according to Mr. and Mrs. O'Malley.

HAVING COME from a large family, the couple now married 27 years, had originally wanted one or two children.

"Now we're playing chauffeur to nearly 13 of them with our family station wagon. Some of the older kids have cars but they're at work all day," said Mrs. O'Malley.

The children range from 8 to 22 years of age, each a year apart from the other except for two children who are two years apart because, "that was the year we bought a house instead," says Mrs. O'Malley.

"Large families were in fashion when we were planning ours. We were avid Catholics and didn't believe in birth control."

"I don't especially believe in that now, but I did believe I was doing the right thing at the time and I never regret having all of my children although I wouldn't recommend large families," she said.

There certainly is no lack of communication in this house between parents and children. With everyone constantly coming and going with jobs and play, everyone still has a chance to talk and be with one another in the evenings and over the weekends, and then it's "tell it like it is," said Mrs. O'Malley.

Where most of the children double up in the bedrooms, each is responsible for keeping his room clean, although Mrs. O'Malley does all of the general housework, washing, ironing and dishwashing.

"LIKE ANY parent, you love each one of your children and you care for them and bring them up the best way you can. Now that a lot of my kids are older, they'll soon be moving out of the house and sharing apartments," she said.

Their 21-year-old son John is the only married child and the only O'Malley youth living outside of the house.

"I want to see them all get out on their own. It teaches them a certain sense of responsibility. My husband and I are both looking forward to the day when they all grow up and go out on their own. That's when we'll have the opportunity to do some of the things we've never been able to do."

Her husband, Donald, partner in an Elk Grove Village carpet contracting firm, is still able to spend a lot of time with his family.

It was always a unique situation. Going out to the movies or dinner or carnivals always drew comments like "Are they all yours?" or "oh, my goodness, look at all the children."

Like a federal program, everything in the O'Malley house has occurred in distinct "phases."

"When we only had the first half-dozen kids, we did a lot of things together. But in the next five or six years following, after the rest of our children were born, it was really hard," said Mrs. O'Malley.

THIS PHASE two was marked by "too many small children and not enough big ones to help" as she puts it. But, now that many of the children are older, "we're into an easier Phase III."

The days of dressing 13 little ones right down the row with mittens and boots in the winter are gone for Mr. and Mrs. O'Malley. Days of going out and having 13 children trailing along are also a part of their past. But a constant watch on the unnecessary use of water and electricity, and a time limit on a constant use of the telephone and bathroom are still in order.

And discipline? Well, with 13 small children, a wrong move warranted a quick and easy "well directed crack in the rear," says Mrs. O'Malley.

"You give them advice, teach them and love them. After that, their personality and the individual they are has a lot to do with what kind of person that child will be. The parent, school and church can only do so much."

Suddenly laughter and conversation come in the backdoor of the house, the telephone rings and a sudden burst of radio music fills the air. Is it a raid, a charge? No, it's just one third of the O'Malley clan returning home from an afternoon at the pool. Rest time's over mom, and dad, at least until tomorrow afternoon for a few hours.

State Senate approves bill establishing school board

A bill creating a state board of education, amended to guarantee representation for suburban Cook County, was passed by the Illinois Senate yesterday and returned to the House of Representatives for approval of the amendment.

Passed earlier in the House, the bill provides for an appointed board, which would in turn appoint a state superintendent of public instruction. In the form approved by the House, the bill provides simply that eight of the 17 members of the board would be from Cook County.

The Senate amendment specifies that four of the eight Cook County members must be from the suburbs, and four from Chicago.

THE BILL IS a long-awaited piece of could be approved by the legislature in its fall session. The constitutional amendment would be presented to the voters in the election of November, 1974.

The bill approved by the Senate yesterday calls for appointment of the 17-member board by the governor, with the advice and consent of the Senate and prohibits more than nine members of the same political party.

House panel OKs fieldhouse for Harper

House panel OKs Harper fieldhouse

A $1.6 million appropriation for construction of a new fieldhouse at Harper College won unanimous approval of the Appropriations Committee of the Illinois House of Representatives late Tuesday.

The committee action seemed to assure passage of the bill which will enable the college board to proceed rapidly with replacement of the structure destroyed by fire earlier this month.

The emergency appropriation so far has enjoyed clear sailing through the efforts of Northwest suburban legislators. Assuming that the House passes the measure before adjournment Saturday night, it will face the final hurdle of winning the signature of Gov. Daniel Walker.

The bill would provide 75 per cent of the cost of building a new physical education and classroom structure which had been contemplated for construction at a later date until the fire leveled the former horse barn which the college was using as temporary quarters. The remaining cost of the $2.2 million structure will be provided from insurance funds on the former building.

THE BILL was introduced as an emergency measure in the Senate last week by Sen. David J. Regner, R-Mount Prospect, who rushed it through a committee hearing and won Senate approval in only two days.

Rep. Eugenia S. Chapman, D-Arlington Heights, with the help of Rep. Donald Totten, R-Hoffman Estates, is sponsoring the bill in the House.

Mrs. Chapman reported yesterday that the bill has had strong bipartisan support of other area legislators, notably that of Rep. Virginia Macdonald, R-Arlington Heights, who stayed on through a 15-hour session of the Appropriations Committee Wednesday night to lend her support to the bill.

The legislation was approved by the committee shortly before midnight after committee members heard what Mrs. Chapman described as "very effective"

Bill shutting loophole in ethics act approved

Bill shutting loophole in ethics act approved

A bill designed to close a loophole in the Illinois Ethics Act, sponsored by Rep. Aaron Jaffe, D-Skokie, was passed recently by the Illinois Senate and forwarded to Gov. Daniel Walker.

The bill would require any person earning more than $20,000 from one or more governmental sources to disclose his or her annual income and financial worth.

Under the present law, only those government employees earning $20,000 or more in one job are required to make financial disclosures.

However, Jaffe pointed out, "a government employee could hold two or even more positions at salaries of just less than $20,000" without coming under the jurisdiction of the ethics law.

The House also passed last week a Jaffe measure which would forbid revealing mental health records of patients except to the director of the hospital, the state's attorney or the circuit court in which the mental condition of an individual may be in question.

State Sen. John A. Graham legislation that fills a gap to be created with the expiration of the term of elected school superintendent Michael Bakalis. The 1970 constitution abolishes the elective status of the office with the end of Bakalis' term.

It is the only bill of seven dealing with a state board of education, however, which still has a chance for passage in this session, and appeared to be assured of becoming law.

Rival measures introduced in the current session provided for an elected board.

The bill has been supported by Sen. Bradley M. Glass, R-Northfield, a member of the Senate Education Committee, and Rep. Eugenia S. Chapman, D-Arlington Heights, a member of the House Education Committee.

WHILE THE BILL provides for appointment of a superintendent of public instruction, there is a move afoot in the legislature to amend the new constitution to preserve that office as an elective post.

Sponsored in the House by Rep. John Friedland, R-South Elgin, and in the Senate by Sen. John A. Graham, R-Barrington, the proposed constitutional amendment has been temporarily shelved over a legal technicality, but Freeze-induced food shortages soon?

by United Press International
High farm product prices and controlled retail food prices are squeezing the farmer and the result may be some food shortages before the end of the summer, agricultural experts said Wednesday.

Poultry men in Georgia and Texas are killing baby chickens because they say it costs too much to raise them; a major producer of cereals may have to curtail production because of high costs, and apricot growers in California are asking $33 a ton more on their fruit than anyone is willing to pay.

THE MAIN REASON given by most agricultural experts for a possible shortage is that prices of raw goods are uncontrolled under President Nixon's Freeze II while processed food prices are frozen.

"There are growing signs the price freeze has become counterproductive," said Alan Grant, president of the 61,000-member California Farm Bureau. "The harvest of California fruits and vegetables is threatened due to a breakdown in contact talks between buyer and seller."

The economic crunch apparently will be felt in selected areas and certain products. For example, officials said the record wheat harvest in Kansas probably won't be affected.

Hog and beef raisers were reportedly in good shape and Gene Futrell, an Iowa

State University farm economist, said sharp increases in feed and production costs in these areas probably won't last long once production of soybean meal and corn increases later this year.

BUT POULTRY FARMERS across the nation have killed baby chicks to keep from taking what one Georgia farmer said would be financial losses of "three times as much" by raising them.

George Allen, executive director of the Southeastern Poultry and Egg Association which produces 85 per cent of the nation's broilers and 40 per cent of table eggs, said the price "of poultry is frozen at below production costs and the price of feed just keeps climbing."

R. J. Hodges, of the Texas Extension Service at College Station, said it would be early autumn before a new soybean crop could relieve a feed shortage in the poultry business. Even then, he said, he doubted feed prices would go down very much since "the demand is so far ahead of the supply."

OFFICIALS in the agricultural rich San Joaquin Valley in California, said there would be shortages of raisins and apricots, mostly due to bad weather this spring.

Jack King, spokesman for the California Farm Bureau, said indecision in the market is surfacing with tomatoes, potatoes and carrots but the worst situation was with peaches, apricots and pears. He said apricot growers were asking $147.50 a ton but processors said they could only pay $112 a ton because they cannot pass on the increase. King called it a "stand-off."

Raymond Jennison, president of the American Corn Millers Federation, said about a third of the nation's corn milling capacity has been closed because of the freeze and one major breakfast food manufacturer, Kellogg Co., was considering curtailing some of its production.

Tax returns to towns higher

Cook County government and municipalities within the county have received $12,711,261.47 in state income tax payments since July 1, 1972, the Illinois Department of Local Government Affairs has announced.

The figures, based on state income tax payments received by the county and municipalities through May, are more than $1 million higher than last year's total tax payments.

Cook County government received $662,039.84 so far this fiscal year, the report showed, with $94,668.18 paid in May. The Village of Arlington Heights has received $86,928.86 in May to bring the fiscal year total for the village to $332,734.09.

Buffalo Grove collected $10,661.67 in May for a fiscal year total of $121,623.24.

Des Plaines revenue for May was $71,897.67 with the total so far this year reaching $444,745.09.

Elk Grove Village received $20,714.35 in May and $171,824.11 so far this fiscal year.

Hoffman Estates collected $35,813.80 in May for a fiscal year total of $247,699.31.

Inverness received $2,102.70 in May with a total so far this year of $13,006.87.

Mount Prospect collected $56,810.70 in May for a fiscal year total of $351,420.03.

Palatine collected $36,184.35 in May to bring its total to $205,870.65.

Rolling Meadows received $24,089.40 in May for a total of $149,012.36.

Schaumburg received $31,597.09 for a fiscal year total of $105,453.48.

Wheeling revenue for May was $18,522.39 for a total of $114,575.89.

Citizens' Action Program

Pressure group fights the big guys: City Hall, Edison and U.S. Steel

by KAREN BLECHA
• More than 300 protesters disrupting a meeting of the Illinois House of Representatives shouting "Tax freeze — tax freeze now!"

• A coalition of senior citizens barging into an AT&T stockholders meeting demanding to present their request for a 50 per cent reduction in senior citizens' telephone bills.

• A group of 100 persons standing outside the office of the president of Jewel Companies Inc., waiting to talk with him about the outrageous high cost of groceries and to demand a rollback in prices.

This is the Citizens' Action Program (CAP) — its people, its tactics. Its members are housewives, senior citizens, middle-class blacks, factory workers, businessmen. Its tactics, somewhere between bomb-throwing and letter-writing campaigns, are based on the philosophy that people in power must answer to the public if the public pays the bills.

CAP, a Chicago-based grassroots pressure group, wants to extend its power base to the Northwest suburbs. CAP has signed up 70 new members in Elk Grove Village and this week members are going door-to-door to solicit members and donations in Des Plaines. Unfamiliar with CAP's activities, many suburbanites are reluctant to join the group because they don't know what CAP is or how it operates.

CAP is "amateurish, irresponsible, militant, radical" according to its foes, who include Chicago Mayor Richard Daley and Cook County Assessor P. J. Culleton. CAP is acclaimed as "a model for the whole country" by its friends. Mary Lou Wolff, 45-year-old CAP president and mother of nine, describes her group:

"We are the middle class who are working and paying taxes and we cannot be effective until we organize. We are not poor enough to get government subsidies. We are not rich enough to get favors."

Although membership is hard to pinpoint, Mrs. Wolff estimates there are more than 1,500 persons like herself who got tired of writing letters and turned to CAP for some answers. Members range in age from 20 to 80; in opinion from conservative to liberal. Like Mrs. Wolff, who joined CAP during her fight against the proposed Crosstown Expressway, most of CAP's members get involved over an issue close to home. Then they stay on for other fights.

"CAP appeals to ordinary people who are considered the silent majority, the church goers," Mrs. Wolff said. "Most people were suspicious at first wondering if CAP was too radical for them. Their attitudes changed when they themselves tried to do something about their problems but found they weren't getting anywhere. Direct action then came very naturally. In the end, all we have to fight with is ourselves."

Mrs. Wolff said CAP is usually called in to fight an issue by some local group, such as a civic association. If CAP leaders feel the problem is wide-spread, they send out one of CAP's three paid organizers trained in the art of community organization. The organizer meets with the group to consider the problem and ways to fight it. The organizer will only present alternatives, Mrs. Wolff said; the group itself decides on techniques. She said CAP also tries to provide any research that is needed.

MEMBERS OF CAP jokingly say the group was formed by the Illinois Commerce Commission. In January, 1970 an group of Chicagoans formed to protest a rate increase Commonwealth Edison was seeking from the commission. The group protested the increase, demanding that Edison first take steps towards pollution control before the commerce commission considered any rate increase.

The group then organized as the Campaign Against Pollution (CAP) under leaders like Paul Booth, labor economist and a member of Students for a Democratic Society (SDS) before it took a violent turn, and Father Leonard Duhl. Both men, who are still in CAP, follow the methods of community organizer Saul Alinsky who said that "power is not only what you have but what the enemy thinks you have."

CAP leaders, like Mrs. Wolff, and CAP organizers have attended the Industrial Areas Foundation founded by Alinsky to teach the art of community organizing.

CAP changed its name to Citizens Action Program when the group got involved in issues other than pollution. CAP now works with its own members and members of other organizations, in coalitions on tax reform, lakefront preservation, senior citizens, anti-Crosstown and anti-deterioration.

The anti-deterioration coalition, formed just this year, is fighting red-lining, the practice of starving a community of real estate financing. According to CAP, many Chicago savings and loans associations are refusing home improvement loans to their depositors and are instead filtering the mortgage money out into the suburbs.

CAP is a non-profit corporation but not the tax deductible kind. The group subsists primarily on donations to pay for the printing of its newsletter and its small paid staff of researchers and organizers. Officers are volunteers and most of CAP's legal aid is donated.

The three-year-old citizens' group claims a variety of victories:

trial Areas Foundation founded by Alinsky to teach the art of community organizing.

CAP changed its name to Citizens Action Program when the group got involved in issues other than pollution. CAP now works with its own members and members of other organizations, in coalitions on tax reform, lakefront preservation, senior citizens, anti-Crosstown and anti-deterioration.

- Saving 5 per cent on property tax bills in 1970-72 by forcing the reassessment of five race tracks, four steel mills, and several Loop office buildings.

"We have no set rules," Mrs. Wolff said. "We have to first analyze an issue, talk to the people and do what's in their experience. We choose the technique that suits the situation. If you completely cave into the rules all the time you'd be boxed in. We're not saying you should break every rule, but you must change some of them because you're not going to get anywhere if you don't."

"I am always asked why I have to bring 100 people with me all the time. It's very effective. If someone knows 100 people are outside and interested, that puts on the pressure."

CAP OFFICIALS say they do not intend to push their way into the suburbs. CAP canvassers stopped soliciting in Elk Grove Village last week when they discovered that Elk Grove residents were not really interested in CAP or fighting unfair tax assessments. The canvass stopped after the group contacted about two-thirds of village residents, getting about $680 in contributions and 70 new members. CAP's goal had been $1,500 in donations and 300 members.

"There was not much interest in the tax issue," said Joe Perilli, director of CAP's membership drive. "People listened to us but they didn't really know about CAP. Most of the people wanted to see what CAP had done in Elk Grove Village. They said 'show me.'"

PERILLI SAID NO resident indicated CAP was too radical for the suburbs.

CAP should have better luck in Des Plaines, according to Perilli.

"Des Plaines is an older community, more established," he said. "The people there have more familiarity with the issues in Chicago. We understand they have some problems with the MSD there and with flooding of the Des Plaines River."

Des Plaines residents are fighting to block construction of an MSD sewage treatment plant at Elmhurst Road and Oakton Street.

After Des Plaines, CAP will move on to Glenview and Northbrook. The group has petitioned to solicit in Glencoe and Skokie and is waiting for an answer. CAP officials hope that suburbanites will take more of an interest in CAP than they did in Elk Grove Village, but if they don't, Mrs. Wolff won't be too disappointed.

"We're mainly doing a fund-raising job, and trying to find out what people are interested in," she said. "I think the response really depends on the suburb. CAP does middle-class organizing. Maybe some suburbs are too affluent."

Operation Nutrition will go on minus federal aid

Operation Nutrition, a supplemental food program for needy families, will not be discontinued at the end of August when the federal grant for the program expires.

The Northwest Opportunity Center in Rolling Meadows, which administers the program in the area, will fund the program locally after August if additional federal funding is not forthcoming, said Bruce Newton, center director.

The Office of Economic Opportunity grant for the program was terminated last year after two years but reinstated for an additional year under pressure. The extension expires Aug. 31 and another extension is not expected.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture, which supplies surplus food for the program, is considering taking over the administration and funding of the program but a decision is not expected until the fall, said Newton.

NEWTON SAID the Northwest Opportunity Center has given the program a high priority for local funding because it provides commodities to needy families, does not duplicate other services in the area and can be best administered regionally.

"We see this as an extremely important program. It is the best contact program we have with low-income families. It is often the first program people are aware of and with that contact we can pick up on the other needs of the family," said Newton.

Between 250 and 300 families in the Northwest suburbs receive supplemental food through Operation Nutrition. The value of the food received last year was approximately $23,000. Pre- and post-natal women and children under six falling within the federal poverty guidelines are eligible for Operation Nutrition.

Food for the program is provided and transported to a central warehouse in Chicago by the U.S. Department of Agriculture at no cost. The food is then taken to the local OEO offices participating in the program where it is packaged for distribution.

The cost of administering the program at the Northwest Opportunity Center last year was $14,000. This included $6,000 for the center's share of the rental of the warehouse and administrative costs and $8,000 for an additional staff person to administer the program at the center. Transportation of the food from the central warehouse to the center is provided free by I.L.B. Fuller of Palatine.

Amateur dog show slated for Friday

The Mount Prospect Plaza Merchants Association, will sponsor a childrens amateur dog show tomorrow at 10:30 a.m., in the grassy area behind Frederick Jewellers. The plaza is located at Rand and Central Roads.

Dogs may be entered in the following categories: largest, smallest, best trick, best groomed, best costume and special puppy class. Entry blanks are available at all plaza stores. There is no entry fee.

All infants must be accompanied by an adult. Dogs must be on leash and kept under control at all times. Each child may enter as many categories as he or she chooses. Entry blanks must be turned in on the day of the show, at least 15 minutes prior to show time.

Ribbons and prizes will be awarded in each category. Each participant will receive a book on how to feed, care for, and train your dog, plus dog show information, and other participation awards.

Antitrust action is likely against 8 petroleum firms

by LEA TONKIN

"ONE-SIDED EMOTION of hysterical environmentalists has us over the barrel of energy shortages."

This familiar refrain has been repeated many times by the petroleum, natural gas and coal industries and friends. But this week's disclosure by the Federal Trade Commission's (FTC) director of the bureau of competition, James T. Halverson, indicates the emotion may not have been lopsided after all.

Halverson, testifying Wednesday in Washington before a Senate Judiciary subcommittee, said the FTC is ready to recommend antitrust action against eight of the country's largest petroleum companies. A commission investigation indicates that the anticompetitive structure of the oil industry has helped create the gasoline "shortage," he said.

The same industry may have engaged in a conspiracy to make it appear that there is a shortage of natural gas, he added.

Citing the shutdowns of independent gasoline stations, Halverson said, "Our investigation suggests that activities by major oil companies have had significant anticompetitive effects. Their control of refinery capacity and pipelines also constitutes a significant competitive problem in the oil industry and contributes to the independents' present difficulty."

AND WE'RE ALSO hearing doubts on the natural gas shortage expressed by U.S. Sen. Philip Hart, D-Mich., chairman of the Senate antitrust committee. He wraps up three days of hearings into the claimed shortage of natural gas reserves today in Washington. It seems that a Federal Power Commission aide destroyed the information supplied by major natural gas suppliers when it was originally requested by Hart.

This follows the recent disclosure by the administration that it bases most of its calculations on the gasoline shortage on information supplied by the oil industry.

All this contrasts with the picture of reasonableness presented by oil companies in their advertisements calling for an end to environmental hangups in their development projects.

REASON VERSUS hysteria is a theme echoed by U.S. Rep. Philip Crane, R-12th. "Obviously everyone wants clean air to breathe and clean water to drink," he said in a recent speech on energy problems. "But the pressure from those who are concerned with saving the environment at all costs has resulted in many instances of overreaction by governmental bodies." He singled out environmentalist opposition to the Trans-

Alaska pipeline, nuclear power generators, offshore oil and gas drilling, strip mining, locations of oil refineries and demands for "100 per cent pollution-free cars and 100 per cent clean water."

What is needed to balance energy demands and environmental considerations are time, money and technology, Crane says. Hopefully, this week's Washington hearings will also bring out another necessary ingredient: the facts.

SHAWNEE NATIONAL Forest has scheduled a meeting on Saturday to hear opinions on the five alternatives for scenic corridor development. The session will be at 1 p.m. in the Marion High School Auditorium in Marion, Ill. Another public meeting is slated for fall in the Springfield area.

One plan calls for construction of a two-lane limited access road running from the Mississippi River to the Ohio River north of Illinois 146, connecting several recreation areas. Other alternatives include maintaining the status quo and a combination of road and trail systems.

A BATTLE TO ban catching and killing of whales for commercial purposes was lost this week. Despite a technical committee approval of a U.S. backed ban, the International Whaling commission this week turned down the proposal by an 8-5 vote.

CALLING FOR AN end to the ban on leaf burning in Illinois a bill was approved by the House this week and sent to Gov. Daniel Walker for his consideration. The measure has amendments in line with a similar Senate bill. It would prohibit the state Pollution Control Board from making any regulation to curb leaf burning.

A GREAT FRESH-WATER inland sea is dying. And the killers of Lake Michigan are still at large.

"Long ago we used to speak of the four horsemen — Death, Famine, Pestilence and Disease," comments Jacob DuMelle of the Illinois Pollution Control Board. "In Lake Michigan's case we can name at least as many . . . The killers of Lake Michigan are Neglect, Stupidity, Greed and Apathy."

"Because of neglect we failed to install secondary treatment at many sewage plants around the lake," said DuMelle in a recent Chicago speech before the Lake Michigan Water Analysts. Although the use of secondary treatment in the activated sludge process has been known since 1914, the failure to install the necessary equipment for this process at many plants along the lakeshore has added a tremendous volume of phosphorus to the lake.

Stupidity is reflected in our inability to come up with accurate readings on the rainfall and dustfall contribution of phosphorus to the lake, said DuMelle. Because of greed, some industries have not curtailed dumping wastes into the lake until they are forced to do so by the government.

"Because of apathy, you and I don't do as much as we should to protect the lake," DuMelle continued. "We are professionals in special fields but we are also highly informed, knowledgeable citizens whose counsel will be listened to by public officials."

Here are some actions listed by DuMelle which could help to save Lake Michigan.

- First, prod federal officials to quantify phosphorus inputs and all algae microorganisms in the lake.

- Write to the President to release impounded funds for sewage treatment plant construction.

- Support increased diversion of water from Lake Michigan.

This would improve the quality of the water in the Chicago canals, the Chicago, Des Plaines and Illinois rivers and would take more phosphorus out of the lake, DuMelle said.

- Encourage industries of use "best practicable technology" in their treatment of discharges into the lake. They will be required to do so anyway by federal law.

- Begin long-term monitoring of significant eutrophication (growth of nutrients) at facilities along the lake shore. From this data scientists can determine cause and effect relationships — the deterioration of Lake Erie, for example.

- Finally, communicate with decision-makers. Call or write legislators and join the citizen action groups concerned with the Lake Michigan water quality.

Suburban residents 'not complying' with pollution rules

by ANNE SLAVICEK

Back in 1967, ecology-minded citizens applauded federal legislation which promised cleaner lakes and streams. But with a December, 1973 deadline for implementation of the pollution restrictions fast approaching, many Northwest suburban residents are balking at cooperating with the new requirements.

That's what officials of several North and Northwest suburban communities told Metropolitan Sanitary District officials at a meeting Tuesday night in Northbrook.

Residents don't want to comply with MSD and village requirements that they disconnect gutter downspouts and stormwater sump pumps from sanitary sewer lines, local officials said.

"People get violent with each other, they're angry because there's no place to put the water and with sump pumps emptying into their back yards, they get a slough hole in their yard they can't mow," David Creamer, Mount Prospect public works director, said.

MEANWHILE, the sanitary district is reminding the villages it is only enforcing its ordinance to meet requirements which have come down from the state and federal government.

If the local communities fail to enforce the requirement to keep stormwater out of sanitary sewers, federal and state grants for any flood control or pollution project within MSD boundaries may be halted until the problems are corrected, the MSD warns.

Without federal funds and with an ever-increasing amount of sewage for the MSD to treat each day, the problem could get critical, Sanitary District Trustee James C. Kirie told the local municipal officials.

"If the sanitary district went out of business tomorrow you'd drown in three days in your own sewage," Kirie told the municipal leaders.

The problem the municipalities must shoulder in enforcing the ban against illegal connections to sanitary sewers is complicated by the legal question of a village's right to enter a private home to inspect for illegal connections.

"We'd need a search warrant for each house and two village attorneys working on it fulltime," Palatine Village Manager Berton G. Braun told Kirie and members of an MSD blue ribbon committee.

"You're placing on the municipalities the problem of enforcing the unenforceable," Braun said.

ARLINGTON HEIGHTS Village Engineer Alan Sander told of his village's experience in trying to enforce storm sump pump disconnections in one area of the village.

Although residents had four feet of sanitary sewage effluent in their basement, and although the village officials met with the homeowners at a subdivision association meeting, the program had little success, he said.

"It worked for one week, until we told the first person his sump pump was illegally connected. The first day we got into 30 homes, the second day three homes, then on the third day we didn't get into any," Sander said.

He challenged MSD officials who said 90 per cent of the homeowners would cooperate voluntarily with the program. In some cases, he said, the disconnection would cost a homeowner $1,500 to $2,000. "It would take one hell of a program to sell those people," he said.

The officials also complained about the impossibility of meeting a Jan. 1, 1974 deadline for completion of inspections and work to correct the illegal hookups.

Ayoub Talhami, a civil engineer from the MSD's local sewers division, pointed out if a town gets started on the program it can ask for an additional year to complete the work.

TALHAMIA ADMITTED that since only a few municipalities have complied with the ordinance and begun work, most communities are six months behind.

Talhami suggested the local officials get started on visual inspections for illegal downspouts, problems with manholes which cause storm sewage to leak into the sanitary system, and other problems such as yard drains, areaway drains and cross connections which can be seen without entering a private home. "Those you can see, those can be corrected inexpensively and they could solve 60 to 80 per cent of the problem. You are looking for the elephants instead of the ants," Talhami said.

The Palatine village manager said that the MSD ordinance doesn't give villages the option to just work on the easily-accomplished parts and ignore illegal sump pump connections.

In response to questions whether the MSD law department would help communities fight in court to enforce the ordinance against individual residents, Talhami said his answer would be a "qualified yes."

DICK HARWOOD, a developer who serves on the blue ribbon committee, told the municipal officials that unless the problems are corrected, industry will be kept out of communities and new housing developments will be halted because of limited sewer capacity.

"The district will assist you, but you can't expect the district to do the job for you," Harwood told the municipal leaders.

To compound the problem even further, an Illinois Environmental Protection Agency representative at the meeting told the local officials it will be several years before any federal funds for a sewer rehabilitation program would be made available to help local towns pay for work of repairing breaks in major sewer lines which cause infiltration of ground water into the sanitary sewers.

Among the communities represented at the meeting were Arlington Heights, Buffalo Grove, Wheeling, Schaumburg, Des Plaines, Mount Prospect, Hanover Park, Palatine, Elk Grove Village and Rolling Meadows.

Election board is 'deadlocked'

For more than two years, Republicans and Democrats in the Illinois General Assembly have been quibbling over the makeup of a state Board of Elections.

The 1970 state constitution decreed the creation of the board to "have general supervision over the administration of the registration and election laws throughout the state."

According to the constitution, "The General Assembly by law shall determine the size, manner of selection and compensation of the board."

That, it would seem, should be no insurmountable task for a group of public officials schooled and experienced in the intricacies of elections.

But in their perpetual quest for partisan advantage, the Republican and Democratic election experts in the legislature have been unable since January of 1971 to arrive at a reasonable determination of the size and manner of selection of such a board.

There have been proposals for a five-member board, a seven-member board, a nine-member board. There have been suggestions that the nominees be selected by legislative leaders of both parties, by the governor, by an independent citizens' committee.

But a major stumbling block has been the question of who should have the tie-breaking vote on matters which are deadlocked before the Board of Elections.

Last week, with a proclamation of bipartisan support, the Senate

Elections Committee unveiled a masterful piece of legislation which the committee said provides an answer to that dilemma. Sponsored by four suburban Republicans, Sen. John Nimrod of Skokie; Sen. John Graham of Barrington (co-chairman of the state Election Laws Study Commission); Sen. David J. Regner of Mount Prospect; and Sen. Terrel E. Clarke of Western Springs, the bill presented a new concept in resolving deadlocks.

It is a unique and an imaginative approach. And, to us, it makes no sense at all.

Rather than an odd-numbered membership which might conceivably result in some partisan advantage to one side or another, the Senate would give us a four-member board, each member being one of two nominees of the four party leaders in the House and the Senate.

In the unlikely event these four highly partisan officials should find themselves split along party lines on some controversial issue, the Senate has arrived at a method of settling the dispute which is dazzling in its simplicity.

In case of a tie vote, the Illinois Board of Elections would simply call in its hired clerk and instruct him to draw from a hat the name of one of the four overseers of the democratic process.

That member then would be deprived of his vote, and — Presto! — no more deadlock.

It would matter not one whit the merit of his position.

Police state seeds?

It was a minor incident and no far-reaching conclusions should be drawn from the unfortunate experience of a demonstrator during a presidential visit to Pekin, Ill., the other day.

First, police and Secret Service agents made the man take his "Impeach Nixon" sign off its pole, then ordered him to remove it from its plywood backing.

When he gave them an argument, they arrested him and, according to a wire service report, hustled him around a corner where an officer clamped metal keys over his mouth, jerking his head back and forcing him to his knees. Then he was handcuffed.

If it was a case of "police brutality," or just the use of somewhat more physical force than might have been necessary, it is not the first time it has happened in this country, or anywhere else and won't be the last. And after all, presidents have been known to be assassinated during public appearances.

Even if we grant this, however, and even if we dismiss the demonstrator as some sort of kook or a troublemaker, there was also the unpleasant sight of a policeman with a rifle shouting from the top of a nearby building: "No pictures!"

What would he have done if some news photographer had taken a picture — shot him?

Yes, the demonstrator in Pekin may have been a kook, just as drug pushers may be "the very vermin of humanity," as Myles J. Ambrose, a federal drug abuse official, said recently in defense of lawmen who have mistakenly broken into homes of innocent citizens and terrorized them on more than one occasion.

But we could do worse than recall a statement attributed to an anti-Nazi martyr whose name at one time was well-known in America:

"In Germany they first came for the Communists, and I didn't speak up because I wasn't a Communist. Then they came for the Jews and I didn't speak up because I wasn't a Jew. Then they came for the trade unionists, and I didn't speak up because I wasn't a trade unionist. Then they came for the Catholics, and I didn't speak up because I was a Protestant. Then they came for me — and by that time no one was left to speak up."

For Communists or Jews or trade unionists, substitute kooks or demonstrators or "vermin" and Pastor Martin Niemöller's words strike uncomfortably close to home today.

And the winner is...

'Rookie' Walker still in game

by BOB LAHEY
Political Editor

Gov. Daniel Walker told members of the National Football League Players' Association last week the score of the "game" in Springfield: Walker 7, Legislature 7 — Mayor Daley 14.

That's a nice self-deprecating way to get a chuckle. It's also one of the subtle touches by which Walker continues to succeed in preserving his sometimes wavering image for the spectators in the stand.

There he is, out there on the political field, the rookie quarterback trying to lead his battered team to victory over not one, but two experienced opponents. (Never mind that one is a mediocrity; everybody knows the other is the Super-bowl champ.)

Walker had just picked himself up from another loss, the resounding passage of the so-called "tax relief" bill ushered through the General Assembly by what appears more and more to be an unholy alliance between Republican House Speaker W. Robert Blair of Park Forest and Mayor Daley.

The defeat was the more resounding, because the governor had laid his prestige on the line by making not one, but two appearances before Democratic caucuses of House members to implore their support against the Blair tax relief plan.

Walker asked defeat of the Blair program — which would remove one-half cent of the sales tax Downtown while retaining it in the six-county Chicago metropolitan area to finance a mass transit district — because the bill provides a tax break for only one-third of the people of the state.

He asked them instead to support his tax relief plan of a $10 per capita exemption on the income tax, and his mass transit financing program based on utility, gasoline and parking taxes in the six-county area.

So the House went back after Walker's pleas and not only passed Blair's bill, but gave it 107 votes — the exact number needed to override a veto, should Walker exercise it.

Following that action, Walker supporters estimated that the governor's tax-relief plan has "no chance" for passage. Where does that leave the governor?

It leaves him in the position of being able to sign a bill which will provide the major financing for the mass transit system and give sales tax relief to Downtown, because a veto would be futile, and the bill was forced upon him by Republicans and Daley Democrats.

It leaves him in the position of blaming Republicans and Daley Democrats for scuttling his plan which would have given tax relief to all residents of the state.

It leaves him in the position of pointing an accusing finger at suburban Republicans for joining the "Blair-Daley alliance" — only representatives Eugene F. Schlickman of Arlington Heights, John Friedland of South Elgin and Richard A. Walsh of Oak Park, among Northwest suburban Republicans, voted against the Blair plan.

It leaves him with an added measure of respect among House Democrats, who were impressed by his eloquence when he came to their caucus to ask their help.

It leaves him with an added weapon in his fight for voter support in electing his legislative candidates next year.

It also leaves him at third down with a lot of yardage to go.

But it is early in the game, and the rookie quarterback is showing no signs of panic.

Fence post letters to the editor

For shame, Dorothy!

Dear Ms. Meyer:
In reference to your column in the Herald on June 5 entitled "Linear Idiots confront meters."

I am appalled of your ignorance on your article. You should be ashamed to display of how little you know about the metric system. All I can say is that you just like to talk for the sake of talk. I would like to go into detail to correct your errors, but I think it imperative that you make a study of the metric system and then write articles to correct the false impressions that you have given your readers. Perhaps you should start off with a copy of the Arithmetic Teacher, issued by the National Council of Teachers of Mathematics, April and May issues, 1973.

I believe in freedom of opinion — but your article shows that you are destitute of knowledge and it is a shame that you voice your opinion on knowledge you are not capable of properly expressing. Finally, learn about the metric system and don't be an ignoramus — you have made an excellent display of same.

Defends park district

We have noted with concern two letters printed in Fencepost this past week complaining about the inadequate registration procedures for the Buffalo Grove summer park programs. The procedures were inadequate for the number of people who turned out to register, and many residents took advantage of their places in line to register for families other than their own, which had the effect of letting other people break into line ahead of one.

What has perhaps been overlooked, however, is the fact that the summer park program apparently is attractive enough to have drawn an overflow crowd in unprecedented numbers. If the park district erred, it was in not anticipating how popular its programs would appear to the village's rapidly multiplying population.

People may be justified in complaining about the inefficiency of the registration procedure. However, we feel that to condemn the park board and staff members in toto, without recognizing their achievements and the benefits of their efforts in behalf of the village, is manifestly unfair. It is this issue to which we speak.

As 12-year residents of Buffalo Grove, we have seen the village grow in many ways. One such avenue of growth has been the park program, which was virtually non-existent in 1961, and now obviously is popular beyond anyone's wildest expectations, because of the quality and magnitude of the park district's offerings. Growth in any area is often painful and uneven, and not every step is positive. In any growth process, mistakes are made. Next year the park district, learning from the mistakes of this year, should be prepared with additional staff and more streamlined procedures to facilitate the registration process, as indicated in a recent Herald article quoting park board member Mrs. Dede Armstrong.

We can understand why some "newcomers" who have come from older established communities, with older, established, more sophisticated park programs and techniques, may be frustrated by our park district's growing pains. However, we "natives," with the perspective of 12 years, are profoundly grateful for the efforts and achievements of the Buffalo Grove Park District's dedicated elected officials, paid staff members, and volunteers. We go on record offering thanks and continued support.

A conflict?

Recently you had an article in the Des Plaines Herald regarding Mr. Ewald Swanson, Alderman on the south side of Des Plaines and also on the zoning commission would be working for the real estate firm of William Kunkle.

In view of his position with the city I believe it highly impractical and a conflict of interest could result if Mr. Swanson remains on the Zoning commission.

I believe that should Mr. Swanson work for the Kunkle Real Estate Firm, he should be ousted from his political position.

Mount Prospect mayor criticized

Dear Mount Prospect Mayor Robert Teichert:

My wife and I consider your letter of June 5 to be a blatant insult to our intelligence. You refer, of course, to our signatures on the petition legally filed with the village board of Mount Prospect on May 15, on the question of the "Colony Project."

We summarize our negative reaction to your letter as follows:

1. Your insinuation that we were not given the opportunity to read and digest the so-called cover sheet (and its inherent questions) to this petition is patently false. With the great majority of citizens who affix their signatures to a document of this ilk, we fully examine and consider before concluding that our convictions are in concert with the conditions espoused by the document.

While your letter states that you "called on several persons who signed this petition and discovered they had never seen the cover sheet," the press tells us that you queried a grand total of four signers from a group approaching 1,000. Or about 4/100ths of one per cent. In my naïveté I would like to think that the mayor of a community this size has the competence to know that grossly insufficient sampling is incapable of meaning an ounce of anything.

2. No matter how one cuts it, there is a large degree of intimidation implied by a brush letter sent to citizens under the official Village of Mount Prospect letterhead. With royal splendor you sweep away the legitimate efficacy of the original petition, legally presented, and write us that you have decided it invalid until the original petitioners do repetition by contacting the village clerk.

Your letter gives every indication of a public official employing a scare tactic on that citizenry who choose to question him in some functional responsibility of his public office; if so, we find it reprehensible. Probably most of your original petitioners are thoroughly frightened into wondering how they will be treated by their village in routine matters or in time of need if they become identified as critics or objectors in a particular issue. If predictably the village clerk receives few calls, do not feel vindicated. You have not gained an intellectual victory — only that conquest provided through alarm generated by disapproval beneath an official letterhead.

3. While we could reach for the constitutional issue involved in the right to freely petition a government; or wonder if really just your political feathers are ruffled as some suggest; perhaps even question the taxpayer cost with the hundreds of letters you sent; we prefer to confine ourselves to a final issue not identified in your letter.

What about the facts surrounding the "Colony Project"? That is the intrinsic question, not peripheral matters as meaningless as how many petitioners read the cover sheet. It remains that almost 1,000 citizens signed the petition, a significant number of taxpayers and your constituents.

We wish your letter had covered such matters as the Colony effect on water supply. On the tax base as more mammoth (even high-rise) multi-unit developments become part of our community and school districts. On an already overburdened municipal park system. On the responsibilities of our fine police and fire departments. Your response would have been appreciated to all sorts of allegations now current regarding the village board and mayor over-ruling the planning board on the Colony issue. What rationale did you chaps employ when you made that decision.

Without quoting President Truman about the heat in the kitchen, Mr. Mayor, how about some clear, hard facts about your position on Colony. You have let this thing get so far out of control — your peacemaking letter contributed — that it is high time you provide some direct answers instead of skirmishes over nothing.

Business Today

by HOWARD A. TYNER
POZNAN, Poland — C. W. Craychee settled his lanky frame gingerly against a table display filled out with an array of pressure gauges, engine valves, threaded pipes and diagrams. He folded his arms and slowly exhaled a cloud of cigarette smoke.
"Before it was just too much trouble," he said. "To do business in this part of the world meant a lot of woo. But now I can sell to the Poles as easily as to a company in New York. And the Poles are interested, so here I am."
Craychee is president of a Franklin Park manufacturing company, one of dozens of American firms which exhibited this year for the first time at Poznan's International Trade Fair.
SPURRED BY improved East-West relations and subsequent easing of restrictions on trade with Communist countries, these Yankee traders have descended in droves in the past 18 months on Poland and its East European neighbors — buying, selling and lending like never before.
Nowhere was the new attitude more in evidence than at the Poznan fairgrounds.
More than 4,000 companies from 30 countries exhibit at the two-part fair, making it one of the largest of its kind in the world.
You can see everything from Polish railway cars to British sewing machines and Soviet mining equipment, resting indoors and outdoors around the grounds like huge animals in a zoo.

DESPITE THE SIZE and scope of the Poznan fair, the American exhibit here for the past 10 years has been organized by the U.S. Information Agency and was, according to one official, "more a display of America than its products."
This year — with East-West trade booming — all that changed.
The Department of Commerce took over organization of the U.S. Pavilion. It dropped all non-commercial displays and more than tripled the number of participating companies to 51. No more hand outs, no more free copies of "Amerika" magazine for the hordes of Poles who wandered through the building.
Instead of seminars on industrial design, there were three 30-ton road building vehicles shipped from Chicago. There were computers, control systems, electronics.
"IN SHORT IT was a hard-sell approach," Harold Bromel, the Commerce Department's top man here, said. "This year we sold goods, not ideas."
One effect of the new U.S. attitude has been a drop in attendance at the American pavilion, crowded with stands and heavy machinery.
"It's just not as interesting to the average guy," one businessman said. "But the experts are pleased, and they are the ones we are trying to reach. They decide what to buy and what not to buy."

Crisis looms on Martha's Vineyard

Gas stations starting to feel pinch

by United Press International
More gasoline stations than ever have reduced operating hours or restricted sales because there's not enough fuel to go around, but the American Automobile Association says the scarcity varies greatly from area to area around the nation.
A Massachusetts legislator said unless Martha's Vineyard gets more gasoline the tourist island may go bankrupt.
During the summer vacation months most Americans will be concerned with the supply of gasoline for their cars, and the AAA, in its weekly report on filling stations nationwide, said less than half — 46 per cent — are operating normally.
The AAA said the Northeast — especially New York and New Jersey — had the fewest number of gasoline stations affected by the fuel shortage. The greatest number of stations curtailing sales and service are in the Pacific Northwest.
THE AAA SAID 47 per cent of the station's in its survey have reduced operating hours, 10 per cent have imposed limits on sales, and 4 per cent are literally out of gas.
The AAA report said 73 per cent of the filling stations in the Northeast were operating normally, but on Martha's Vineyard, a tourist island off Cape Cod, Massachusetts Rep. Terrence P. McCarty said gas stations must have fuel quick, lest the entire island go bankrupt.

Lucky Stores Inc.

William H. Dyer Jr., chairman of the board of Lucky Stores, Inc., told the merchandising analysts group in New York recently that Lucky's sales will be about $2.25 billion in 1973 and earnings would exceed those of 1972.
Dyer said that in 1972 "Food store sales were $1.451 billion with pre-tax earnings of $33.4 million, department store sales (including concession and food sales) were $450 million with pre-tax earnings of $11.9 million, and fabric store sales were $91 million with pre-tax earnings of $9.2 million. All other operations had sales of $61 million with pre-tax earnings of $2.9 million. Annual sales per square foot of selling area in 1972 were: food stores $280, department stores $177, and fabric stores $53." Lucky expects to open about 64 stores and close 16 in 1973. This will add about 1.9 million square feet to the company's retail store space.

A. O. Smith Corp.

For the second straight quarter, A.O. Smith Corp. will report record sales and earnings, L. B. Smith, chairman and chief executive officer, said recently. Smith estimated profits in the second quarter would be between $6,160,000 and $6,635,000, or from $1.25 to $1.35 a share. In the second quarter of 1972, the company earned $3,469,000, or 70 cents a share. Sales in the second quarter were estimated at $163 million, compared with $129 million last year. For the first six months of 1973, Smith estimated earnings at between $10,695,000 and $11,190,000, or from $2.17 to $2.27 a share. In the first six months of 1972, the company earned $7,632,000, or $1.55 a share. Sales in the first six months will be in the neighborhood of $319 million, compared with $254.6 million last year, Smith said.

General Dynamics

General Dynamics Corp. reported its first quarter earnings for 1973 were 44 per cent higher than those for last year.
David S. Lewis, chairman and chief executive of the company, said earnings for three months ending March 31 were $7,366,000 on sales of $398,033,000. These figures compare with 1972 first quarter earnings of $5,104,000 on sales of $382,288,000.

Penney to open service center

J. C. Penney Co. Inc. will open a product service center on Keystone Court in Rolling Meadows Monday.
The new facility will offer maintenance and repair services for the lines of home entertainment and major appliance equipment Penney sells.
Previously, product service in the Chicago metropolitan area was jobbed out to independent service contractors. Under the new system, company-trained technicians will perform service functions, working out of the new product service center.
Nationally, the company will have converted about 82 per cent of its servicing to J. C. Penney owned and operated service departments.
The Rolling Meadows center will repair portable products carried in and will also serve as a headquarters for servicemen performing repairs in customers' homes. Emphasis is on home electronic entertainment equipment, major household appliances and lawn care equipment sold in the metropolitan area's 14 J. C. Penney stores.
Manager of the new facility is Howard Garrison, formerly of the company's regional headquarters in suburban Chicago. Garrison joined the company in 1965. He lives at 1108 West Miner in Arlington Heights.
All the technicians are specially retrained in specific repair procedures for J. C. Penney merchandise. Periodic seminars will be held in the product service center's training facilities to upgrade servicemen's knowledge as new models and products are introduced to the market.

Natural gas 'shortage' a fake, expert declares

An expert on utilities and utility rates has contended that "the severity of the so-called natural gas shortage probably is more imagined than real."

Theodore E. Maynard, president and founder of National Utility Service, Inc., New York-based international utility rate consulting organization, said that it is becoming increasingly apparent to him that "the scare tactics of the natural gas interests are self-serving and designed to result in legislation favoring the industry."

Maynard said he agreed with some members of a Senate subcommittee investigating the situation who indicated that "the natural gas shortage is being caused by gross fraud involving major gas producers and the Federal Power Commission."

THE RATE SPECIALIST noted that the recent staff report by the FPC, released last month and entitled "1973 Natural Gas Reserve Study," concluded that the natural gas shortage is even more serious than the industry itself had estimated, and recommended deregulation as necessary to insure an adequate supply of heating fuel.
"However," Maynard declared, "Senate subcommittee sources disclosed that 99 per cent of those who worked on the FPC staff report actually were employees of the big oil and gas companies and most of the others were FPC people who came from the industry."

These sources further indicated that the conclusion of the report was based on a sampling of 150 gas fields — 100 of them old established fields where reserves are fairly well known. However, out of the thousands of new natural gas fields, only 50 were checked.

ON THE BASIS of information supplied by independent natural gas producers, Maynard said, subcommittee investigators asserted that the FPC and the major producers "suppressed parts of the study which used company-to-company records showing gas reserves were too great to justify deregulation."

The Senate subcommittee slated three days of hearings, to be completed today, to determine if the evidence warrants charges of conspiracy in restraint of trade. The focus of the hearings will be the FPC staff report.

National Utility Service represents some 15,000 industrial and commercial users of electricity, gas and water worldwide, including more than 530 of the Fortune Magazine "Double 500 Directory" of the nation's largest corporations.

SUMMER IS THE peak moving season, and about 540 families are expected to move in and out of Elk Grove Village alone in June, July and August. Many families

Suburbanites on the move — and he helps them do it

by CAROL RHYNE

The dishes are packed in cartons, clothes hang in wardrobe boxes and the suitcases are loaded in the family car. A moving van is waiting in the driveway for a young boy's teddy bear and a girl's prized doll collection. Tomorrow the telephone will be disconnected and the electricity turned off.

Good-byes to old friends and hellos to new neighbors are familiar scenes in the suburbs — about 1,200 families move in and out of a community each year, just in Elk Grove Village, for example.

Veteran mover Al Shumski, sales manager of Hollander Storage and Moving Co. in the village, says 45 per cent of these moves are made during the summer months when children are out of school.

Although it has been shown that moving during the school year has no adverse effect on children, many families still want to move during June, July and August, Shumski said. He said that on the contrary, school is a good place to meet people and it is sometimes easier for a child to find new playmates during the school year.

SHUMSKI SAYS children are easy to move, but occasionally they are concerned about their possessions. "I've had children come to me and tell me to be careful with their toys. I show them how their things will be sent and have them write on the box, 'This is Billy's, and you must be careful with it.'"

"Women are easier to move than men, if generalities can be made, because women have a feel for it," Shumski said. "Women know about chaos and spilt milk — and are not upset if something happens. A man becomes more emotinally involved in directing the move and telling how things should be done."

In Shumski's 25 years in the business, he has moved almost everything from valuable paintings to big game collections. About the only things his company doesn't handle are valuable papers (like deeds), jewelry and stamp and coin collections. Shumski says these things should be transported by the individual.

One of Shumski's most unusual customers was a big game hunter who wanted his trophy collection moved. "We moved stuffed leopards, a buffalo head and a gorilla for him," Shumski said. When asked how do you move a gorilla, Shumski said, "Very carefully." (Actually the gorilla was packed upright, bolted to the bottom of a large box. Packing material was omitted so as not to mat the fur.)

PETS ALSO ARE transported by Hollander, but not along with the refrigerator and sofa. Shumski said when a family wants its pet moved, the company makes arrangements for a veterinarian to pick up the animal, take it to a kennel, give it any necessary shots and take the pet to the airport.

The Northwest suburbs are a very mobile area because of all the companies in metropolitan Chicago that transfer people all around the world, Shumski said.

Where do the families go when they leave the community? Shumski says most families move to the West or Southeast, with retired persons heading for Florida, California and Arizona.

OF THE PEOPLE who leave the area, about 10 per cent will go overseas, Shumski notes. Many of these families are bound for England, France, Italy or Switzerland.

Shumski said Hollander has its own customs warehouse where goods to be shipped overseas can be inventoried and goods coming back can be inspected. Households heading for Europe are shipped out through the Port of Chicago for direct delivery to European ports.

"Women are easier to move than men, if generalities can be made, because women have a feel for it."

Moving is a $1.7 billion a year industry that employs about two million people. Shumski says most moves are for business, and the spur-of-the-moment movers are in the minority. "The romantics hitch up trailers like nomads, but there aren't too many like those around today."

Moving -- American pastime for businessmen

by HELEN HENNESSY

NEW YORK — "Even if you moved every two years or so because of your husband's career, there's a terrible feeling of uncertainty at some point in the process of being relocated," is the way one corporate wife summed up her feelings.

In 11 years of marriage she and her husband moved nine times until he switched employers. Today they and their two sons are settled into a northern New Jersey suburb where they have lived for a record three years.

"You can deal with all the details of the move, which luckily will take your mind off the reality of what moving per se means to each of you, but eventually you have to face reality. What about schools in the new location? Will there be a Little League within walking distance of your new home so you aren't trapped into being a chauffeur mother? Is there a chapter of League of Women Voters or the American Association of University Women — instant sources of friends? These are all big, real questions and until they're all answered and neatly in place you find yourself feeling very uncertain about life in general."

Each year, according to the U. S. Census Bureau, some 10 million American families change residences. Of these more than a million families move from one city to another because the head of the household is transferred by his company to a more responsible position. American industry spends more than $1 billion a year to transfer key personnel. And in some cases corporations face hidden costs far exceeding the reimbursement of moving expenses when transferees encounter real estate problems.

THESE HIDDEN costs can arise from employee dissatisfaction, distraction, refusal to transfer or even occasional resignations to escape a change. The forced sale of one home and purchase of another are matters not to be taken lightly.

Even under the most favorable circumstances, a transferred family can also face a substantial financial loss if their previous residence fails to sell quickly. Adding to these traumatic factors is the possibility of having to carry two mortgages at the same time.

At least a partial solution to these problems exists today — through members of Inter-City Relocation Service. Ten leading real estate brokers serving 50 key residential markets in the U. S. organized the not-for-profit ICRS in 1960. They recognized the need for a coordinated, personalized relocation service that would help solve transferees' housing problems in both the old and new community — and at no obligation or cost to the transferee. Today, there are more than 600 members serving more than 6,000 cities and towns in the United States and abroad. Here's how it works.

An executive who is being transferred lists his present home with an ICRC member firm in his old community. As a leading broker in the community, this realtor is familiar with fair market value and general real estate trends and can promptly merchandise and sell the transferee's residence.

WHEN THE Inter-City member lists a transferee's home for sale, he obtains information on his client's preferences — whether the home must be new or old, size of family, number of bedrooms and bathrooms, special features desired, the kind and amount of furniture the family owns, type of neighborhood sought, church and school requirements, etc. These details are referred immediately to an Inter-City member in the destination community.

When the member at destination receives a referral, he is obligated to telephone the incoming client within 24 hours and establish contact. He then surveys available homes and matches the transferee's descriptions and photos of suitable properties to send to the family that intends the move together with key information about the new community. This not only provides the prospective residents a preliminary look at suitable homes but gives them a feeling of knowing someone in that community.

WHEN THEY are ready to visit their destination and inspect homes, the ICRC member in that area will serve as their guide.

An official of Thorsen Realtors, ICRC member in LaGrange, a western suburb of Chicago, recalled one such incident, where a transferee bought a home in a day or two on his first visit to a new community.

"A friend of mine who works for one of the major airlines and lived in Wilmette told me he was about to be transferred to Washington, D. C. We referred him to Hicks Realty, a member in Alexandria, Va. He and his family flew there on a Saturday morning and by Sunday afternoon they had bought a house in Alexandria." At the same time the Thorsen official referred the executive to another Inter-City member which listed his Wilmette residence, near Chicago, for sale.

"WITHIN A WEEK, the Wilmette house was sold," Burnette said. "We were able to work out closing dates for both transactions so there was no need for interim financing. From the time they knew they were going to move until they had bought and made a sale, only 12 days had elapsed."

Owen E. Hall, president of ICRC and a Birmingham, Mich., Real estate broker, acknowledged that both ends of a transaction are seldom concluded that rapidly. "But the incident does illustrate how members can help clients at both ends."

In the 12 years in which Inter-City has been in existence, there have been many occasions on which broker members have helped solve unusual problems in the course of handling thousands of more routine transactions.

One Realtor found the perfect home for a transferred family that had only one specific problem: their horse. Their new home has four bedrooms, 2½ baths, a double garage — and a much-needed pasture.

Wall-to-wall people tarnish Golden State's image

by JACK V. FOX

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — A few days after news stories and pictures of the February, 1971, earthquake in Los Angeles were printed on front pages around the world, a native Angeleno remarked:

"Well, thank God for an earthquake now and then. Otherwise everybody in the country would be out here."

The man could remember back to the 1920s when the mountains glistened in the clear air, the big red trolleys and not the freeways ran to the beaches, the tallest building was the 27-story City Hall and Beverly Hills was ranch country.

In the 1920s the mountains glistened in the clear air, and red trolleys, not freeways ran to the beaches.

THEN, OVER 50 years, over five decades, he watched the outsiders tumble in — the Okies from the dust bowl, the wildcaters smelling oil, the GIs who got a taste of the land of milk and honey in World War II and never forgot sailing to the Pacific under the Golden Gate.

The girls drawn by the myth of Lana Turner at Schwab's Drug Store, the farm workers flocking to the lush San Joaquin Valley, the men and women at the Monterey canneries, the land developers.

The old folks — from Nebraska or Iowa or Missouri or Kansas — hunting a serene place in the sun, the religious fanatics and just plain nuts. The hippies.

And finally the horde of aerospace workers attracted to high pay and glamor jobs until at the peak, one out of every 20 adults in California was tuned in on that one industry.

In 1920, California had 3.4 million people.

THE CLIMAX came in 1970, when the census showed that California had gone over the 20 million mark and replaced New York State as the most populous in the nation.

Even as that dubious eminence was reached, statistics showed that actually California had been undergoing a steady decline in migration into the state.

The total of "in-migrants" over those departing stood at 338,854 in the year 1962. But by 1970 it had shrunk to 40,430 — a ratio of 1 to 8.

The copper came this year when Conrad Jamison, a population expert with the Security Pacific National Bank, released figures showing that Los Angeles County — the center of it all — was losing population at the rate of 64,000 a year.

So it finally became evident that some of the glitter is going out of the Golden State.

The man who blessed an occasional earthquake as a deterrent may be getting his wish that outsiders stay out.

WHY THE TARNISH in California's allure? Is it a temporary phenomenon or is it permanent?

The answers to "why" are myriad. Earthquakes, smog, bumper to bumper traffic, a drug-crazed Manson "family," campus violence, the Watts riots. Yosemite fouled with campers.

No doubt they all enter in. But take earthquakes. The 1971 quake took 64 lives. And while being in the epicenter of a quake can be terrifying, logic dictates that the probability of death is far greater every year in a flood, tornado, hurricane or other disaster.

Take smog. New York's grit is far worse. Take Yosemite. California still is a land of unbelievable gratification in ocean, mountain and desert. The almost inescapable conclusion is that the principal reason is economic. Jobs.

... So it finally became evident that some of the glitter is going out of the Golden State.

THE AREOSPACE industry is a prime example. In December, 1967, with the Apollo man-to-the-moon program at full blast, employment in ordnance, electronics, aircraft and instruments totaled 616,200 men and women — many of them with jobs paying $25,000 a year and more.

Then came a recession that particularly affected aerospace. Total employment in May, 1971, was down to 443,860. This past March it showed a resurgence to 471,200.

Agriculture is another case in point. Although California is one of the biggest agricultural states and its gross output increases yearly, farm employment has dropped because of mechanization. It was 287,100 in 1971 and 279,300 in 1972.

Jamison is one of those who think the economic factor is paramount. He points a finger specifically at "fanatic and militant environmentalists" while acknowledging the part played by those who would protect resources and natural beauty.

"California is getting a reputation of being an area where you can't do anything in new business or industry or get a job because the militant environmentalists will clobber you," he said.

JAMISON SAYS he believes "environmentalism" may have reached its high tide.

"I think people are beginning to realize that for most the quality of life begins with the job," he said. "Perhaps when we start having electricity brownouts people will think again about banning power plants in coastal areas."

There are many who take exception to that viewpoint and one is Michael McCloskey, executive director of the Sierra Club, which is California's most powerful environmental group.

"We are in favor of zero population at the earliest feasible time," McCloskey said.

He looks on California's reduced population as a "hopeful sign."

"The state which has led the nation in so many things destructive to the environment may be showing signs now of leading the way to a more stable population," McCloskey said.

"What's happening is that environmentalists are no longer on the outside looking in and resorting to lawsuits to stop things. Voters are beginning to take the initiative. Business and industry will come to realize that a well planned community is a good climate for business."

THE QUESTION of whether "bigness" is goodness has brought such conflict that there is discussion of dividing California into two states — North and South.

There were calls for halting the $2 billion California water project, which brings water from the rainy north more than 500 miles to the parched south via a canal-like viaduct.

Some northern Californians opposed the project because it would permit the 7 million population of the Los Angeles metropolitan area to be increased by 2 million more.

Aside from the falloff of migrants, the birth rate drop is significant in levelling off the population.

Aside from the falloff of migrants, the dramatic drop in the birth rate is even more significant in the levelling off of population.

THE NUMBER of births in California dropped from 378,347 in 1962 to 308,500 in 1972 although the state's population rose by more than 3 million. That, of course, is a national trend.

Latest figures show that in-migration has turned up slightly since the 40,430 rate in 1960. In 1971 it went up to 89,823 and last year to 103,600.

But one thing's for sure. There's not so much pizzazz any more in the song, "California Here I Come."

The REAL ESTATE Professionals OF THE NORTHWEST SUBURBS

Featuring this week:

Robert L. Nelson Real Estate

The Robert L. Nelson Real Estate Company began business in 1958 with a single office at the corner of Northwest Highway and Main Street in Mount Prospect. Since that small but hopeful beginning, the company has grown to a 5 office operation with a 6th office scheduled for completion on Schaumburg late in 1973.

Since beginning in business, Robert L. Nelson, Real Estate Co. has sold over 7,000 homes in the Northwest Suburbs, including exclusive Nelson sales plus sales in cooperation with MAP Multiple Listing Service and the Barrington Multiple Listing Service. The sales figures have shown a yearly increase with an annual record high of 927 home sales in 1971. Since beginning business, Robert L. Nelson Real Estate Co. has recorded a total sales volume of over $250,000,000.

The company was founded by Robert L. Nelson, the present Chief Executive officer of the company and the company's first salesman. The company presently lists 52 full time licensed, professional salespeople representing a total of over 425 years of actual real estate sales experience.

"The company has attempted to build a reputation based on solid integrity and professionalism" says Robert L. Nelson. "We have always and will always be dedicated to the concept of individualized customer service which we feel is so important during the emotional and economical transaction of a home sale. We have been fortunate to be servicing the great northwest Chicago suburban area, a market that has established itself as one of America's most desirable living and working areas. Our salespeople live in this area and they know the day-to-day value of the land, the homes and the general communities. They are vitally involved in the community and they can quickly relate to the individual customer needs and demands. . . It is one reason our salespeople have been so successful in serving the tremendous home market," says Bob Nelson.

The Robert L. Nelson Co. has a history of total sales and service success which is reflected in the fact that the company has 28 salespeople in the "Million Dollar Sales Club." The company has 2 salespeople who have reached the 2 Million Dollar yearly sales level.

Robert L. Nelson Real Estate is a direction minded company and operates on a yearly advertising budget of over $140,000. All advertising, sales promotion and market planning is handled by a separate division of the company to help further the Nelson image throughout the local and regional market as well as help develop more positive way to create sales enthusiasm. "One of our greatest sales tools is our strong program of advertising the homes we list. When people list their homes with us, they expect and demand influential advertising to promote the sale of the home and we answer that need with a forceful, day-to-day ad program that reaches over 8 million viewers every week in all local, regional and display media," says Bob Nelson. To meet the tremendous growth situation in the Northwest Suburbs, Robert L. Nelson Co. will expand its operations to the Schaumburg area.

The new Robert L. Nelson office and building in Schaumburg scheduled for completion in early December, 1973

Long range plans call for sales offices in Lake Zurich, Wauconda area and Lake Geneva, Wisconsin area.

Robert L. Nelson has recently begun operations with a branch office in Scottsdale, Arizona.

Ground breaking and construction has begun on the new Robert L. Nelson Real Estate office building at 120 W. Golf Road in Schaumburg.

The 18,600 square foot building will include parking for over 60 cars with completion scheduled for December 1, 1973. Approximately 2,000 square feet of the building will be developed for the Robert L. Nelson sales offices serving the Schaumburg, Hoffman Estates, Hanover Park area and will include desk space for 10 Real Estate Salespeople.

The building will feature contemporary styling with full tinted glass window-wall modules and will be developed within a terrace type brick wall fully landscaped to create an indoor-outdoor atmosphere. Approximately 16,600 square feet of the building will be leased for office space.

Choice of neighborhood important

Buying a house can be one of the happiest, most pleasant experiences that you ever are going to encounter. Or it can be one of the most traumatic. However it turns out, much of what happens depends on your approach, your prior decisions, and your will power to stay within the limits of those decisions, says a prominent real estate executive.

"Included in those decisions," noted Robert G. Walters, vice president and general manager of Baird & Warner's residential sales division, "are the kind of house you need, and the price you can afford, which includes your ability to meet the required down payment and monthly mortgage payments, and, of course, knowing whether your credit rating and financial position will enable you to get the size and kind of mortgage loan that you will need."

"But of all the factors involved," he advises, "the most important to your happiness and to the future value of your house is your choice of neighborhood. This should be the prime consideration as you begin your approach to buying."

No cautions: "Follow the logical order of first things first, because even though you may find your dream house, it may become something less than perfect if it is not situated in a community that best provides you and your family with your needs and desires — for both the present and the future."

HE SUGGESTS that there is more at stake than comfort, convenience, and peace-of-mind. "A house is a major investment that you are anxious to protect, however long you intend to live in the home. For this reason you want to choose a neighborhood that is stable and increasing in value, rather than one whose best days are behind it. And if you're in a transfer prone job it's doubly important to locate in a good, stable area where you will have little difficulty selling if you are relocated."

The following checklist compiled by Walters is designed to help you determine whether a community is right for you. Information and your decisions should include:

- Your "comfort range" in commuting — that is, the distance you want to travel and the amount of time you are willing to spend going to and from work.
- Public transportation and highways serving the community. If you are planning to commute by train and if the commuter station is not conveniently close, you may have to buy another car to park at the station all day — unless your wife agrees to drive you back and forth.
- Learn the cost of commuting, both by train and by car, especially if you are considering a distant suburb. Unless you have a decided preference for a suburb far from your work, the extra cost of commuting can be added to your mortgage budget for a more expensive house closer in.
- Will you and your family be happier with the open-space living of most suburbs, or do you prefer the atmosphere of an inner-city neighborhood?
- WALTERS COUNSELS: "Because this is a significant point, take the time to match the advantages against the disadvantages of each community. Although most suburbs offer spaciousness and quiet surroundings, there may be limited transportation to schools, shopping, and recreation. On the other hand, you may not mind these inconveniences if you are seeking the quietude of suburban living."
- Once you have selected the suburb or inner-city neighborhood that appeals to you, do some more checking:
- Do the schools have a good reputation?
- Is there a church of your choice in the area?
- Are there reputable stores nearby for convenient shopping?
- What is the general appearance of the community? Is it neat and clean, and do houses look as though they are well-maintained?
- What about police and fire protection? Is it adequate and professional?
- Is there a good water supply? Are arrangements for sewerage satisfactory? How can you go about finding the answers to these important questions?
- "It would be difficult and time-consuming for an individual to search them all out," says Walters. "Certainly, you and your family can decide whether a particular city neighborhood or suburban community appeals to you, offering basically what you are seeking."
- But what about police and fire protection, schools, water supply, and the uncertainty of knowing whether the area has had problems of flooding?
- "The best possible way to get honest answers to these important questions," Walters advises, "is to consult with a reputable Realtor."

Pfizer buys 75 acres near tollway in Hoffman

Pfizer Inc., the diversified New York-based multinational company, announced recently the purchase of a 75-acre parcel of land near the Northwest Tollway in Hoffman Estates.

Officials of the company said the site is being considered for a new multimillion dollar distribution center to serve their 16-state midwestern region. Preliminary plans call for the construction of a large, modern distribution center of about 230,000 square feet.

The new center will permit consolidation of three existing distribution facilities now located in the Chicago area. The present locations handled total billings of approximately $180 million last year, and include the regional sales offices for six of Pfizer's domestic operating divisions.

The Hoffman Estates site lies 20 miles northwest of Pfizer's present main Chicago Distribution Center. It is on Central Road, a frontage road on the north side of the Northwest Tollway (Interstate 90), and is a short distance from the intersection of Barrington Road, Central Road and the Tollway.

Pfizer first established a distribution operation in Chicago in 1892; the planned new facility will represent the sixth expansion in the area.

Pfizer maintains a network of seven distribution centers strategically located across the country. In addition to the Chicago center, others are located in Atlanta, San Francisco, Los Angeles, Portland, Ore., Clifton, N.J. and Dallas/Fort Worth.

The Midwestern Distribution Center distributes Pfizer pharmaceuticals, diagnostic reagents, chemicals, agricultural products and consumer items to customers in Colorado, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Kentucky, Michigan, Minnesota, Missouri, Nebraska, North Dakota, Ohio, Oklahoma, South Dakota, Wisconsin and Wyoming.

Pfizer has 110 production facilities in 37 countries around the world and last year reported sales of over $1.09 billion. The company employs 36,000 persons worldwide.

Do-It-Yourself

CHAIN GUARD KEEPS DOOR FROM OPENING TOO FAR

The combination storm and screen door may seem like a second-rate item, not being the real and proper door to your house.

But it takes more abuse than the regular door. In fact that's what it's there for, to take the abuse that would cause wear and tear on the ordinary wooden door.

The combination door is one that needs care and maintenance since it is exposed to everything all year long. It also is the door likeliest to develop problems or suffer an accident.

During cold weather it carries a heavy glass insert. In the summer it holds a lighter screen insert. It may slam too quickly or close too slowly because of the differing weight. If it slams too often, the door can become damaged. It also is a hazard to the people who go through it.

IF IT CLOSES too slowly a stiff wind may catch and blow it open, straining the hinges.

A pneumatic door closer should be used on every storm door. A spring in the tubular closer starts the door closing when it is wide open. Pneumatic pressure cuts the speed of the door just before it is fully closed.

If you have a storm door without a closer, install one. If you have a closer, learn how to adjust it as the weight of the door changes depending on whether you have a screen or a storm insert in use.

Adjustment is done by way of a screw or a movable knob. You will have to experiment and make adjustments gradually.

THE HARDWARE for the closer is mounted on the inside of the frame and the inside of the door, generally at the top. If the closer is difficult to adjust or adjusting doesn't correct the problem, then it is possible that it is mounted on the door jamb too far from the door. Remount the bracket closer to the door.

If a door proves too heavy for the closer, try moving the closer from the top to the middle of the door. This will distribute the weight more evenly.

If your storm door is subject to being caught by heavy winds, you may want to install a chain guard. This consists of a chain and a spring. Before the door is blown too far out the coil spring in the unit absorbs the shock as the end of the chain is reached.

WHEN YOU mount the chain, make certain it stops the door short of the frame. You want the spring to start its point where it is at right angle to the work before there is a strain on the hinges.

Any door that has been blown about a bit will develop trouble. The likely spot is the hinges. These may loosen.

If they do, replace the screws with larger screws. If the wood is too torn up, plug the holes with wood filler and redrill the screw holes. If the hinges are bent they may have to be replaced.

Frequent banging will knock a metal door out of square. These have joints at the corners that become loose. Take the door off and examine how it was made. You will find screws that can be tightened. You will find that the bottom rail can be adjusted easily without removing the door.

Realtors to hold dance, golf outing on July 19

Northwest Suburban Board of Realtors 20th annual golf outing and dinner-dance will be held Thursday, July 19, at Elmhurst Country Club on Wood Dale Road between Grand Avenue and Irving Park Road, Elmhurst.

Golf tees off at 9 a.m.; dinner will be served at 7 p.m. Dancing to the music of Les Roberts Quartette will begin at 9:30 p.m.

"Pirates Rendezvous" is the theme of this affair and the club will be decorated in keeping with the theme. Members and guests are urged to dress like a pirate or his lady, gypsy, or just comfortable casual clothes. Maxine Kokonas of Des Plaines is chairman of the decorations committee.

Hundreds of door prizes, contributed by active and affiliate members, banks, savings & loan associations and local business firms, will be distributed during the evening. These are being gathered now by the prize committee consisting of Jan Dewas of Arlington Heights (for Arlington Heights and Elk Grove Village), Earlene Chapman of Mount Prospect (for Buffalo Grove, Hoffman Estates, Long Grove, Rolling Meadows, Schaumburg and Wheeling), Roy G. Tabbert of Chicago Sun-Times and Chicago Daily News and Frank Connelly of Pioneer National Title Insurance Co. of Chicago (for Chicago & miscellaneous), David Sebastian of Des Plaines (for Des Plaines and Rosemont), Terrence McMahon of Palatine (for Mount Prospect, Palatine and Prospect Heights), and Fred Tock of Park Ridge (for Park Ridge and Niles).

Durnan recognized for sales record

burg and Wheeling), Roy G. Tabbert of Chicago Sun-Times and Chicago Daily News and Frank Connelly of Pioneer National Title Insurance Co. of Chicago (for Chicago & miscellaneous), David Sebastian of Des Plaines (for Des Plaines and Rosemont), Terrence McMahon of Palatine (for Mount Prospect, Palatine and Prospect Heights), and Fred Tock of Park Ridge (for Park Ridge and Niles).

TWENTY GOLF PRIZES will be awarded to low gross and low net golfers, and the "President's Trophy" will be awarded to the low gross active or associate member. Tabulation of golf scores and awarding of golf prizes will be directed by Woody Squassoni of Des Plaines, chairman of the golf committee. The Bouncing Beer Cart, compliments of Pioneer National Title Insurance Co., will be cruising the course.

The Trib (Area Publications Corp.) will sponsor the First Annual Putting Contest on the putting green from 3 to 5 p.m. Golfers and non-golfers are welcome to participate. The Trib will provide putters, and prizes.

Chairman of the entire affair is Edward K. Barth of Des Plaines. Also serving on the committee, in addition to those previously mentioned, are Frank Small, Patricia Lutsch, Maxine Reale and Sue Henriksen of Des Plaines and Walter Benedek and Patty L. Kokonas of Park Ridge.

All tickets are being handled by Doris Kendzie, executive vice president, and are available at the board office, 311 S. Arlington Heights Road, Arlington Heights, Phone: 394-2050. No tickets will be sold at the club.

New trend in condo-apartment buying

A new trend in condominium-apartment buying has developed, according to Hollywood Builder's vice president Manuel S. Kramer. "People are buying an extra apartment home as an investment."

Those who used to hedge their money against inflation, in diamonds, gold, paintings and even barrels of scotch whisky, are now turning to housing, according to Kramer.

Several people after inspecting Hollywood Builders new Five Hundred Rand Road Condominium apartments adjacent to Stonebridge Hill Apartments in Arlington Heights, have asked to buy two condominiums, Kramer reports. Some plan to rent the second one out just as in the days when two-flat buildings were in vogue; others are buying for a married son or daughter.

Money-wise people have watched inflation increase 18 per cent in seven years. They have seen an annual increase in the cost of housing as a result of annual rises in cost of lumber and building materials, along with labor and mortgage interest rates.

THEY CHOOSE an established community like Stonebridge Hill with a frangite on Rand Road in Arlington Heights. The location is solid, one of the most important factors in housing value. One bedroom apartments start at $28,750 and two bedroom apartments begin at $33,450.

They can move in immediately. They can enjoy a community recreation center which is in full operation. In most new developments they could have a wait of two years before these things are built.

The Stonebridge recreation center is open all year with billiard tables, two tennis courts and a basketball court all lighted for night time play, an Olympic size swimming pool, and a 45-acre park with barbecue facilities.

Stonebridge Hill has its own private bus service free to the condominium owners. It makes a.m. and p.m. trips to the North Western station. The bus also takes the ladies to the shopping centers, theaters and tours. The free bus makes a second car unnecessary. It is more important now with the energy crisis, the creeping rise in gasoline and parking prices.

Stonebridge Hill is a family community of mostly young executives. The luxury apartments are spacious and adequate for families.

EACH BUILDING HAS 88 units of one and two bedroom apartments. The condominium buildings are just completed and have never been occupied. The new apartment owner will be the first to live there, and can still enjoy living in an established community.

The buildings have every conceivable amenity. Each building has its own sauna bath, party room, laundry, storage, and elevator.

Each apartment has a center foyer entrance with double size guest closets. The living room opens onto a private terrace through a sliding glass door. The large formal dining room is supplemented by a breakfast nook in the kitchen which comfortably seats four to six people.

THE KITCHEN features include a built-in pantry, furniture style wood cabinets, a 14 cubic foot frost-free refrigerator, freezer, self-cleaning oven and range, dishwasher and disposal.

The bedrooms are set in a privacy-assuring wing and the master bedroom has a roomy walk-in closet. A full bath is adjacent to every bedroom.

There are built-in master antenna outlets in the living room and master bedroom, also sun lamps in bathrooms and special sound proofing between apartments and floors.

The new Stonebridge Hill condominium apartment models can be seen at 600 Rand Rd. in Arlington Heights. It is just east of Ill. Rt. 53 on Rand Road.

Advantages to owning a home told by Levitt executive

"If you are paying $200 or more a month in rent, you are a good candidate for a new home," according to Raymond P. Samanic, director of sales and marketing for Levitt Residential Communities, Inc.

Many renters never entertain the dream of owning their own home, because they feel the payments are out of reach, Samanic remarked. With the variety of housing styles available (duplexes, quadruminums, town houses and single-family) now more than ever before, home ownership is possible.

There are four reasons why families buy homes: rent increases, family growth, the desire to escape the confines and hazards of city life and to obtain a hedge against inflation by investing in equity.

"It's logical," Samanic said. "A couple knows their rent will be raised whenever the lease expires and they'd rather postpone luxuries for the first few years in order to buy a home as quickly as possible."

WHAT ARE SOME of the attractions of home ownership? Besides the usual reasons of appreciation, privacy and investment, Samanic said there was an "element of self-expression" one is not able to find in an apartment complex.

"In Illinois, indeed in the Midwest, there seems to be a euphoria about owning one's own home," Samanic said. "We seem to be homemakers at heart. The man wants a workshop in which to tinker, an outlet or to use his hands. It is only through home ownership that he can do this."

Samanic stressed the idea of a person or family setting their own life style. In talking about recreation and its maintenance facilities offered in some apartment complexes, he said most apartments include the cost of recreation in the rent, whether or not it is used by the individual. Whereas, the homeowner can choose his own kind of recreation at a price he can afford.

However, many first-time homeowners don't know what style of house to look for, or what should be included to obtain the best value for their money.

SAMANIC SUGGESTS the prospective buyer seriously consider Traditional or Colonial, as compared to Contemporary or California styling. His main criteria is the person's pocketbook.

"Both California and Contemporary styled homes are more expensive from the standpoint of monthly utility bills than Traditional or Colonial," Samanic asserted. "Because of cathedral ceilings and walls of windows, it costs more to heat the home. The same condition prevails for air conditioning."

Modern builders, however, offer a variety of architectural styles which hope to suit the individual's taste, each having a different appeal and price range.

"Sodded front lawns" and at least fine grading in the backyard should be standard inclusions with any house, Samanic said. Otherwise, new homeowners will find they need a sizable sum of money to pay someone to sod, to seed themselves year after year or inherit grading problems.

"Kitchen appliances are a must," Samanic asserted. "Homes should have at least a stove, range hood, disposer and dishwasher. They should also come with some carpeting."

ONCE A PROSPECTIVE buyer decides what he would like and what he can afford, he should pick a builder and location.

Levitt was Samanic's first choice for owners. However, he conceded that point and said that buyers should look for a national builder, if possible, with a good reputation, who will stand behind his product and has a good track record.

As far as location, Bell Federal Savings and Loan Association's February survey reported that Schaumburg led the Midwest in 1972 for home building. It is the first municipality in Illinois since the Civil War to displace Chicago as the top home builder in Illinois, with 1,470 new home permits issued in January.

Levitt itself, is currently building in six subdivisions in the Chicago area. They include Sheffield Manor, Sheffield Park and Sheffield Towne all in northwest suburban Schaumburg; Old Farm in west suburban Naperville; Greenbriar in southwest suburban New Lenox; and Strathmore in north suburban Buffalo Grove. A new project will open soon in the northern suburb of Vernon Hills.

HOW TO FINANCE a home? Samanic said: "If you are not a veteran, the two major requirements are a down payment and a monthly income large enough to handle the mortgage, taxes, insurance and normal running expenses such as utilities and maintenance."

"Generally, the monthly payment for mortgage, taxes and insurance should not exceed 25 per cent of your gross monthly salary. For the down payment, you'll usually need from $2,000 to $4,000, although this can be higher or lower depending upon the cost of the house."

Three types of mortgages are available: Veteran Administration (VA), Federal Housing Authority (FHA-HUD) and conventional mortgages such as those from banks and savings and loan institutions.

Before you sign a new lease on your apartment which increases the monthly rent, consider a home. It may be the best investment you will ever make.

Levitt Residential Communities, Inc. is a division of Levitt and Sons Inc., the world's largest leading residential community building firm. The Levitt organization is currently building projects throughout the United States, Puerto Rico, and in France, Germany and Spain.

MAP banquet, golf outing July 9

The annual MPA Multiple Listing Service Installation of Officers Banquet and Golf Outing will be held Monday, July 9 at Itasca Country Club, Itasca.

The annual MAP Multiple Listing Service Golf Tournament will precede the dinner banquet and the annual installation of officers for the 1973-74 term of office.

The banquet will be attended by all MPA Multiple Listing Service members and guests, beginning with cocktails at 6:30 p.m., followed by dinner at 7:30, the installation ceremonies and dancing. Tickets are available at all participating MAP Multiple Listing Real Estate offices in the area.

The present officers and directors are Ken Ruud, president; George R. Busse, vice president; John Peters, secretary and Walter Neelis, treasurer. Directors are Stan Lieberman, Bill Annen, Bob Proctor and Jack Keller.

Statistics show patterns in shift of population

Statistics quoted recently in the New York Times indicate that there are fifteen key states in which the number of people moving into the area far exceeds those moving out. The states are: New Hampshire, Vermont, Connecticut, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Arkansas, Colorado, New Mexico, Arizona, Nevada, Oregon, California and Hawaii.

Local realtor W. Richard Impey, of the Arlington Gallery of Homes Northwest, reports that these statistics closely parallel those of the Gallery of Homes International Relocation Service, which during 1973 will assist in the interstate moves of an estimated 25,000 families.

"Gallery figures also compare with those of the Times in pinpointing states where there is a surplus exodus of residents," Impey said. These states are New York, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Ohio, Michigan, Illinois, Wisconsin, Iowa, North Dakota, Wyoming and Utah.

"IT IS INTERESTING to note," Impey added, "that, while these areas generally have more families moving out of them than into them, there are certain sectors of each state where the exact opposite is true. The Chicago metropolitan area, for example, runs counter to the overall state trend. Here, our experience shows a net difference on the incoming side."

"The Times survey revealed that 23 states maintained a balance of move-ins and move-outs. They are: Maine, Rhode Island, Delaware, Maryland, Massachusetts, Virginia, West Virginia, Kentucky, Tennessee, Alabama and Mississippi.

Also Indiana, Minnesota, Missouri, Louisiana, Nebraska, Kansas, Oklahoma, Texas, Montana, Idaho, Washington and Alaska.

"Perhaps the most impressive aspect of the entire survey," said Impey, "is the tremendous overall number of moves. In Gallery-handled moves alone, corporate transfers arranged by the 1,143 Gallery offices are running 40 per cent ahead of comparable 1972 totals."

Apartment growth up as home permits dip

April permits for single family units declined 26 per cent from the same month last year in the six county Chicago metropolitan area, according to the Bell Federal Survey of Building. However, multi-family units rose 20 per cent in the same period.

Permits for single family units dropped from 2,338 to 1,728, while apartment activity increased from 2,075 in April, 1972, to 2,494 last month.

Total housing units, including single and multiple permits, decreased 4 per cent to 4,258 from the 4,413 reported in April, 1972.

Permits for all new housing for the first four months of 1973 totaled 15,346, 20 per cent above the 12,766 reported during the comparable months of 1972.

Do it yourself— for fun and profit

Economy is one reason homeowners handle their own remodeling. Enjoyment is another.

Building Supply News, a trade publication for building supply dealers (where home handymen get most of their materials and remodeling information) says do-it-yourself projects are "an outlet for family creativity and a chance for family fun."

The Glens offers classic old charm

Like any art, classics in home architecture live on and on because people — and families — identify them with the best in living.

That is what The Glens in Naperville, latest building development by Aldridge Homes, is all about. Four classic model home designs are featured in the 190-home development. Interiors of the models have been professionally decorated.

All four houses reflect the expertise that has won Aldridge Homes and its internationally-known architect, Martin Henry Braun, a multiplicity of national awards. Aldridge has built more than several thousand houses in the Chicago-land area since it was established more than two decades ago.

"Most importantly," said Frank Aldridge, vice president and son of the founder, "All four are designed specifically for families who have outgrown present houses — or have found them short on conveniences."

Julie Ward hits million in sales

Julie Ward of the Robert L. Nelson, Real Estate Co., Arlington Heights sales office has achieved the million dollar mark in real estate sales in 1973.

Julie Ward has also been a member of the Million Dollar Club in 1970, 1971, and 1972. The announcement was made by Terry Fitzpatrick, sales manager of the Robert L. Nelson, Arlington Heights office.

THE FOUR MODELS are:

The Andover, a four-bedroom, 2½ bath country Colonial house with brick and aluminum siding, pitched roof, mul-tioned windows and shutters.

The Dorset, a four-bedroom, two-bath tri-level with early New England charm, pitched roof, Masonite siding, and brick, diamond-pane windows with perky flower boxes.

The Lancaster, five-bedroom, 2½-bath Provincial design with mansard roof, eyebrow dormer windows, aluminum siding and brick combination.

The Carlisle, four-bedroom, two-bath, single level with peaked roof, vertical Masonite siding and shutters for an early American ambience.

Prices range from $48,950 for the Dorset to $55,950 for the Lancaster. This includes a two-car, attached garage, black-topped driveway, and a fully-graded and seeded lot. Average lot size is 75 x 140 feet. What's more, streets, sidewalks, lights, sewers and underground utilities are included with the house — no extra assessment.

THE CLASSIC charm of the houses on the outside is matched with contemporary convenience on the inside — and above-average space.

The Lancaster offers a growing family 2,500 square feet of living space — and a floor plan that makes for no irritating jam-ups. The entry hall, with closet and powder room leads directly to the rear of the first floor and to the family room, kitchen and dining room. It also offers entry to the living room, and, via its decorative iron railing stairway, up to the second floor's five bedrooms. Rooms are large. For example, the kitchen is 18½ by 14 1/3 feet, and has its own eating area. The 17 foot master bedroom has its own bath and two closets, one walk-in size.

It is possible to offer family members privacy in a one-floor house design — and the Carlisle does it with 2,050 square feet. There's room enough to create a separate wing for the four bedrooms with their own special hall, entered from the foyer. The master bedroom and bath are at the rear of the house, for even more privacy. So are the 20-foot living room and the adjoining dining room. The kitchen is centered between the dining room and the family room, a big 19 feet, 4 inches by 18 feet, 10 inches. The laundry room is adjacent.

The two-story Andover has 2,250 square feet — and keeps daily living running smoothly by setting off the more formal areas, the 20-foot plus living room and adjoining dining room, in a separate wing reached through the entry. The entry hall also gives direct access to the action parts of the house — the 18-foot kitchen and eating area and the 19-foot family room next door. Each of the four bedrooms upstairs has closets, so storage is no problem. In fact, the master bedroom has his and hers closets, as well as its own bath.

AS THE GLENS only tri-level, the Dorset offers in excess of 1800 square feet of living space and planning, which gives it top efficiency zoning. Living area — the 20-foot living room, the dining room, the family room and kitchen — are grouped together on one level. The four bedrooms are all on the upper level. In this model, the cabinet kitchen is combined with the family room in an L-shaped area. However, an unfinished room next to the laundry facilities on the bottom level, can be finished later on for a separate family or recreation room.

With the average size of houses across the country at 1724 square feet, The Glens homes are a living space bonanza. These are houses where a family has a hand in selecting the overall look of the exterior — and the interior. There are dozens of brick and trim variations, as well as color choices in Masonite siding. Inside, the selections are even more varied.

All kitchens have built-in cabinets and counters with wood fronts available in contemporary, Colonial, Mediterranean or Old English motifs. Each kitchen comes equipped with an eye-level double oven and range, an automatic dishwasher and a garbage disposer. Two models — The Lancaster and The Andover — have kitchens with work islands that have extra storage compartments and drawers. These can be either centered or re-arranged as a breakfast bar.

FAMILY ROOMS have walls paneled in wood and there is a choice of different woods, including oak, birch and elm.

Floors are carpeted, but there is also the alternate choice of wood parquet floors. The entry hall comes with either natural slate or quarry tile floor.

Bathrooms have ceramic tile floors and bath walls, decorator mirrors, a choice of colored fixtures and vanities. There also are fireplaces available as an option.

These choices let a family personalize its new house — putting it all together as its very own special place.

A construction photography contest pitting amateur and professional photographers for $1,000 in prizes has been announced by the Builders' Association of Chicago.

Photography should depict construction in progress which is dynamic or esthetically appealing, and, in all cases, interesting according to the sponsor.

Annen & Busse sets new sales mark

Anne & Busse brokers, Mount Prospect office, broke all sales records for May with over $2,000,000 in residential sales.

This production was a part of the $1,500,000 in May sales recorded by all four Annen & Busse offices located in Arlington Heights, Palatine, and Schaumburg in addition to Mount Prospect. The following eleven associates participated in this production: Del Sears, associate office sales manager, Manetto Christian, Veronica Connelly, Muriel Hogarty, Robert Magnus, George Novak, Andy Olson, Barbara Phillips, Al Streich, Bob Veho and Ruth Walker.

According to Wallace E. Busse, vice president and office sales manager in Mount Prospect, this record can be attributed to various factors in addition to the continuing growth of the Northwest Suburban area served by Annen & Busse. Some of these include Annen & Busse's charter membership in the MAP Multiple Listing Service, in which Edward J. Busse, president of the firm, served as the first president; Annen & Busse has 43 full-time sales associates who are active participants in their local communities' civic and service organizations; they are members of the Northwest Suburban Board of Realtors, as well as the Illinois and National Real Estate Boards; and to a great part, their active membership in the Homes for Living Network, a National Multi List Service, covering 48 states and Puerto Rico, with more than 7,000 brokers and sales associates serving more than 5,000 communities.

Anne & Busse is a part of the Homes for Living Tele-Communications System, a service allowing the transferring client to make instant visual communication with a broker anywhere in the country, so that he becomes familiar with properties in a new area before he arrives at his destination.

The first prize will be $500, second prize $300, and third prize $200.

Edward Bogdajewicz, chairman of the Association's Publicity and Public Action Committee, said the competition is designed "to increase public awareness of the dynamic role the construction industry is playing in the growth of the Chicago metropolitan area." The Builders' Association is a trade organization of general contractors who operate in Cook, Lake and DuPage Counties.

The contest is open to all photographers in the Chicago metropolitan area. All entries must be postmarked not later than Nov. 1, 1973. Awards will be announced at the December quarterly membership meeting of the Association.

BOGDJEWICZ SAID that all entries must be in black and white, must be of a positive nature, and must be mounted on 16 by 20 finished board, regardless of the size of the photo or printing technique.

Information to be provided on the back of the mount includes the photographer's name, address, telephone number, location of the construction job, name of the general contractor, date of photograph, and title of photograph (if any).

Photo stories will be judged as one entry and may be mounted on no more than three 16 by 20 mounts.

Photographs must be taken after June 1, 1973.

No more than one prize will be awarded to a photographer. All entries become the property of the Builders' Association of Chicago.

All entries and inquiries should be addressed to Chicagoand Construction Photography Contest, Builders' Association of Chicago, 228 N. LaSalle St., Chicago, Ill. 60601. Telephone — 372-4480.

Quinlan, Tyson tells 30 pct. earnings hike

Quinlan and Tyson's Northwest suburban area offices have set a five-month sales record with a pace 31 per cent ahead of 1972.

The three area offices have rolled up a total sales volume of $17,641,200 through May. The comparable figure for 1972 was $13,443,191.

The five-month figures indicate the Palatine area office is significantly in front with a sales increase of 73 per cent over the same period of 1972.

The largest dollar volume was produced by the Arlington Heights-Mount Prospect area office with a volume of $6,862,750, a 20 per cent increase over 1972.

The Arlington Heights-Mount Prospect area office set a strong pace in April, with sales for the month totalling $1,853,500 — a huge 79 per cent hike over April, 1972, and the largest monthly volume ever recorded by a Q&T Northwest area office.

Kole Real Estate starts client services department

The establishment of a department of client services for Kole Real Estate, Ltd., has been announced by Robert A. Kole, president of the firm.

Under the direction of Beth Wine, the new department will be concerned with establishing rapport with persons who buy or sell their homes through Kole Real Estate, and provide a general clearing house for questions which persons may have regarding the sale of their home. Letters, questionnaires and personal calls will be used to maintain this liaison with the general public.

The department of client services will also include the relocation services provided by Kole Real Estate. In this regard, Mrs. Wine will handle all Kole real estate matters concerning business and professional people who transfer their residences to and from the Northwest suburban area. Directing the relocation of these "transferees" brings Mrs. Wine into contact with every portion of the United States.

Handling referral cards and the files on the Kole Guaranteed Trade Program are also among the duties of the department of client services.

The new department is located at the executive and training headquarters of Kole at 1000 E. Northwest Hwy., Mount Prospect.

A native of Evanston, Mrs. Beth Wine attended Moser Secretarial School after graduating from high school. She performed secretarial work for several years prior to her marriage. She joined Kole Real Estate last September, and served as a sales associate in the Barrington office prior to her promotion to her new position.

Mrs. Wine is president of the Junior Woman's Club of Barrington, and enjoys skiing, sewing and knitting as hobbies.

Founded eight years ago, Kole Real Estate, Ltd., maintains sales offices in Arlington Heights, Barrington, Des Plaines, Mount Prospect, Palatine, Park Ridge, Rolling Meadows, and Wheeling.

Russert named head of corporate sales

Arthur E. Russert, a former steel company executive, has been appointed director of corporate sales for Rich Port, Realtor.

Arthur Russert

The announcement was made by Dick Caruso, president of the diversified, 17 office real estate firm that specializes in residential, commercial and investment real estate.

In his new position, Russert will be working with and assisting companies and corporations involved in employee transfers throughout the country. Transferred employee, whether buyer or seller, will receive "Real Service in Real Estate," including preferred attention so that the transition from one home to another can be effortless.

Prior to joining Rich Port, Realtor, Russert was for 20 years associated with the steel division of Interlake, Inc., most recently as assistant to the president. In addition, he served as vice president of marketing and in various other sales capacities, which began when he joined Interlake in 1953. Previous to this, he was with Sharon Steel for 17 years as district manager for the State of Indiana.

Russert will be based at Rich Port, Realtor's corporate headquarters, 517 South LaGrange Rd.

Five are tops for Starck & Co.

Robert W. Starck and Co., recently announced the outstanding sales associates for May. According to Robert Starck, president, these five associates had the highest combination of listings and sales as part of the Starck team effort that has helped the company to expand and grow at a steadily improving rate.

The leader in Palatine was Tom Mercer and in Schaumburg, Jim Markgraf. Hoffman Estates office named sales manager Bill Cowin and in Arlington Heights the winner was Dorothy Bogdas. In Mount Prospect there was a tie between Lois Anderson, the sales manager of that office, and Carol Marsh.

Hello, Remember me?

Some people call me Old Glory, others call me the Star Spangled Banner, but whatever they call me, I am your Flag, the Flag of the United States of America... something has been bothering me, so I thought I might talk it over with you... because it is about you and me.

I remember some time ago people lined up on both sides of the street to watch the parade and naturally I was leading every parade, proudly waving in the breeze. When your daddy saw me coming, he immediately removed his hat and placed it against his left shoulder so that his hand was directly over his heart... remember?

And you, I remember you. Standing there straight as a soldier. You didn't have a hat, but you were giving the right salute. Remember little sister? Not to be outdone, she was saluting the same as you with her right hand over her heart... remember?

What happened? I'm still the same Old Flag, oh, I have a few more Stars since you were a boy. A lot more blood has been shed since those parades of long ago.

But now I don't feel as proud as I used to. When I come down your street you just stand there with your hands in your pockets and I may get a small glance and then you look away. Then I see the children running around and shouting... they don't seem to know who I am... I saw one man take his hat off then look around. He didn't see anybody else with theirs off so he quickly put his back on.

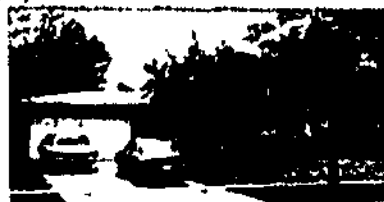

Is it a sin to be patriotic anymore? Have you forgotten what I stand for and where I've been?... Anzio, Guadalcanal, Korea and now Viet Nam. Take a look at the Memorial Honor Rolls sometime, of those who never came back to keep this Republic free... One Nation Under God... when you salute me, you are actually saluting them.

Well, it won't be long until I'll be coming down your street again. So, when you see me, stand straight, place your right hand over your heart... and I'll salute you, by waving back... and I'll know that...

You remember!

2 from Hoffman Est. join Brown & Root

Sheling Cheng

Ting-Kwan Lal

Ting-Kwan Lal and Sheling Cheng (Steven) Cheng have joined the staff of Brown & Root, Inc., Chicago Engineering Division, according to Horace S. Hunt, Jr., general manager.

Lal, a resident of 109 Treaty Ln., Hoffman Estates, serves the firm as a senior engineer. He has completed his Ph.D. course work at Northwestern University and holds a BS and MS in civil engineering.

Ing from the University of Missouri. Cheng resides at 203 Winston Dr., Hoffman Estates, and has been employed as a structural design engineer. He holds an MS in structural engineering from Oklahoma State University in Stillwater and a BS in hydraulics from Cheng-Kung University.

Prior to joining Brown & Root, both men were affiliated with Pioneer Service and Engineering Co.

The Chicago Engineering Division of Brown & Root, located in Oak Brook, specializes in designing power plants and steel mills. The parent company located in Houston, Tex., is one of the largest engineering and construction firms in the United States.

Wolski moves up with Dukane Corp.

Jerry Wolski of Hoffman Estates, formerly scheduling supervisor in production control, has been promoted to purchasing manager at Dukane Corp. in St. Charles, Ill.

Jerry Wolski

Wolski joined the company in 1970 as a buyer in the purchasing department, and before that he was employed by Warwick Electronics of Chicago as a buyer in the purchasing department.

Beatrice Foods Co. names gen. manager

Robert A. Kremer, formerly of Barrington, recently was promoted to general manager of the Beatrice Foods Co. ice cream plant in Kankakee, Ill., and of the Meadow Gold ice cream branch in Rolling Meadows.

Robert Kremer

Kremer is a veteran of 19 years in the dairy business. He was named sales coordinator for the Kankakee plant and Rolling Meadows branch in 1969. Three years later he was promoted to manager of the Rolling Meadows operation as well as general sales manager for ice cream in the Metropolitan Chicago area.

He was advanced to acting manager of the Kankakee plant last December. Kremer is a graduate of De Paul University, Chicago, where he earned a bachelor's degree in marketing following U.S. Army service in Korea from 1950 to 1952.

Berryman joined the Alliance in 1969 as casualty claims director. He will continue to be in charge of the claims department in his new position.

Harvestore breaks ground for new center

Ground-breaking ceremonies were held recently for a new product-performance training center at the headquarters of A. O. Smith Harvestore Products, Inc., 550 W. Algonquin Rd. The facility will be one of the few permanent agricultural training facilities in the United States.

The ground-breaking was done with a glass-fused-to-steel shovel. Glass-fused-to-steel is the material used in construction of Harvestore's oxygen-limiting feed storage structures, the company's principle product.

Harvestore executives present at the groundbreaking were J. H. Brinker, president of the company; M. E. Fonda, marketing director; H. O. Wall, sales manager; N. R. Brink, manager of manufacturing; W. H. Phillips, manager of product performance; J. J. Walsh, training manager, and L. M. Anderson, product performance staff.

Construction will be completed on the 7,000 square foot structure in September, Harvestore officials said. The center will enclose offices for product performance personnel, a class room for product performance training, and a workshop for practical training of Harvestore dealer service personnel. The workshop will house examples of the company's unloaders, feeding equipment and other products. The center will also be used for sales training.

THROUGHOUT THE YEAR, small groups of service and sales personnel from Harvestore's 74 dealerships throughout the U.S. and Canada will be brought to the center for short training programs.

Phillips estimated that there will be an average of 12 training sessions per year. An added benefit the facility will offer will be practical product training of Harvestore salesmen, Phillips added.

The product performance training center will be constructed directly west of the present Harvestore executive office building, and connected to that building. The existing corporate headquarters house executive offices, administration, sales, marketing, product engineering and product performance.

"We feel that the principal advantage of this center will be the capacity to train service personnel with actual equipment rather than through bulletins and other written materials," Phillips said.

Brink noted that construction of the facility is only one facet of a Harvestore expansion program that includes construction of a new plant for building oxygen-limiting structures at a location in northern Illinois that has not been announced. Besides oxygen-limiting structures for feed storage, Harvestore also manufactures a full line of feeding equipment and related products.

The existing Harvestore facility, which employs approximately 78 persons in Arlington Heights, was completed in 1962.

ONLY PHONE COMPANY in town is probably not the only phone company that serves you. More than 1,700 independent telephone companies in the U.S. work closely with the Bell System to assure that when a customer calls Las Vegas, Nev., or any of the other communities served by an independent, they can hear as clearly as if they were calling a Bell exchange.

Bell Telephone companies and the AT&T Long Lines Department own and operate most long distance facilities in the nation, but long distance calls may also be routed over independent facilities.

The investment of billions of dollars in equipment by the independent telephone companies entitles them to share in the revenues from these operations. And because Bell does provide 95 per cent of the nation's long distance communications equipment, and most calls originating in independent territories use Bell facilities, Bell also shares in these revenues.

In order for the independent telecommunications equipment to connect properly with the Bell System, compatible equipment and operating procedures are required.

There are approximately 1,700 independent phone companies, compared to more than 5,000 companies 20 years ago. The three largest groups of independents are operating companies of the General Telephone System, the United Telephone System and the Continental Telephone Corp. The General System serves about half the 22 million phones operated by independent companies.

Each Bell Telephone company maintains a staff responsible for coordinating activities with independent companies. In the Northwest suburbs, Des Plaines and Park Ridge are principally served by the Central Telephone Co. of Illinois, a division of Central Telephone and Utilities Corp. Centel is the nation's fourth largest independent phone service.

HOME AND apartment owners, managers, contractors and investors will be invited to attend the Second Annual Home and Apartment Exposition. It will be held Oct. 11 and 12 at Arlington Park in Arlington Heights. Flooring materials, kitchen and bathroom fixtures, lighting, carpeting, furniture and ventilation systems are among the displays to be included at the exposition. Security and protection systems will also be featured at the show. The exposition is sponsored by the Home Builders Association of Greater Chicago. Additional information is available by calling Judy Pedersen at 871-3331.

Land purchase, lease arrangements set

A land purchase and leaseback has been arranged by Dovenmuehle, Inc. together with a leasehold mortgage on a factory and office building at 103-117 Weller Road in Elk Grove Township. The total financing is in the amount of $270,000 for a term of 25 years. Conrad F. Rother, senior vice president of the Chicago mortgage banking firm, said the sponsor is the Maywood-Proviso State Bank, acting as trustee.

The facility consists of a one-story masonry and steel building containing a total of 25,303 sq. ft., of which more than 10 per cent is finished air-conditioned office space. The building is fully occupied with four tenants, each in a totally self-contained unit.

Architect for the project is the Ampco Building Corp. of Bensenville. This firm also serves as contractor.

Home buying still soars

Home buying continues to soar, supported by a good supply of mortgage funds, stable interest rates and a burgeoning consumer demand.

"The $5.7 billion in new mortgage loans made by thrift institutions during the first three months of this year was 47.8 per cent above the total in the same period of 1972," observes Jackson W. Goss, president and chief executive officer of Investors Mortgage Insurance Company, Boston.

"Further, mortgage lending for new homes construction during the first quarter reached $2.1 billion — 22.2 per cent above the $1.7 billion loaned during the same three months last year," Goss notes. "First quarter totals clearly show Americans still have a strong incentive to buy homes."

The level of home building also has remained consistently high this year. "At the end of April, housing starts were at an annual seasonally adjusted rate of 2.191 million, only 4.3 per cent below the 2.294 million starts of a year ago," Goss reports.

"On a regional basis, housing starts through April were up 14.9 per cent in the West; up 10.4 per cent in the Northeast; up 5 per cent in the North Central section; and off 18.7 per cent in the South."

HOME MORTGAGE interest rates are remaining relatively stable, he adds, despite advances by short-term rates.

"Nationally, the average mortgage interest rates for both new and old homes are 7.7 per cent," Goss says. "The rate on a loan for a new home has actually gone up less than one-fifth of 1 per cent in the past 12 months."

"The average price of new homes is currently $36,300 nationally — and approximately $30,400 for existing homes. Some 16 per cent of all new homes and more than 10 per cent of all existing homes sold are being purchased with high-ratio mortgages of 90 to 95 per cent."

Interest rates on combined construction-purchase loans, he adds, have declined — from 7.73 per cent in February to 7.69 per cent in March and to 7.65 per cent in April.

"The demand for housing is intense and will become even greater as the year progresses. The industry has its job cut out — a challenge that will be met and result in another exceptionally good year for the home buying public," Goss concludes.

Old Debs home now shrine to labor movement pioneer

The old Eugene V. Debs home, now a shrine to the memory of one of America's most honored pioneers in the labor movement, has been given a new lease on life through the efforts of the Eugene V. Debs Foundation in Terre Haute, Ind.

The home, a spacious, rambling, two-and-a-half story frame building on North Eighth Street, was built in 1890. Debs and his wife lived there from that time until Debs died in October, 1926. After the death of Mrs. Debs, the house was purchased by Professor John Shannon of Indiana State College, Terre Haute. When his efforts to persuade the State of Indiana to make the home a landmark failed, Shannon sold the house to a fraternity.

In 1940 the Eugene V. Debs Memorial Committee was formed and Curtis Culver of Terre Haute, president of the Indiana Federation of Postal Clerks, was named chairman. Culver learned that the house was for sale but was faced with the task of raising $10,000 to buy it.

Two years later, Tilford E. Dudley, director of the AFL-CIO speaker's bureau, learned of the problem and called together a group of local educators. They went to the Debs home and discovered it had been purchased by a local contractor who had begun remodeling the home into three-room apartments. The contractor was persuaded to sell the home to the group and shortly thereafter the Eugene V. Debs Foundation was formed to take over the project.

The foundation then began a program to restore, as much as possible, the furnishings and decor of the Debs' era. This was done with the cooperation of Debs' daughter, Mrs. Marguerite Debs Cooper. Under the leadership of Patrick J. Gorman, foundation president, who is also president of the Amalgamated Meat Cutters and Butcher Workmen of America; and Ned A. Bush, Sr., foundation vice president, news editor of the Terre Haute (Indiana) Tribune, foundation members felt that the exterior of the home needed restoration and preservation as well.

Costs of maintaining the Debs home, inside and out, had to be held to a minimum and foundation officials selected an exterior siding material, solid vinyl, which would never need painting.

Most of the home's exterior is covered with four-inch, white clapboard vinyl siding. White solid vinyl vertical siding was installed on the gables. White solid vinyl soffits completed the renovation.

You don't have to give up your children, your dog, your "elbow room" or your individuality to live on a golf course.

Why trap your family in one of those model apartment units? No room for the children. No room for the dog. Confining look-alike apartments with no individual character. That's simply too big a price to pay.

At Turnberry, you can have your golf course and still enjoy the graciousness, spaciousness and individuality found only in single family home living. We have a private championship golf course and a magnificent French Normandy Clubhouse plus breathtaking views from spacious homesites where each house is custom-designed so no two homes are alike. And, while you're playing golf, there are many exciting things for your family to do. Fish and sail on our three beautiful lakes. Swim in our Olympic-size pool. Play tennis on our tournament-quality courts. Or hike and bike through our hills, valleys and woods.

Commute to Chicago

Take Northwest Tollway (90) to Barrington Rd. North to Algonquin Rd. (62), then northwest on 62 into Town of Algonquin. Cross Rt. 31 and go straight ahead (west) 5 miles on Huntley-Algonquin Rd. Turn north on Huntley-Crystal Lake Rd. to property. Watch for signs is no problem. Air-conditioned North Western trains are just 10 minutes away at suburban Crystal Lake. And you can drive to O'Hare or any place in Chicago and on nearby expressways.

There are no ordinary homesites at Turnberry. Here, the crest of a hill, a lush green fairway, a beautiful lake or century-old trees adjoin the living room of your custom-built home. Architectural approval is required for every house built here. The size and cost is not as important as architectural excellence.

Homesites average 3/4 of an acre, and more important, have a minimum width of 150 feet at the building line. All sites are fully improved with winding paved roads, water, sewer and underground utilities. Prices range from $17,000 to $33,000.

Midlothian, Onwentsia clubs host tour stars

Banner golf week begins in Chicago area

BILLY VENTRESCA
Area's Only Entrant

Prestige... money... star staring... Billy vs. The Big Boys... The Children's Memorial...

All have something in common this week, Western Open week.

Midlothian Country Club, which last hosted the annual classic in 1969, will have the distinction of being the last stop before the Western moves to its permanent home — Butler National Golf Club in Oakbrook.

Maybe hosting it at the same course every year will help lure all the top-name professionals in the future. Today's opening round certainly won't find all the biggies teeing it up.

Jack Nicklaus, Gary Player and Johnny Miller — the surprise winner of the recent U.S. Open — are passing up the 70th annual championship. Why? Each probably has his reasons.

Nicklaus and Player have growing families. The demand to spend more time around them is great, especially when they don't need the highest purse ever offered by the Western, $35,000 first prize.

Miller probably is drained after his super 63 on the final round at Oakmont for his first major title. However, he did play in the American Golf Classic last week, but the prize money wasn't as great as the Western's total purse of $175,000. He says he wants to prepare for the British Open.

In the past, a major tournament interfered with the Western, but it wasn't supposed to keep any of the greats away this time. Sandwiched between the U.S. and the British (July 11-14) opens by two weeks, many thought the Big Four (Nicklaus, Player, Lee Trevino and Arnie Palmer) would be here. Now one has to wonder if golfing fans will have to wait until 1975 and Medinah's U.S. Open to see the best in action.

Just several years the junior of the U.S. Open, the Western Open should rank high on all the pros' lists in prestige as well as money in the bank. Over the 69 championship years, many greats have won the title.

An all-time great amateur — Chick Evans — is connected with it because the money raised by the tourney goes to a caddy scholarship fund in his name. Also, should any player win two of the four major tourneys, the Western title would give the lucky winner a berth in the World Series of Golf.

As far as the money is concerned, only 13 tournaments give out more, two others matching the Western and 24 finishing below it in dollar signs.

The presence of Arnie and Lee will save this year's show from the embarrassment of the lack of superstars that plagued it in '72.

GALLERYITES gazing at the galaxy of golfing greats will find certain spots at Midlothian's 6,654 yards of lush greenness much more ideal than others, according to Don Pauley, hosting club professional and former head man at Inverness.

"I think one of the good areas is actually right about the fourth tee area," said Pauley Tuesday as he prepared for his second hosting of the Open.

"You have access to the second and third greens, the fourth tee, the sixth green and the seventh tee. It's a good action area."

For those who like to just sit and watch from one spot, the ideal location is the bleacher area near the clubhouse. The ninth and the 18th greens wind up just a couple of yards apart, giving fans two holes for the price of one.

Still another choice area is near the halfway house. It is located near the seventh and 15th greens and the eighth and 18th tees. A cold beer stand is also close at hand.

WHEN YOU THINK of the touring pros who are the shortest, height-wise, you naturally look to someone like Chi Chi Rodriguez. But Juan isn't the smallest on the PGA roster for 1973.

Taking bottom honors are Lee Trevino and Charlie Sifford with heights of 5-foot-7. Chi Chi stands in at a lofty 5-7 1/2.

When asked if he was Rodriguez size, Rolling Green Country Club's Billy Ventresca countered, "He's taller."

Ventresca, who's head professional at the Arlington Heights based private club, was co-medalist on Monday when he qualified for the Western with a three under par 69.

"At 5-5, 135, there are not too many smaller than me on the tour," he added.

When he tees off today, he'll be one of the smallest men ever to play in the 70-year history of the event. But don't let his size fool you. Ventresca, 34, is a very accurate player who admits to driving the ball "between 240 and 260 yards."

Since Midlothian is not one of your modern day, 7,000-plus slugger layouts, his type of game is suited to the course. Having tried and failed to make the cut at two other touring events, Billy will be out to do it this time.

Those who like rooting for the underdog and the little guy will relish in following his progress.

THE DAY AFTER the Western champ is crowned, another crowning event will take place at Lake Forest's Onwentsia Country Club.

This will be the site of the 13th annual Children's Memorial Hospital Pro-Amateur Golf Championship, an 18-hole tourney that takes place Monday.

Over the previous dozen years, this tourney has earned $385,000 for the huge Children's Hospital in Chicago. Next week should easily send the total over the million mark of money used for the "Free Care Fund."

"It's just that," explains Robert A. Gardener Jr., chairman of the golf committee. "Any child who doesn't have the resources to pay for the care he will be receiving is in the free care category."

With the free care budget running $1.5 million a year, the amount raised by the volunteers of the tournament is quickly used up. About 50 per cent of the 50,000 that visited the hospital last year were treated totally or in part by the fund.

Anyone familiar with the excellent work done by Children's Hospital should try and make this short but exciting tourney. Admission is $10 for adults and $5 for children, 9/10ths of each ticket is tax deductible.

Approximately 2,000 fans showed up last year. Among the big names playing this year will be Trevino and all-time great Gene Sarazen. A total of 54 pros and 162 amateurs will be in the field. First place for the pros will be $1,800 with the pro in the best team receiving $1,200. Total prize money is $18,000.

Marcor Inc. sponsors the prize money, so the gate receipts and the $600 each amateur pays to play provide the money for the hospital.

"It's a splendid opportunity to see players up close," points out Gardener.

Those who have pushed and shoved to see the pros play in former Saturday and Sunday Western Opens could appreciate that statement.

Where else can you make some little child well, enjoy a day in the fresh air, get a few autographs for your kids, see how golf's supposed to be played, walk a beautiful and uncrowded course and still receive a tax deduction?

Onwentsia's the answer.

The tournament committee suggests that those attending from the Herald area take the Tri-State north, exiting on Half Day Road. Head east to Skokie Highway. Take it north to Deerpath Road. Go east on it and turn right on Green Bay Road. The course is just a short distance in on your right.

It's the perfect way to end Western Open Week.

What's behind boys-only rules in Little League?

(Second of two parts.)

by IRA BERKOW

NEW YORK — Enough doctors have voiced the opinion that the Little League is living in the dark ages if it thinks baseball is any more harmful to girls than to boys.

And enough citizens, along with the U.S. Constitution, say that there should be equal opportunity regardless of sex. So why does the International Congress of Little League refuse to allow girls to play?

"Tradition," says Robert Silrett, spokesman for the Little League, at its headquarters in Williamsport, Pa.

"Male chauvinism," says Dr. Adele Hoffman, head of New York University pediatrician. "To keep the status quo," says William Anshel, president of the Ypsilanti, Mich., youth league, formerly "Little League" before its charter was revoked this spring by Williamsport for allowing 12-year-old Carolyn King to play on one of its teams.

The official Little League has been granted a federal charter under an Act of Congress, which gives it "prestige," according to Silrett, but it also makes Little League, Inc., tax-exempt.

What does this mean? It means that the Little League officials have a pretty good financial deal, according to Marty Ralovsky, who has just finished lengthy research on a book on the Little League due out in February.

The Little League offices receive an average of $68 a league from about 8,500 leagues in 31 countries (more than half a million dollars). There are 60 employees in the Williamsport office, about 40 being secretaries, the other League officials.

Silrett refuses to tell reporters what the individual salaries are. He says that that is not public information, even though the League is sanctioned by Congress.

When Ralovsky called Little League president Peter J. McGovern and asked him about salary, McGovern said it was none of his business.

Ralovsky went to Washington to find out more financial information about Little League and discovered that McGovern's salary is $25,000 a year plus expenses.

Ralovsky contends that allowing girls to play would in the eyes of the tradition-bound League officials diminish the prestige of the post-season tournaments and the World Series, held in Williamsport. "And that would diminish the profits from attendance, which are great," said Ralovsky.

Bill Fancher wins two-mile at Niles

Bill Fancher of Maine North won over Bill Gabriel of Niles North in the high school two-mile run last Friday at Niles West high school. Fancher ran 10:05.3.

Jim Keane of Maine East and Dan Morgan of Highland Park both cleared 12-6 in pole vault but Morgan earned first place on fewer misses.

Maria Brown of Maine East won the girls' triple jump with a 27-1 leap.

Cross-country, track and field events are staged at 6:15 p.m. every Friday at Niles West, located on Oakton Street near the Edens Expressway in Skokie.

Events are open to everyone regardless of age.

IS JACKIE ADAMS, 8, of Attleboro, Mass., one of a future wave of Little League girls?

The pressures for girls to play in the Little League is part of the "Women's 14th atmosphere," according to Silrett. He says that the pressure has been minimal but it apparently has been great enough for Little League officials to at least give lip service to starting a girls' softball league.

However, that does not deal with the problem of a girl wanting to play in the Little League now.

"It seems, and this is a personal opinion, that there is a good bit of male chauvinism in the Little League," said Dr. Hoffman. "It makes life extremely confusing and difficult for some people when they are threatened by a changing of traditional roles."

Dr. Hoffman says she is more concerned about the most frequent Little League injury, shoulder and elbow problems incurred from throwing, and is also concerned about the psychic traumas induced by regimentation, parental pressures, and unfit supervision in youth programs.

But Dr. Joseph Torg, chief of orthopedic surgery at St. Christopher's Hospital for Children in Philadelphia, writes in an article in the new magazine, "The Physician and Sportsmedicine": "There exists today among development pediatricians a consensus that the personality of the preadolescent should be guarded from excessive demands and responsibilities."

"To do otherwise is to invite antisocial behavior in later years. Therefore, to subject the preadolescent to the demands inherent in high structured competitive athletic programs is to rob him of the essence of a carefree childhood."

Structured program or not, authoritarian coaches or not, backstage parents or not, kids still want to play in the Little League because in too many places it's the only game in town.

Meanwhile, Carolyn King is playing center field in the Ypsilanti kids league. As of this writing she had been to bat 10 times, drew four walks and got one hit.

When an opposing player was asked what he would do if Carolyn came sliding hard into second base, trying to break up a double play, he said, "I'd knock her on her fanny, just like she'd do to me."

Viva la difference is a phrase foreign to the kids in the Ypsilanti league.

Hopkins tough in clutch in 3-1 victory

Heights triumphs; holds off Lion rallies

by TOM CARKEEK

Arlington Heights Post 208 drew in a deep breath and held it for what seemed an eternity as they withstood two Logan Square rallies in the final three innings and wiggled and squirmed to a 3-1 decision over the Lions Tuesday night at St. Victor.

It was the second victory in the last four days for Post 208 over Logan Square. Lloyd Meyer's crew socked it to the Lions 6-4 in the semi-finals of the Bloomington Tournament Saturday. However, the two must tangle at least twice more this season, so the mythical city championship does not yet belong to Post 208.

Logan Square, struggling to stay in contention in the young Ninth district season, watched its league record sink to 0-4 as pitcher Mike Cook, who deserved a better fate, lost for the fourth time this season. Cook's previous three losses have come on a three-hitter, a 1-0 game in which he struck out 13, and a six-hit, eight-strikeout performance.

But Arlington's Jim Hopkins mixed his pitches well enough to fool 10 Logan batters on strikes. He gave up six hits as Post 208 went to 2-0 in the league and 5-4 overall, but three were scratch infield safeties.

Hopkins worked his way out of two frightening jams, in the fifth inning and again in the seventh, to preserve Arlington's triumph. After Post 208 had gone ahead 3-1 in the top of the fifth, Hopkins gave up an infield hit to the Lions' Bob Foster, who went three-for-four. Ed Collins followed with a ground rule double that would have scored Foster had it stayed in play.

Then pinch-hitter Steve Bobowski lined a shot that third baseman George Vukovich speared miraculously and nearly doubled off Foster. Hopkins intentionally passed dangerous Stan Bobowski to load the bases with one out, but he got Pat Rooney to bounce into a rally-snuffing double play.

In the seventh, Cook was safe on Greg Hauptley's boot and Foster followed with an infield squibbler that put men on first and second with nobody out. But again Hopkins rose to strike out Collins on a full count, get Steve Bobowski on a called third and force Stan Bobowski to ground out to first to curtail the threat and end the game.

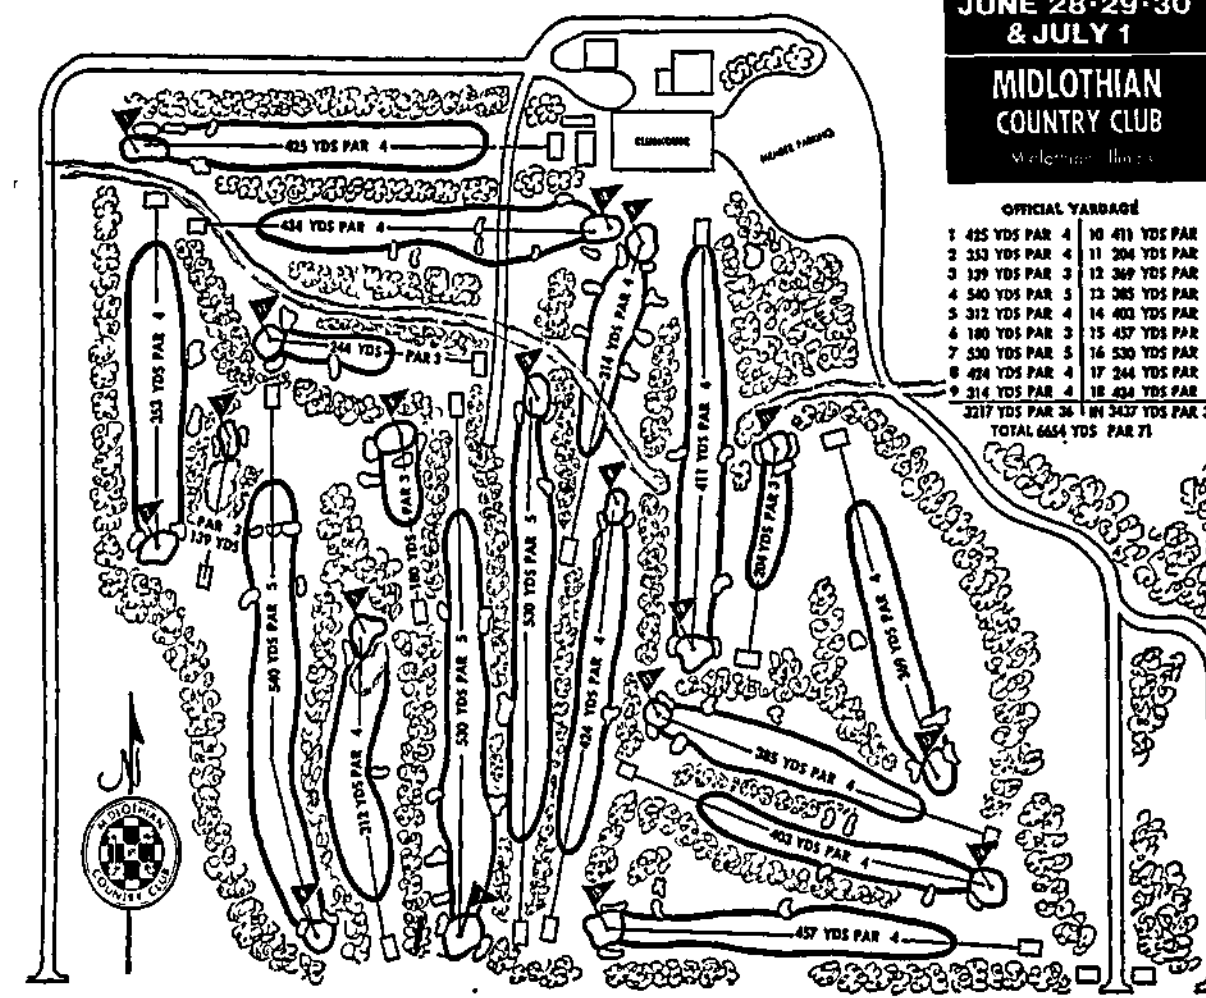

Both squads tallied in the first, and it remained 1-1 until the fifth. Dar Townsend led off the Arlington half of the inning with a base hit to right. He was immediately replaced by pinch-runner Allie Weichers. Hopkins popped out attempting to sacrifice, but Bobby Harth clubbed a double to left-center. Weichers tried to score from first and probably would have been out at the plate had not shortstop Jim Bucaro's relay throw sailed over catcher Tom Chapman's head. Harth later scored on Mark Leonard's RBI single.

Arlington opened the scoring in the top of the first when Harth drew a walk, stole second and came home on Leonard's line drive hit to center.

Logan Square got its only run in the first as Foster got a solid hit to center, Collins sacrificed him to second and Rooney's right-field single scored him.

Look for low scores

CHICAGO — What was to have happened four years ago and failed probably will happen starting today when golf's touring pro contest with Midlothian Country Club in the $175,000 Western Open.

Four years ago the tournament was played on the same course, rather short at 6,654 yards, and the field was supposed to rip up the well-manicured links which features numerous traps and tricky rolling greens to protect against par-busting scores.

But in 1969 it rained on three of the four days the tournament was scheduled, with so much water that there was casual water on most of the fairways and at least half the greens. Thus the distance from tee to green was magnified, approaches stopped where they hit, and fast greens were deadly slow.

But this week the course was playing short after a long spell of comparative dryness, the greens were lightning fast, and while the rough has been left to grow for more than two weeks, it will not place an extreme penalty on wild shots. The fairways were lush, guaranteeing no problems with accurate tee shots.

Most of the field of 147 got their only look at the layout Wednesday in the pro-am tourney preceding the tournament opening. While the course was open for practice Tuesday, "name" players chose instead to rest or practice at some other course or driving range, and only a few of the contestants of lesser fame went out to try Midlothian.

Northwest 'Y' girls capture team honors

The Northwest Suburban 'Y' Girls Track Club captured team honors Sunday in the 39th Annual B'nai B'rith track meet at Niles North High School.

The Northwest girls, a consistent power in track, compiled 59 points in the competition with more than 500 athletes from Illinois.

Girls on the championship squad are Herald area residents and attend schools in the Northwest suburbs. They have built a winning reputation in track.

In the 14-and-over division the Northwest 880 yard relay team of Trudi Rebsamen, Melody Miller, Kathy LaPorte, and Diane Havir took first place.

Ms. Rebsamen came back with a first in the 220 yard dash. Ms. Miller ruled the 880 yard run, and Ms. LaPorte was a winner in the long jump. Ms. Havir took second in the 220 yard dash, and Ms. LaPorte came back with a third in the 220.

In the 12-13 age division Northwest won with a 410 relay of Renee Gromke, Liz Boesen, Dawn Moriarty, and Karen LaPorte.

In the individual events Ms. Gromke was first in the long jump and second in the 440 yard dash; Ms. Boesen was first in the 440; Ms. Moriarty was first in the long jump.

Joan Boesen took third place in the 220

Ms. Hebein birdies seventh at Orchard

Rosemary Hebein of Arlington Heights shot a birdie on the seventh hole recently in the Tuesday morning Swinging Ladies Golf League at Old Orchard Country Club.

Ms. Hebein used an eight-iron from approximately 125 yards out for her approach shot which found its way into the cup. Her shot was witnessed by Lorraine Medel of Mount Prospect.

Verna Streechlow of Arlington Heights shot a par on the eighth hole. Her effort, which ended with a 25-foot putt, was witnessed by Joan Kennedy, also of Arlington Heights.

yard dash in the 10-11 age division, and Susan Rebsamen was first in the 220 yard dash and long jump in the 9-and-under class.

Mid-Teen highlights

Weber's rally shocks Allen

Bill Finnins started one rally with a double and hurled four innings of one-hit ball to lead Weber past the Allens, 9-0, this week in Des Moines Mid-Teen play.

Finnins came to the mound in the fourth when Allens was belting Schroeder from the box. He'd given up three runs in the third. The Allens scored five in the fourth off the combined offerings of Finnins and Schroeder.

That made it an apparent romp, as Weber fought from an 8-0 deficit to secure the win. They tallied three in the fifth and six in the seventh when Allens' starter Rich Slapke finally folded.

Allens began mounting its big lead with three runs on as many hits in the third. Rick Felde singled and Slapke walked before Jim Olsen's single produced one run. Then Jeff Myers doubled home two more runs.

Schroeder was gone in the fourth after giving a barrage of hits. John O'Connor and Felde singled before a walk to Slapke loaded the bags.

That brought up Olsen whose bloop double to right scored three runs and gave the Allens a 6-0 lead. After Myers walked, Tom Godowski knocked home the final two runs.

Finnins got Weber going in the fifth with his double, then moved up when Ron Drifke reached on an error. Jeff Schwarz's single made it an 8-1 game. After Steve Semler walked, Doug Unzicker and Carl Metzger singled home one run apiece.

The score remained at 8-3 until the visitors' seventh when Weber erupted for six runs, knocking Slapke from the mound and bringing on Olsen who tossed one out.

Jack Wilson and Austin Stanton doubled home two runs apiece. Unzicker sent home the eighth and ninth runs with a single.

The other other Weber hit that inning was an infield single by Schroeder who was safe trying to sacrifice. Metzger and Schultz reached on errors. Semler walked as did Unzicker who began the rally with a free pass.

MUELLER SHARP IN 9-3 WIN
Al Mueller struck out eight, pitched a complete game and collected three hits in four at-bats to lead Bantam over First National, 9-3.

There were only eight hits in the game, five by Bantam, as First National committed five errors and Bantam four.

Mueller yielded two runs on two hits in the fourth and one run on a hit in the sixth. At the plate, he banged out two singles and a triple.

Bantam picked up single runs in the first and third sandwiched around a three-run second. They scored four runs off losing pitcher Nick Favia in the fourth.

Rich Fredons got Bantam going when he singled to open the game, then moved around the bases without benefit of another hit. In the second, a walk to Fredons plus singles by Mike Gavin and Mueller produced three runs and a 4-0 lead.

John Jung doubled home Winnie Bellan in the third. Four more runs on just two hits in the fourth put Bantam comfortably ahead, 9-0. The blows were Gavin's single and Mueller's triple.

Two Bantam errors plus hits by Bill George Poulos and Frank Vala enabled First National to move within 9-2 after four innings. El Schletter doubled home a run in the sixth.

All nine Bantam runs and five hits were credited against Favia. He struck out three and walked nine. In relief, Bill George Poulos struck out one and walked one during two innings.

JOHNSON TIES KUNKEL, 5-5

Jim Willett of Kunkel pitched no-hit baseball through six innings until Johnson attacked him for four runs on as many hits in the seventh as the clubs battled to the Mid-Teen's first tie this summer.

The game ended at 5-5, called after seven innings due to darkness. Kunkel came from a one-run deficit on two runs in the seventh against Johnson's Dave Labickas after leading most of the way.

Willett and Labickas matched no-hitters until the fifth when Kunkel scored three runs on three hits. Each team had scored once previously without a hit.

Johnson went up 1-0 in the first when Ralph Amello walked, stole the next two bases and scored on a wild pitch. Kunkel made it 1-1 in the fourth when Willett scored on a balk.

Doubles by Dan Myska and Hillner plus Sheets' single helped give Kunkel a 4-1 spread after five. Amello, catching Labickas, made two throwing errors during the inning.

Johnson finally got to Willett in the seventh, sending eight men to the plate and scoring four. Dave Hawking doubled and stayed put when Rich Smek struck out. Gary Slipke singled Hawking to third before a Mike Adams walk loaded the bags.

Paul Moughamian cleared them with a triple, tying the game at 4-4. He scored on a wild pitch. Labickas followed with a single but couldn't advance when Mike Kelly struck out and Rick Nicolai popped up.

Kunkel came within 90 feet of winning as Geimer was stranded at third after Myska scored the tying run on a wild pitch.

Shannahan opened the Kunkel seventh with a single, then was wiped from the basepaths when Myska forced him. The double play relay attempt went wild so Myska got second. He stole third and tied the game on Labickas' wild pitch.

Geimer followed with a single, stole second and moved to third on Hillner's out. But he stayed put when Kalchuck grounded out.

Willett's no-hit success through six innings was no fluke as he struck out 14 batters and walked just four. Labickas had three strikeouts and five walks.

Wheeling's streak ends in summer league baseball

"I thought that the next hitter was going to make an out," said Ron DeBolt, Wheeling's head baseball coach.

He kept thinking that for nine batters before he got his wish in summer league baseball Tuesday evening.

"Everything fell in that inning," he added, speaking of the second for Dundee. It was an inning like no other he had ever witnessed. An inning he would like to quickly forget.

Kevin Gough, a freshman pitcher, blanked hosting Dundee the first inning and continued that pace in the second. He retired the first two batters. Then it happened. An eight-run inning after two were out!

Gough went the distance, shutting out Dundee the remaining four frames, but the damage was done. Wheeling battled but lost its chance to remain unbeaten, 8-0.

The Wildcats came into the contest with a 7-0 mark.

John Carlberg put Wheeling out in front in the top of the second with a solo home run. Following the disastrous bottom of the inning, George Kange helped put his team back in a winning frame of mind with a three-run homer in the third.

Only two more runs — coming in the fourth and sixth — scored after that, however, both on errors.

Gough gave up seven hits and two walks in the second. The other five innings he scattered four hits.

ARLINGTON TOPS GROVE

Arlington's "second team" picked up its first victory of the summer league baseball season by trouncing Elk Grove 11-7 Tuesday night.

The Cardinals fell behind 5-2 after two innings but a four-run third put them in the lead to stay. Terry Gray belted a two-run homer and then, after Elk Grove starter Scott Walker had walked the bases full, Ken Larsen drove in two more with a single.

Arlington loaded the bases in the fourth. An infield error scored one run, Dan Grant walked to force one in and Larsen's base hit drove in the third and last run of the inning.

Two more Cardinals tallied in the sixth when pitcher Jim Busby doubled home two teammates to wrap up Arlington scoring.

Arlington had gone ahead 2-0 in the first when three walks loaded the sacks and Gray responded with a two-run single. Elk Grove got one back in the bottom of the inning when Jim Rezzuto singled and then came all the way around when two errors were committed on his steal of second base.

The Grens enjoyed their biggest outburst in the second when Dave Millner clouted a two-run homer, followed by Brian Samoshy reaching on an error, stealing second and scoring on Mike O'Malley's single. Elk Grove got its last run of the frame when Dave Ray doubled and Scott Scholten singled him home.

The Grenadiers added two more in the seventh when Paul Gulliksen and Brian Solomon both were safe on errors. A ground out scored Gulliksen and Solomon tallied on a passed ball.

Busby relieved Arlington starter Tom Langer in the third and registered the win. Walker took the loss for Elk Grove.

FREND IN ROMP

The 10-run rule had to be invoked to stop Fremd's massacre of Forest View when the Vikings led 13-1 after five innings of play in a Tuesday night summer league game.

Fremd scored five times in the third, posted another five-spot in the fourth and got three in the fifth. The Vikes collected five in the third on a mishmash of plays. Jeff Schroeder knocked in the first run when he was safe on an error. After Jeff Brisson walked, Schroeder tallied on a fielder's choice. Jeff Hanisch and Bob Burke singled to fill the bases, and two consecutive wild pitches brought home Brisson and Hanisch. Mitch Gullett's RBI single drove in Burke to cap the third-inning scoring.

Schroeder opened the fourth by again reaching on an error. Brisson tripled him in and when Hanisch was safe on an error, Brisson scored. Burke's triple drove in Hanisch to make it 8-0. Mark Otteman's fielder's choice scored Burke, and Otteman came around on another Gullett RBI hit.

Brisson and Hanisch walked in the fifth, and Burke's single scored one. Then a wild pitch and a centerfielder's error tallied the Vikings' 12th and 13th runs.

Forest View got its only run in the fifth when Larry Featherstone walked and scored on Mike Hopkins' double. Hanisch was the winning pitcher with seven strikeouts in five innings.

MUSTANG RALLY TRIMS HUSKIES

Hersey tallied one run in the opening inning against Rolling Meadows without benefit of a hit and made the marker stand up until the fifth until the Mustangs exploded for five and coasted to a 7-1 victory.

While inching ever closer to the .500 mark at 3-4-1, Meadows finally solved Hersey's Steve Spaccarelli who had thrown zeroes at the Mustangs for four frames.

Hersey jumped in front, 1-0 in the first after Tom Vetta drew a walk, scampered all the way to third on Mark Krause's sacrifice bunt and tallied on a passed ball.

It wasn't until the fifth that Meadows began hunching its nine hits for the game. Bill Cannon singled, Joe Ripplinger walked and Glen Zawacki beat out an infield hit to load the bases. Mike Saugling and Scott Green answered the no-out challenge with back-to-back two-run doubles while Dan Borland capped the rally with a run-producing single.

The Mustangs clinched the decision for five-inning starter Keith Goecke with two more in the sixth on Green's two-run single which enabled Bob Schmidt to mop up effectively over the final two stanzas for the save. Vetta, Dave Mischowicz and John Caruso notched Hersey's hits.

Hoffman Estates pounds Bartlett twice

Bartlett never had a chance.

Behind enormous home run hitting and stingy pitching, Hoffman Estates pounded Bartlett, 10-2 and 10-0, during a Babe Ruth doubleheader this week. The spurt left Hoffman with an 8-1 record, the loss to Hanover Park.

Jeff Ironside hit three solo shots during the twinbill to lead a 22-hit attack that produced six home runs in only 12 innings. The second game was called after five innings due to the 10-run rule.

Ironside had leadoff homers in the third and sixth innings of the opening game. He hit No. 3 of the day in the nighttime third inning.

Mike Rossman, Marty Bernau and Ironside got Hoffman to a 3-2 advantage in the opening game after three innings, all on solo homers. Rossman made it a 4-2 game in the fourth when he singled home Mike McNally.

Another run tallied in the fifth on Tim Davey's RBI single of Bernau who had doubled. Hoffman Estates broke the game to 8-2 in the sixth on Ironside's second homer and two RBIs by Dave Merrigan. The final two runs crossed in the seventh on no hits.

Bartlett picked up its only two runs of the day, one apiece in the first and third, off starting and winning pitcher Ken Hubbard. He gave a homer to Ken Dresser in the first and one run on a fielder's choice after three walks in the third.

Hubbard went the distance for his win, hurling a two-hitter. He recorded 14 strikeouts and walked six.

Bartlett managed just two hits in the second game off starting and winning pitcher Frank Hannon. He yielded singles in the fourth and fifth.

Hoffman, which scored in every inning of both games, put a single run on the board after one inning when Hubbard doubled and scored on Bill Gavron's triple.

It became 3-0 after solo homers by Ken Gast in the second and Ironside, his third, an inning later.

Gast's single and two walks loaded the bags in the fourth and Rossman who singled home two runners for a 5-0 lead. Another walk loaded the bags again. This time, Hubbard stroked a two-run single and it was 7-0.

Hoffman's final three runs, all coming in the fifth, were produced from Hannon's squeeze bunt and Rossman's two-run single.

Chairman Akira Kitano raised the chairman's gavel and... Whack! Whack! Whack! The termite knows nothing of Robert's Rules of Order, Kitano said, but they can be ga-veled to submission in smashing fashion.

NOT TONIGHT, DEAR: According to a research team at the University of Southern California, you are least likely to do it before breakfast, and most likely to do it after lunch. The team is trying to find out when most people catch colds.

HE GETS WISH: Ronald Apin, 61, of Gloucester, England, smashed a window in protest against being unemployed, then elected to go for trial before a higher court. He told the judge he was tired of the magistrates court where sentences were limited to only six months and that unless he could get a job he wanted to go to prison for a longer time. The judge then jailed him for nine months.

GOOD TIMING: The National Weather Service recently staged a ceremony at the Tallahatchie County (Miss.) West District School to note that all 800 pupils who were inside were spared in April when a tornado wrecked the building. Three hours later, another tornado struck. Once again, no one was hurt. The ruins were empty.

HE'S NO ROBIN HOOD: Mayor George Lucraft of Brighton, England, did not know his own strength when he fired the first shot at the area archery club's tournament. He drew the bow and aimed at a target 105 yards away. The arrow soared over the fence and hit a bus 35 yards further on. The bus driver returned the arrow and then shot straight to the police station.

The Lighter Side

by Dick West

WASHINGTON — Disclosure that the federal government has paid about $1.3 million for improvements to President Nixon's homes in California and Florida has generated a new outbreak of tush-tushing among administration critics.

The fact that the improvements were requested by the Secret Service for security purposes appears to have made little impression on those deploring the expenditures.

"Here's a $1,950 item for pruning trees," my friend Ernie Spadecaller pointed out as he was looking over the list of bills the government paid at San Clemente. "How could that have anything to do with security?"

I SAID, "Ernie, you obviously have little or no concept of what security for the President entails."

"It very definitely is one of the responsibilities of the Secret Service to protect the President from falling tree limbs. That can only be done by pruning the dead wood."

"OK," Spadecaller said, "let's assume that was a legitimate expenditure. But how about this $525 for repairing the gazebo?"

"Ernie," I said, "you couldn't believe the pitfalls that await a President in a dilapidated gazebo."

"What's so dangerous about a little tin musical instrument?"

"You are thinking about a kazoo," I said. "A kazoo is an open air summer-house. If you don't keep those things fixed up, you're courting disaster."

DENIED HIS LITTLE triumph, Spadecaller became sullen. He scanned the list in silence a few minutes, then pounced again.

"Aha! What about this $476 for painting the flagpole?"

"It's reassuring to learn the Secret Service was alert to that hazard," I said. "An unpainted flagpole could quickly rust in the salt air and, thus weakened, topple over on the President as he was raising the colors."

Spadecaller sulked several minutes longer, then said "I suppose you can rationalize a security angle for this $460 bill for fertilizer, too?"

"Yes, indeed. You certainly wouldn't want the President to be bitten by a tsetse fly. One way to help prevent that is to cover the property with Venus-fly-traps. Those plants need a lot of fertilizer."

"But there aren't any tsetse flies in southern California," Spadecaller protested.

I said, "That proves the security system is working. That $460 was money well spent."

Social Security and You

Q. I am receiving widow's social security payments. If I remarry, will my payments stop? Also, may I qualify for payments on my new husband's social security?

A. If you remarry, you may continue receiving widow's payments but at a reduced rate. A remarried widow will receive 50 per cent of her deceased husband's social security amount. You may receive payments on your new husband's social security if it would be more than your widow's payments.

Q. How much should my employer hold out for social security?

A. In 1973, your employer should take out 5.85 per cent for social security up to the maximum of $10,800 in earnings. The highest social security tax any worker can pay this year is $631.80.

Disability benefits on rise

More than 40,000 disabled workers getting both workmen's compensation and social security disability benefits will get larger social security checks because of a recent change in the law, according to Norman R. Thoresen, manager of the Arlington Heights social security office.

Combined social security and workmen's compensation monthly payments still can't be over 80 per cent of the worker's average monthly earnings before he became disabled, Thoresen said, but the new law adds another way to figure the average earnings.

"His average monthly earnings can now be determined by his highest earning in any one year of the 5 years before he became disabled," he said.

PREVIOUSLY, the average had to be based on earnings in 5 consecutive years, or, if it worked out to a higher figure, the number of years used to figure the amount of the worker's social security disability benefits.

To get social security disability payments a worker must be severely disabled before 65 and unable to work for a year or more and must have a certain amount of work credit under social security.

For more information about how workmen's compensation affects social security payments, call, write or visit any social security office.

Even at college level, pupils need reading help

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Five million job hunters can't even read the help wanted ads.

In junior colleges, 30-50 per cent of entering students need reading help.

More than 20 per cent of Americans 16 or older cannot understand at least 10 per cent of standard application questions — for a drivers license, a personal bank loan, or medical aid.

These are among the 43 "horrendous" facts unearthed by the National Reading Center to support its warning that America faces a reading crisis. NRC said 15,000 new teachers and $100 million a year are needed to provide reading help for grade school children alone.

HARD-WORKED teachers generally cannot take on the extra work, and just about no one thinks taxpayers would welcome a new drain on their pocketbooks. As an alternative, NRC decided to appeal for help from business and industries. It also set up a specially trained volunteer teaching corps.

One upshot was that the nation's largest grocery chain, Safeway, joined forces with NRC in an effort to emphasize the important role of parents in preparing children to learn to read.

Specially imprinted milk cartons are being distributed in stores across the country with a choice of such messages as "Milk, your child's key to nutrition; Books, your child's key to learning," and a cartoon of a mother and child entering a library.

Cooperating in the milk carton campaign were the National Dairy Council, Milk Industry Foundation, and Exo-Cell-O Corp., manufacturer of the cartons. The campaign involved Safeway stores in 21 states, plus an additional 36 smaller dairy firms distributing through grocery chain and independent stores in 26 states.

THE NATIONAL Right to Read program is a joint effort of the Federal Office of Education, concerned primarily with in-school improvements, and NRC, which stimulates private support in preschool and out-of-school populations.

The only step necessary to enlist NRC's aid in the volunteer teaching program is a formal request from the state education department and such statewide organizations as the PTA, American Library Association, or Urban League.

First a planning meeting with NRC staff is held in the state. Sponsoring organizations then help assemble 100 trainers, usually active or retired teachers, and 50 coordinators from local communities. A two-day workshop for trainers and coordinators then is held by NRC staff in a central part of the state.

TRAINERs are taught how to use the pamphlets and other teaching materials while coordinators are coached in recruiting and organizing volunteers. Each workshop can prepare 100 trainers from 12 to 15 communities in a state.

The trainer then returns to the home community and during a year can instruct 100 volunteer reading tutors, a total of 10,000 volunteers prepared in a state during one year. If all goes well, to help primary grade pupils in neighborhood schools. Each tutor receives 20 hours of training, including seven of practical experience with children.

Trainer workshops were carried out in 1972 in California, Colorado, Connecticut, Delaware, Georgia, Illinois, Indiana, Kansas, Louisiana, Maryland, Nevada, New York, North and South Carolina, Oregon, Pennsylvania, Texas, Vermont, Washington and Wisconsin.

A schedule of other states now is being set up for the first half of 1973.

Children becoming more and more exposed to drugs, pesticides

Mothers carry poisons home from supermarket

by FREDERICK M. WINSHIP

NEW YORK (UPI) — American children are being increasingly exposed to poisoning by drugs and pesticides, according to a report prepared for the American Medical Association.

Dr. Jay M. Arena, professor of pediatrics at the Duke University Medical Center, Durham, N.C., told a press conference connected with a symposium on child poisoning at the AMA's 122nd annual meeting that an estimated 2 million accidental poisoning cases take place in the United States a year. Doctors report about 5,000 deaths among these cases, of which 2,000 are children.

"But even these figures are probably low, because many poisoning cases are diagnosed as something else and only about 300 of the 550 Poison Control Centers in the United States report to the central agency in Washington," Arena said. "Parents often don't report cases of child poisoning to anyone."

ARENA BLAMED doctors, in part, for the number of casualties, saying they failed to keep parents "in tune" with the growth and development of their children and their ability to get hold of poisonous household products. He described every child as "an explorer who wants to taste things."

"MOTHER BRINGS home a poison every time she goes shopping — a detergent, furniture cleaner, spot remover, or drain pipe cleansing agent," Arena said. "We have 1,000 products containing poisonous chemicals."

Since 1960 there has been a federal law making labeling of poisonous products mandatory, giving specific details of what the poison might do, and providing first aid instructions. It is administered by the Federal Trade Commission but, according to Arena, has not cut down significantly in the number of poisonous products available at the supermarket.

"NOBODY KNOWS about the law," he said. "Mothers don't read labels and children can't. Mothers at least should be comparing brands and buying the least toxic. Basically the problem is education. Why don't manufacturers give advice on safe storage of poisonous products in their television advertising? Because they think they'd lose business."

Arena said about 50 per cent of children who die from poisoning expire after taking overdoses of drugs such as aspirin and the other 50 per cent die from poisons in household products. He cited insecticides containing organic phosphates and red furniture polish as two of the chief culprits.

Therapy can help you cope with nagging demoralization

(This column is presented by Forest Hospital in Des Plaines, a fully accredited 135-bed psychiatric hospital known for its intensive programs in psychiatric treatment, research, education and community service.)

You feel lost and alone. You're very depressed and anxious about something. You feel your life has no meaning, and no one cares about you or your life. You are facing a problem you feel you cannot solve. According to Dr. Jerome Frank, you are "demoralized."

Dr. Frank, a professor of psychiatry at Johns Hopkins Hospital in Baltimore, describes the feeling of demoralization as "the state of mind people are in when they find themselves faced with a problem, and other people around you on whom you rely also feel that they should help you solve it. It's a state of mind we all know in various degrees and intensities."

"If it's really bad, people feel hopeless and helpless, and isolated; they don't feel they're getting enough support from their environment," says Dr. Frank. "And since closeness to other people has something to do with the feeling that life has meaning and that you're worthwhile, that isolation also often creates a feeling that life is meaningless."

WHAT SORT OF problem causes you to finally seek help with a psychiatrist? Perhaps the problem lies in marital relations, such as not getting along with your spouse, or maybe you have difficulty holding a job, or you have a hard time managing your children. Or perhaps you might have a symptom such as being very anxious or very depressed, which are direct expressions of being demoralized. Or you may even have neurotic symptoms like fears or thoughts you can't get out of your mind.

Accompanied by these problems will be demoralization, a feeling that you just can't solve the problem anymore. Your anxiety seems to last for a long time and take hold of your very being. Sometimes you can talk to someone, or take a little vacation, or take a sleeping pill and things just seem to work out. But it's those times that the problem lingers and hurts that you come in to see a psychiatrist. In very severe cases you may even hear voices or see things or feel you're being persecuted.

Dr. Frank, who has authored the book "Persuasion and Healing," thinks simply coming to see a psychiatrist will help you. "It's the relationship between someone who is ostensibly competent and trained and is a prestige figure who thinks enough of you to take you seriously. That's a great big boost right there."

"You feel a warmth and a trust in your relationship with the psycho-therapist. You receive the attention and interest that you feel is lacking in your life. You get over that awful feeling of isolation, and once again feel a part of the world around you. But you're also in a controlled atmosphere, in which you can experiment with your feelings and not have to defend yourself."

YOUR PSYCHOTHERAPIST "will accept you no matter what you do," says Dr. Frank. "You're protected." By talking to a therapist you can once again feel defined. There is something very scary about not knowing what's going on, and the therapist can help you to label your problem and to make sense out of the horrible feelings you're having. By going each week to see your therapist you gain "success experiences." In other words, your confidence is restored in yourself, and you feel capable of solving your problem.

How do you know when you should seek help? "There is no real answer to that," according to Dr. Frank. "People seek help when they feel they need help. They usually shop around a bit, and finally come to an expert and he can then size up whether they need help or not."

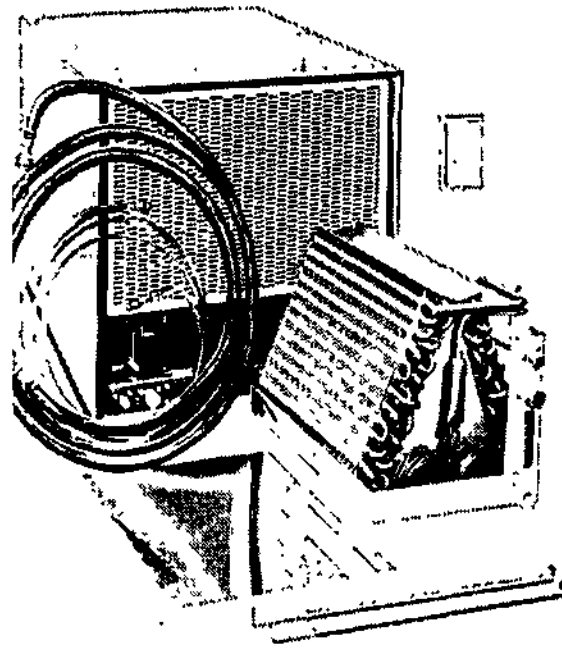

Dr. Frank thinks a communication breakdown is very often the cause of the problem in that you don't know how to communicate your feelings to the person with whom you should be communicating. Through therapy, you can learn how to be more at ease in communicating. Group therapy is very good at doing this.

How can you learn to cope better with life as it is around you and the everyday problems that are constantly being presented? "Well," says Dr. Frank, "Guess

I can't do any better than Socrates when he said 'The unexamined life is not worth living.' I think you learn to cope by examining what you're doing and trying to learn from it so you do better the next time."

The Doctor Says

by Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

Dear Dr. Lamb — I read recently that if you were on a crash diet program for several weeks, where your food intake and calorie intake is extremely low, your body becomes attuned to burning pure calories. Then as soon as you begin to eat normally, regardless of what you eat, you gain weight. By normally, I do not mean going back to your old eating habits, because I know that would make you gain all over again.

Also, I would like to know if calories are really important or not. For example, does a piece of cake and a piece of lean meat, containing the same amount of calories, have the same effect on your body as far as maintaining your weight is concerned.

Dear Reader — Whenever you sharply decrease your calorie intake the body metabolism shuts down, decreasing the calories used and the rate of weight loss. This is nature's mechanism of enabling man to survive when food is not abundant. If you are lost in the Arctic, this can be rather handy. It's not so handy if you are dieting to lose weight. When the metabolism is shut down the energy level is zilih. To help counteract this, if you want to lose weight, it is better to maintain an active physical program which stimulates your metabolism.

For a good, sensible weight control program you should decrease the calories only a reasonable amount and increase your physical activity. This will enable you to eat a good, normal, healthy diet while losing weight slowly. You need to develop nutrition habits to keep the excess fat off, not just simply to lose it.

Now, about regaining weight after you've stopped the diet. This is particularly apt to happen on the low carbony-drate diets, such as the recently popularized Atkins' diet or its preceding versions, such as Tallier's "Calories Don't Count," the erroneously called Air Force Diet or Mayo's Diet. Much of the initial weight loss on low carbohydrate diets is from loss of water. The kidneys lose needed body salt and water, not just fat. This sometimes causes weakness. When you resume eating a more normal diet to include important carbohydrate sources, such as vegetables, cereals, raw fruits, or even milk, the body chemistry returns to normal level, and you regain the normal salt and water. This rapid weight loss that's been evident on the scales, and sometimes evident in the haggard, sunken face, is quickly replaced. The effect is much the same as watering a plant that hasn't gotten water for several weeks — if it survived.

YES, CALORIES do count. There is no magic that enables one to avoid the principle that what you weigh depends on the calories in (food) balanced against the calories out (activity). It's just like a checking account, and you either have to lose the calories through the digestive tract (as may occur with an illness such as an infectious diarrhea), or else you have to burn up the calories you take in if they're not to be stored as fat.

Yes, 100 calories in cake has the same weight gaining effect as 100 calories of meat. A calorie is a calorie. Since lean meat is over 70 per cent water it does contain fewer calories per ounce than cake. Incidentally, many commercial cakes and those made by ordinary home recipes contain as much fat, or more, as may be found in lean meat.

U.S. inches ahead to metric system

Chances are that Miss America 1983 will be a tall blonde, measuring 92-62-90.

That's the shape of things to come as the United States moves — centimeter by centimeter — toward joining 90 per cent of the world's people who use the metric system of weight and measurement.

The metric system uses the simple "Times Ten" approach: 10 millimeters make a centimeter, 100 centimeters make a meter, 1,000 meters make a kilometer.

It's easier than multiplying 12 inches to get a foot, three feet to get a yard, 5,280 feet to get a mile.

BUT A RECENT poll shows that people not familiar with the metric system — and that means most people — don't like it (73 per cent). Among people with a great deal of knowledge of the system, almost the exact reverse is true — 74 per cent like it.

A whopping 82 per cent of non-high school graduates oppose the metric system, while only 14 per cent of the college graduates polled don't like it.

Even so, General Motors Corp. announced it has begun converting all its production facilities to the metric system. And Ford begins production of the first U.S. metric engine next month when it starts assembling a 2.3-liter power plant for the Mustang at its Lima, Ohio, plant.

Foreign car owners know that tinkering requires special wrenches — metric tools — to fit nuts and bolts made overseas.

California's public schools will go metric in the fall of 1976, according to state school superintendent Wilson Riles. New science and math textbooks are being prepared. Films and classes are being devised to help adults think in metric units, too.

To school kids it means no more fractions. To national school authorities it means saving more than $700 million each year by simplifying arithmetic instruction. The estimated cost of converting the nation to the metric system — $11 billion — could be paid in less than 16 years through savings in grade school education alone.

ANOTHER BENEFIT is the country's ability to compete in world markets where the metric system is standard. "We no longer set market specifications," says W. Andrew Wright of Sun Oil Co. "The situation is now reversed and is becoming one of the prominent factors in the trade imbalance."

Dr. A. P. Mattay of TRW Inc., Los Angeles, agrees. "The United States, while producing 33 per cent of the world's goods with only six per cent of the world's population, is nevertheless losing ground rapidly in foreign marketplaces."

"Conversion to the metric system is not simply an economic problem, but a political must," he says.

The U.S. Congress passed a bill five years ago, starting the nation on its slow journey to conversion. (The metric system was legalized by Congress more than a century ago — in 1866 — but was not made mandatory.)

Conversion has been slow coming. In 309 B.C., the accepted unit of length was the Royal Cubit, the length of the king's arm. In 1324, the length of three dried barleycorns (the English inch) was another way of measuring distance.

The system of inches, pounds and miles began in England and was carried to the American colonies. Now even Great Britain will finish converting to metrics by 1974, leaving the U.S. as sole supporter of the old system.

So while Congress and industry pound away for conversion, the question is, will the public give a gram?

Scientists study Apollo instrument data

by BRUCE E. HICKS

HOUSTON (UPI) — Although most of the space agency's efforts are directed to Skylab, lunar scientists are just getting in high gear studying the wealth of data collected by a network of instruments left by Apollo explorers.

The five automated observatories, gathering data from the moon for 3 1/2 years, have been relaying information on moonquakes, the lunar atmosphere, meteoroid impacts, magnetic waves and the flow of heat up to the lunar surface.

Dr. David Strangway, acting chief of the planetary and earth sciences division at the Johnson Space Center, said scientists are just now delving into the information with an eye to interrelating the data from different instruments.

"Before, we took roughs of it, hitting the highlights and the spectacular things," Strangway said. "But, when you start putting it together, it's really spectacular, at least to us."

"WE BUILT A framework during the Apollo program," he said. "Now we're trying to put the little pieces into the frame."

Strangway said determining the moon's temperatures and a moonquake map are two of those pieces.

Data from the Apollo 15 and 17 instruments show the moon expelling much more heat than the earth for its smaller surface area.

"If the heat flow was standard throughout the moon, and not concentrated near the surface, it would be a very, very hot body," Strangway said. "The heat shows most of the radioactivity is near the surface."

He said that, through a network of four seismometers, scientists have put together a moonquake map, showing that almost all the activity is on the front side of the moon and concentrated along several zones.

STRANGWAY SAID HE expects the instruments to keep working for several years, although most had only a year's guaranteed life. The Apollo 12 scientific station, placed in the Ocean of Storms in November, 1969, is still operating. All are powered by nuclear generators.

"I see no reason why they won't keep going," he said. "There is some time in the future when it will quit, but we can't even guess when."

He said researchers were studying the lunar samples that were returned along with the instrument's data.

"With both together, we can learn a great deal more than we would have with either alone," he said.

"It's all added tremendously to what we know about the moon. The whole notion of the moon's structure came from the instruments."

"Before, we were worrying about getting the things there and getting them working. Now we have time to learn from what we have."

If you're mad or in love, saliva can be a real danger

NEW YORK (UPI) — In the opinion of ancient doctors either love or anger can make human saliva as dangerous as viper's snail, and recent research found similar constituents in the two.

But modern science is not about to prove the ancients were right, conceded Drs. Stephen Wotman and Irwain D. Mandel, who are deeply involved in saliva research as dental scientists.

"They're sure the human kind is dangerous only to sweets that melt in the mouth. However, they said, research evidence is mounting that it can be a chemical mirror of the state of the body."

It is still a cloudy mirror but there is progress in picking up its indicators of systemic disease. One revelation is that the composition of saliva from its two principal sources can differ.

One source is the parotid glands. There is one in front of and below each ear. The other is the submaxillary glands. There is one beneath each lower jaw.

WOTMAN AND MANDEL, working at the Columbia University School of Dental and Oral Surgery, have refined simple techniques for collecting them separately rather than relying on analysis of saliva pooled in the mouth.

Differences of flow rates as well as differences in composition can be meaningful, they said in their report to medical science in the journal, "Postgraduate Medicine."

For instance, varying flow rate of submaxillary saliva can indicate the probable course of a case of Bell's palsy, a disorder of a facial nerve.

Differences in chemical composition may help in diagnosing the most dangerous form of high blood pressure, essential hypertension and they may help in identifying subtle metabolic disorders arising from disordered secretions of the regulatory hormones of the adrenal glands.

Their scientific interest is in previously unrecognized qualities of salivary juices, apart from their well established work as digestive agents. They digest starches, they moisten and lubricate food while it is in the mouth, they dissolve some substances, permitting the mouth to taste them.

Like to bank 24 hours a day, everyday?

Some people think only the big town banks along La Salle and State Streets are the only ones that have those around the clock banking machines.

But wouldn't you rather skip the traffic, the smell, the dirt and the utter confusion of the loop for your own backyard?

Well you can now, if what you needed was the 24 HOUR BANK. Because we have one and it is really something to see and operate. It's simple, safe, fool-proof and only you can operate it with a special card and your own personal code number.

So forget the rat race of who is the biggest downtown. Stay at home and do your thing. We may not be big, but we do have a lot more going for us - we have to.

Like being the first bank in the Northwest suburbs to offer 24 HOUR BANKING.

... private-issue commemorative stamp idea is beginning to catch on fast. Especially the limited-edition series designed expressly for the "Plate block" stamp collector.

The Pike County Illinois Historical Society is another of the many such organizations initiating the practice of issuing private commemorative stamps annually to herald a nationally recognized event. Their first stamp was issued June 29 in honor of Pig Day, a continuing celebration held each year in Pittsfield, Ill.

Pike County is located between the Mississippi and the Illinois rivers and is one of the three U.S. counties to vie annually for top honors in the production of pork. Here the citizens are glad to accept full responsibility for the origination of the phrase, "Hogs are beautiful."

WARREN WINSTON, one of the leading promoters of the Pig Day stamp, informed me it is the intention of the Pike County Historical Society to issue new designs every year at the same time in limited editions.

Just as with any stamp collection, a private issue contains 50 stamps to the sheet with a serial number from 0001 to 05000 imprinted in the upper left corner to facilitate a plate block number as shown. The difference between private and federal issues is the 2 1/2-by-3 1/2 inch header at the top of the sheet describing the event being celebrated.

Pig Day stamps are limited to 5000 serially numbered sheets and will be sold on a first-come, first-served basis. Interested collectors may write Milo Pearson Jr., Chairman "Pig Day" Stamp Committee, Pleasant Hill, Ill. 62386 or directly to the Pike County Historical Society, P.O. Box 91, Pittsfield, Ill. 62363. Each sheet sells for $1 plus 16 cents handling and postage.

A STAMP issued by the Holmes County Antique Festival Committee commemorating the spinning wheel was one of the first private issues to be made available to the public. And at this writing practically all of the original 5,000 limited-edition copies were either sold or spoken for.

They will be continued on sale up through the dates of the festival Oct. 6 and 7, 1973 at $1 per sheet of 50 along with one free wooden nickel plus the normal 16-cent postage and handling charge. Interested readers may write George Irving, chairman, Stamp Committee, P.O. Box 21, Millersburg, Ohio 44654.

Win At Bridge

by Oswald and James Jacoby

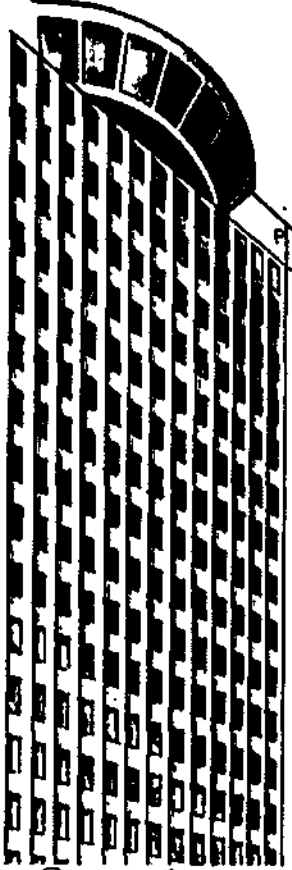

It was the last rubber at Castle Glamis. MacDuff, the best player in Scotland, wanted to get home. Hence his three no-trump call.

Lady Macbeth opened the 10 of hearts. MacDuff looked over dummy quickly. He saw that he could give himself two heart stoppers by putting up dummy's queen. He also saw that his host Macbeth would know this and might shift to a spade, so he played the nine-spot.

MacDuff didn't need two heart tricks. All he needed was to gain the lead; finesse successfully in diamonds; and the rubber and be on his way home.

Macbeth pulled out the seven of hearts; paused in thought; pushed it

Four new issues to salute Progress in Electronics

Four U.S. stamps, in four denominations, will be issued July 10 in New York, to salute Progress in Electronics. First Day ceremonies will be at the Long Lines Headquarters of American Telephone and Telegraph Co.

July 10 marks the 11th anniversary of the first television transmission between the United States and Western Europe via Telstar satellite, a Bell System development.

The stamps were designed by a husband and wife team, Walter and Naled Einsel of Westport, Connecticut.

The 8-cent adhesive salutes the transistor and the printed circuit board. The 6-cent stamp, for postcards, shows Marconi's spark coil and spark gap which enabled him to send radio signals across the Atlantic Ocean in 1901. Lee De Forest's refinements to Marconi's equipment — the Audion and the Audion tube — are depicted on the 11-cent air mail issue. Three postage electronic elements — an early microphone, a goosenecked speaker and a vacuum tube — are combined with a TV camera tube on the 15-cent stamp released for international surface mail.

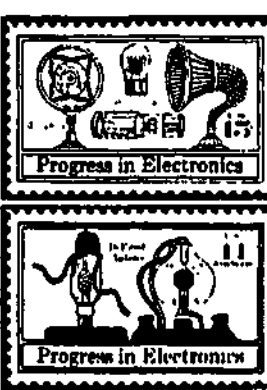

The stamps will be printed by Giori press and carry one plate number on each pane of 50.

Collectors desiring first day cancellations should send requests to "Electronics Stamps, Postmaster, New York, New York 10001." The set of four stamps is 40 cents. A specific stamp or stamps may be ordered. Print which stamp you want very lightly in pencil on the upper right hand corner of your cover. If you want all four stamps, be sure your address is low and to the left of the cover.

A U.S. souvenir card will honor the International Airmail Exhibition, APEX '73 to be held July 4-7 in Manchester, England. The card will be available after then from "APEX '73 Souvenir Card, Philatelic Sales Unit, Washington, D.C. 20036" for $1 each plus a 50-cent handling charge.

AUSTRALIA will issue eight long-term definitive stamps, featuring marine life and gemstones, July 11. They will replace the Queen Elizabeth II designs and the remaining first series National Development stamps.

close the proper remittance in Australian funds and to have enough stamps affixed to each cover to satisfy postal requirements — 21 cents for each one-half ounce airmail. The surface rate is 15 cents up to one ounce but not recommended for those wishing to ever receive the covers.

Script saved by 'surgery'

Reiner 'operates' on Van Dyke show

by DICK KLEINER

HOLLYWOOD — I wandered over to where Dick Van Dyke was shooting his show. I wanted to know about the new format Dick's show will have this coming season.

"You don't know the new format?" growled Byron Paul, Dick's longtime manager and pal. "Get in line."

Last year Dick's show was called the New Dick Van Dyke Show, to differentiate it from the first Dick Van Dyke Show. Despite what you might think this year's version will not be called The New Dick Van Dyke Show, although maybe it should be. It's new now.

The old new Dick Van Dyke show didn't work too well. Lots of theories have been advanced as to why that was — the supporting actors didn't appeal to the public, his profession (TV host) didn't give him enough latitude, the Arizona setting was wrong — they figured they had to give the program the old shake-up treatment.

CBS LIKE THE relationship of Dick and his wife, Hope Lange, so they kept that and they therefore had to keep little Angela Powell, as their daughter. That's all.

They've concocted a plot whereby Dick loses his TV job in Arizona and decides to become an actor. The family moves to the Los Angeles area, rents a house and Dick sets himself up as a free-lance actor. They have a couple neighbors (Richard Dawson and Chita Rivera) who are actors and they become the new supporting cast.

RICHARD DAWSON and Chita Rivera play actors who will be neighbors in Los Angeles of the new Dick Van Dyke.

The network, for economy reasons, forced Dick to shoot the show here, in their existing facilities, and abandon his expensive Arizona headquarters. So Dick is a commuter now. He's rented a fur-

THE CAST WAS struggling through a scene which obviously needed work. It was wordy and had long stretches of arid chit-chat.

"This is like working with amnesia victims," Dawson said. "Somebody says a line and everybody dozes off."

"These lines are so contrived," Hope Lange said. "It's like an old Mario Thomas script."

"Better get Carl down here," Dick said. Somebody called Carl. They waited a few minutes and then Carl strolled in. He had them go through the scene. He watched, stone-faced, and made little notes on a pad.

"I think I'll play the scene in curlers," Hope said, when they had finished. "Anything to get a laugh."

"ALL RIGHT, don't get excited," Carl said. "Now, we can cut here and cut there — those lines can go — and if we skip from page 23 to the middle of page 27, that'll go better. Now suppose we add a bit —"

And he invented a very funny routine for Dick. He's like a doctor as he cuts and slices and builds and cures. The crew nods appreciatively. This was what was missing last year in Arizona. There was no script doctor, and very often the patient died.

Now the script is doing well and the show has been taken off the critical list. It remains to be seen whether the public likes it — if not, there could be a quick relapse.

DuBrow On TV

by Rick DuBrow

HOLLYWOOD — A film drama about the life of the late baseball star Roberto Clemente, killed Dec. 31 in a plane crash while on a mission to help Nicaraguan earthquake victims, is planned for NBC-TV this coming season.

The network says its 90-minute presentation about the legendary Pittsburgh Pirates' player will deal in a major way with his off-the-field activities, and NBC-TV programming vice president Lawrence White adds:

"The story of Roberto Clement — the man — is at once enormously inspiring and overwhelmingly tragic. Through nearly two decades of major league stardom, Clemente never forgot his roots or his people, particularly youngsters. No charitable activity was too small to merit his attention, and, in the end, it was one of these missions of mercy which tragically claimed his life."

Producing NBC-TV's Clemente story will be Screen Gems, which won acclaim several seasons ago for its ABC-TV telefilm "Brian's Song," which dramatized the friendship of a white Chicago Bears' football star, Brian Piccolo, who died of cancer in his 20s, and his black teammate Gale Sayers.

OTHER SPECIAL NBC-TV projects in the drama field for the 1973-74 season include:

• A 90-minute work to be written by Truman Capote, "Uncle Sam's Hard Luck Hotel," which concerns a halfway house for ex-convicts, and will be a pilot for a possible series.

• The two-part, four-hour production "Dr. Frankenstein," a new video adaptation by Christopher Isherwood and Don Bachardy of the famous 19th-century novel by Mary Shelley.

THIS PRODUCTION, set for two-hour segments on consecutive nights, has a cast that includes James Mason, David McCallum, Agnes Moorhead, Margaret Leighton, Michael Sarrazin, Michael Wilding, Jane Seymour, Sir Ralph Richardson, Leonard Whiting, Nicola Pagetti and Clarissa Kaye.

The producer of the drama that was filmed in England, Hunt Stromberg Jr., says: "Victor Frankenstein is a young man and he's usually shown as a 50-year-old. Our creature isn't the Boris Karloff figure with the lumbering walk and the bolt through his neck. When he's first created he's beautiful. He's a sympathetic victim, a victim of greed and evil."

Portraying Dr. Frankenstein is Whiting, who starred as Romeo in the Franco Zeffirelli movie version of "Romeo and Juliet." The male creature is played by Sarrazin, and the female creature — Prima — by Miss Seymour. NBC-TV quotes Stromberg as saying: "Isherwood always liked the Mary Shelley story and felt it had never really been done properly."

Watergate: a challenge of courage

The 'Mollenhoff cocktail' exploded the scandal's impact

by IRA BERKOW
Fourth In A Series

WASHINGTON — Massive Clark Mollenhoff, Des Moines Register Washington bureau chief and Pulitzer-prize-winning columnist, is a 6-4, 230-pound abominable investigator who has been stalking administrations as far back as Truman's, has been Bronx-cheered by every president since, has been spat at by Jimmy Hoffa whom he helped send up the river, and most recently has bellowed in a national news conference that Ron Ziegler, Nixon's press secretary, was a liar.

He is called the "Mollenhoff cocktail" and he may also have had an enormous impact on Watergate.

Mollenhoff, who is also a lawyer, told his friend Judge J. Sirica, "the Watergate judge," about a recent court precedent in which a Los Angeles judge named Ferguson delayed sentencing to give the defendants time to decide whether they would cooperate more fully with the court. If they would, the sentence would be lighter.

Sirica had not known of the Los Angeles case until Mollenhoff told him. ("Clark knows me about as well as anyone, and I respect him as much as I do anyone," says Sirica.) Sirica then called Judge Ferguson.

SIRICA USED this unusual and controversial delayed sentencing method to flush out testimony from Watergate burglar James McCord which was virtually the first substantial information on the enormity of the political espionage network.

According to the Los Angeles Times, "a number of insiders, Mollenhoff unabashedly among them, feel that he was the catalyst who impelled former White House and campaign aide Jeb Stuart Magruder to come clean on his knowledge of the roles of high administration officials — H. R. Haldeman, John Ehrlichman, Charles Colson and former Atty. Gen. John Mitchell — in the Watergate plotting and financing."

Mollenhoff had written an article predicting an indictment against Magruder. He showed the piece to Magruder, who, disturbed, shortly after went to a federal prosecutor and, said the Los Angeles Times, "began unloading what he knew, setting in motion the current cascade of disclosures, admissions and resignations."

Mollenhoff was possibly the first to throw off President Nixon's cloak of executive privilege. He had for one year early in Nixon's first term, to the surprise and then dismay of some newspaper colleagues, accepted an offer to be a presidential counsel. He left the post in the summer of 1970. He left, he said, because he had been promised direct access to the President, and did not get it.

Out of office and back at newspapering, he was called to testify before the Civil Service Commission, and did, despite the pervasive White House protestations that "matters of national security" could be jeopardized.

SOME PEOPLE have said that Nixon hired me to get rid of me," said Mollenhoff, in his National Press Building office, which is strewn with awards from the right and the left and which has autographed photographs of JFK, and LBJ, as well as Nixon.

The job was presidential ombudsman. He was to be a muckraker for internal White House problems, using the techniques he used as a journalist to help uncover such national scandals as the TFX, Billie Sol Estes and Hoffa.

Mollenhoff believed this a great opportunity to give firsthand assistance to good government. It turned out to be heavy-handed, at least as far as the White House staff was concerned.

"I wouldn't stay out of the hair of Ehrlichman and Haldeman," said Mollenhoff. "Not only was I honest, I was persistently honest. They didn't appreciate me because I wasn't one of these little junior executive types from J. Walter Thompson advertising, one of these guys between 20 and 30 years old, like a Dwight Chapin, who did anything they were told because they owed all they had in life to people like Haldeman and Ehrlichman. It's a shame. These young guys are now destroyed because of a couple of power-mad bastards."

THE FINAL STRAW came for Mollenhoff when he found that the White House was planning to have Jimmy Hoffa, former Teamsters boss, released from jail. Mollenhoff, who spent years on the Hoffa case and wrote one of his six books, "The Tentacles of Power," concerning corruption in labor unions, was never even consulted on the Hoffa case.

From his knowledge of the workings of the White House staff, Mollenhoff was later able to write about the conspiratorial secrecy (the misuse of classification in which red tags — which meant national security — were placed on routine political chores.) He was the first to write about former acting FBI director L. Patrick Gray, whom he knew at the White House in terms of "a political hack."

He is "merely disappointed" in Nixon. "I thought," he agreed with me on a lot of points. He'd give me a little of cheerleader speech. 'You go get 'em, Clark, and we'll get something done about it.' That was in the beginning. Not only was I little about it, but soon I wasn't even allowed to see the President."

Why he was such a threat to the White House staffers may be seen in his bluntness at the press conference in which

Ziegler declared that former statements on Watergate by the President were "inoperative."

MOLLENHOFF shouted: "Do you feel free to stand up there and lie and put out misinformation and come around later and say it is all inoperative? . . . You are not entitled to any credibility at all when you do that."

Ziegler flushed and said, "Next question."

"He's got his act down," says Mollenhoff today. "He's a perfect puppet." Mollenhoff says he is not discouraged by his inability to influence when in the White House. "Hell, I believed I could reform Jimmy Hoffa — until he tried directly to buy me. He said once, 'Everyone's got his price. What's yours, Clark?' It reminded me of Ehrlichman and Haldeman. No feelings for right or wrong. Only what is most expedient. There was never any effort on any of their parts to argue with me."

WHEN HE watched Hoffa being carted off to prison for tampering with juries in his Memphis trial, Mollenhoff said, "Jimmy, it took a long time but it finally caught up with you." That's when Hoffa spit in his direction.

Mollenhoff sees a similar thing happening to the Nixon administration. Time has caught up with it. "And it's now going down in flames," he said. "The question is, 'Is it practical to be honest in politics?' I think Watergate shows that it's damn foolish to be anything less than totally honest. That's the lesson of Watergate."

Mollenhoff had an early struggle with integrity. It was at age 20 when he was attending Drake University and working 40 hours a week as a police reporter for the Register. He had a family, little money and the highpoint of his working wardrobe was the letter sweater he earned as captain of the football team.

A local bootlegger, whom Mollenhoff had written about, offered to buy him a pair of pants. "He was on fertile ground about me needing to be helped out, but I wasn't sure of his motivations," recalls Mollenhoff. "I gave him some looks and I thought about it for a minute. Then I thought of Lincoln Steffens, the old muckraking journalist whom I wanted to pattern myself after when I read his autobiography."

"I told the bootlegger it was tempting, but no thanks."

"From that time on, I've thought before I've taken an action how it would look in my own autobiography. It's amazing how this keeps you on the straight and narrow."

ANNOUNCEMENT
The Herald Newspaper does not knowingly accept HELP WANTED ads that indicate a preference based on age from employers covered by the AGE DISCRIMINATION IN EMPLOYMENT ACT.
HELP WANTED headings directed specifically toward either men or women are used merely for the convenience of our readers, to let them know which jobs have historically been more attractive to persons of one sex than the other. The placement of an ad under a heading is not in itself an expression of a preference, limitation, specification or discrimination based on sex. For further information contact the Wage and Hour Division Office of U.S. Department of Labor at 4032 N. Milwaukee Ave., Chicago, Illinois. Telephone (312) 736-2909.

BACKYARD

Mustard Dressed Potato Salad

Yield: 8 servings

- 6 cups diced, cooked potatoes
- 1/4 cup finely diced onion
- 4 hard-cooked eggs, chopped
- 1/4 cup diced celery
- 1 1/2 teaspoons salt
- 3 tablespoons prepared mustard
- 1/4 cup salad dressing
- 1 cup sliced radishes

Chill potatoes. Combine all ingredients except radishes. Refrigerate until serving time. Garnish with sliced radishes.

Green Beans and Onion Poke

Yield: 8 servings

- 2 packages (10 ounces each) frozen green beans
- 1 medium onion, sliced
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1 teaspoon sugar
- 1/2 teaspoon pepper
- 1/2 teaspoon basil
- 3 tablespoons butter

Place beans on a large square of heavy duty aluminum foil. Add onion. Sprinkle with salt, sugar, pepper and basil. Dot with butter. Fold foil into a compact, tight bundle. Cook over glowing coals 25 to 35 minutes, turning occasionally. Fold back the foil to serve.

Barbecue Corn on the Cob

Yield: 8 servings

- 8 ears of corn, husked
- 1 stick (1/2 cup) butter or margarine
- 1 1/2 cups barbecue sauce with onion
- 2 medium onions, sliced
- Salt to taste

Melt butter in saucepan. Stir in barbecue sauce. Place each ear of corn on a 10 by 12 inch piece of heavy duty foil. Top with sliced onions and 1/4 cup barbecue sauce. Wrap securely. Bake on grill or in a hot oven (400 degrees) 25 to 30 minutes.

Marble Cake

Yield: 13x9x2 inch loaf cake

- 1/2 cup shortening
- 2 1/2 cups sifted cake flour
- 1 1/2 cups sugar
- 4 teaspoons double-acting baking powder
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1 cup milk
- 1 teaspoon vanilla
- 2 eggs
- 1 ounce square unsweetened chocolate, melted
- Red food coloring

Place shortening in bowl. Sift together flour, sugar, baking powder and salt into bowl. Add 1/2 cup milk and vanilla. Beat 2 minutes on medium speed of electric mixer, or by hand using 150 strokes per minute. Throughout mixing time keep batter scraped from sides and bottom of bowl with rubber scraper. Scrape bowl and beaters. Add eggs and remaining 1/2 cup milk. Beat for 2 additional minutes on medium speed. Scrape bowl and beaters. In medium-bowl, combine about one-third batter with chocolate, mixing well. In another medium-sized bowl, combine another one-third batter with several drops of red food coloring until batter turns to bright pink. Spoon plain, chocolate and pink batter, alternately, into well-greased and floured 13x9x2 inch loaf pan. With spatula or knife, cut through batter, forming a Z. Bake in moderate oven (375 degrees) about 30 minutes. Frost with Creamy Pink and White Frosting.

Creamy Pink and White Frosting

Yield: Frosting for a 13x9x2 inch loaf cake

- 1/2 cup shortening
- 3 cups sifted powdered sugar
- 5 tablespoons milk
- 3/4 teaspoon salt
- 1 teaspoon vanilla
- Red food coloring

Cream shortening until soft and fluffy. Add powdered sugar, milk, salt and vanilla. Beat until smooth and creamy. Add more milk if necessary to make frosting of spreading consistency. In medium-sized bowl, combine about one-half frosting with several drops of red food coloring until the frosting turns to bright pink. Frost marble cake with a 1-inch stripe of white frosting, then a 1-inch stripe of pink until the entire cake is frosted.

Fighting traffic and crowded picnic areas can put a damper on Fourth of July spirits.

This summer avoid the hassles and have the celebration picnic in your own back yard. Make it formal or casual, with guests or just family. But most of all, make it easy so the cook can enjoy the fun, too.

Start with a menu featuring that traditional American favorite, a turkey prepared on the outdoor covered grill. To provide for second helpings, as well as second-day sandwiches, allow 1 1/2 pounds per person when choosing a turkey.

HOLIDAY

Directions For Cooking Turkey On A Kettle-type Covered Grill

TO THAW Follow the directions on the turkey bag.

TO PREPARE GRILL Open all dampers on grill and cover. Leave open during cooking. Make a drip pan using a double thickness of heavy duty foil. Put on bottom rack. Place 25 to 30 briquettes on each side of drip pan. Burn 15 to 20 minutes or until white in color. Place top rack inside of kettle over coals with handles opposite those on grill.

TO PREPARE TURKEY Free legs and tail from tucked position of thawed bird. Remove neck and giblets from main cavities. Rinse turkey and drain. Fasten wings behind back by twisting the wing tips. Do not stuff. Stuffing can be baked in a foil poke or disposable foil pan on the grill beside the turkey during the last hour of cooking. Draw skin over neck. Return legs and tail to tucked position. Brush skin of turkey with oil or melted fat. Insert roast meat thermometer into the center of the thickest portion of the thigh next to the body cavity, not touching bone.

TO COOK UNSTUFFED TURKEY Place thawed unstuffed turkey on top rack. Cover with top of grill. To maintain constant heat, add 4 to 5 briquettes to both sides each additional hour of cooking. No basting is necessary when you use a deep basted turkey. Otherwise baste occasionally with butter or margarine.

Check for doneness after 2 1/2 hours of cooking for 12 to 14 pound turkey. Before removing the turkey from the grill, check to be sure the thermometer has not been displaced. The internal temperature of the roasted turkey should be 180 to 185 degrees.

Protect thumb and forefinger with paper or cloth. Pinch the thickest portion of the thigh. The meat should feel soft.

Mrs. Harry Gronli

Her menu is tailored for summer

by LOIS SEILER

For your Fourth of July festivities, consider a tasty macaroni salad to serve with a barbecued meat, fried chicken or a buffet of cold cuts.

The one featured today is a favorite of Cell Gronli of Mount Prospect. It's a "must" on her menu every summer, and a nice change from potato salads.

Cell mixes cooked macaroni with mayonnaise, green pepper, hard-cooked eggs and pimiento after she had marinated it in onion salad dressing mix. Cheese and chopped celery may be added if desired.

For a luncheon or a light supper, she often uses the macaroni to fill the center of a summery chicken mousse.

The mousse is a light combination of chicken, celery and pimiento molded in lemon gelatin with whipped cream and mayonnaise folded in. Leftover chicken or turkey may be utilized in making this recipe, or you may cook fresh chicken or use the canned variety. When Cell unmolds the mousse, she garnishes the plate with tomato wedges and water-cress.

"The mousse may also be served on a buffet table with a variety of other salads," Cell said.

To complete the menu, this cook suggests Angel Food Orange Dessert. It consists of a light and creamy orange-flavored gelatin mixture poured over pieces of angel food cake in a cake pan and chilled until firm. It is very light in texture with a delicate orange flavor that makes it a refreshing summertime treat according to Cell.

"I use it all summer long as it goes well with everything from a light meal to a heavy one or with a spicy Italian dinner," she remarked. The dessert is a favorite of her family, which includes husband Harry and children, Mike, 21, Holly, 20 and Chris, 18.

An extra plus in favor of all three recipes is that they are best made a day ahead: the dessert sets up nicely and the flavors of the mousse and macaroni salad blend and improve in taste.

Cell has an eye for appearance and a flair for interesting foods. She took her first gourmet cooking class when the family lived in Minneapolis. Since moving to Mount Prospect almost 8 years ago, Cell participated in a Newcomers Gourmet Group and organized a gourmet group at St. Mark's Lutheran Church.

MACARONI SALAD

- 1/2 pound uncooked macaroni (2 cups)
- 1 envelope Good Seasons Onion Salad Dressing Mix
- 1 tablespoon cider vinegar
- 1/4 cup salad oil
- 1/2 green pepper, chopped
- 1 tablespoon pimiento or more (optional)

CHICKEN MOUSSE filled with a zesty macaroni salad is an excellent choice for a summer luncheon or a light supper. Mrs. Harry Gronli of Mount Prospect often prepares this combination for summer buffets. The mousse is a combination of chicken, celery and pimiento molded in a whipped cream, gelatin and mayonnaise mixture. Watercress and tomatoes are used for garnish.

- 3 hard cooked eggs, chopped
- 1/2 cup salad dressing or mayonnaise
- Salt to taste
- Cook macaroni in boiling salted water; drain and cool.

Blend dressing mix, vinegar and salad oil. Add to macaroni and marinate at least two hours in refrigerator. Add remaining ingredients and chill.

Add squares of cheese and chopped celery, if desired.

Put macaroni salad in center of chicken mousse or serve by itself with fried chicken or other grilled food. Serves 4.

CHICKEN MOUSSE

- 1 3-ounce package lemon or orange-pineapple gelatin
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1 1/4 cups boiling chicken broth
- Dash of pepper
- 2 tablespoons white vinegar
- 1/3 cup whipping cream
- 1/3 cup mayonnaise
- 1 cup diced cooked chicken
- 1 cup finely-chopped celery
- 1 tablespoon chopped pimiento

If you wish, canned chicken may be used in this recipe, and the broth can be made by dissolving 2 chicken bouillon cubes in 1 1/4 cups water.

Dissolve gelatin and salt in boiling broth. Add pepper and vinegar. Chill until very thick but not set.

Whip cream and fold cream and mayonnaise into gelatin. Blend well. Then fold in remaining ingredients. Pour into a one-quart ring mold and chill until firm.

Unmold on a larger plate and decorate with tomato wedges and watercress. Fill center with macaroni salad or potato salad. Serves 4 for a dinner or 6 for a luncheon.

Note: To make mousse look more decorative, pour a little clear gelatin into base of mold before combining it with remaining ingredients. Add a few pimiento strips for color. When firm, pour in remaining gelatin which has been combined with other ingredients.

ANGEL FOOD ORANGE DESSERT

- 1 small angel food cake
- or 1/2 of a large cake

- 1 envelope unflavored gelatin
- 1/4 cup cold water
- 1/4 cup boiling water
- 1 6-ounce can orange juice concentrate
- 2 ounces water
- 1 cup sugar
- 1 cup whipping cream
- 1 package Dream Whip

Break cake into pieces and place in a 9 by 13-inch pan. Soften gelatin in cold water; add boiling water and stir until dissolved.

Mix orange juice, 2 ounces water and sugar and blend in gelatin. Chill until slightly thickened. Beat gelatin mixture.

Whip cream. Prepare Dream Whip according to package directions. Fold whipped cream and prepared Dream Whip into beaten gelatin mixture. Pour over cake and chill. This is best made a day ahead.

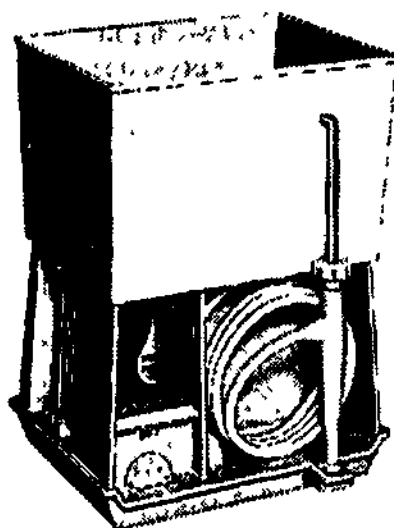

The dessert may be served with a dollop of whipped cream and a sprinkling of grated orange rind on top, if desired. Serves 12.

Create casseroles with mushrooms

Mushroom Casserole a la Russe is ideal for entertaining and not hard to make. It takes only minutes to cook — not much longer than it does to toast the bread. If you feel ambitious, of course, you can bake individual patty shells.

Mushroom and Onion Casserole is an excellent go-along for a chicken, pork or seafood main dish. Or, if you prefer you can add cooked meat or fish to the casserole mixture and make it a meal-in-one.

Both of these recipes start with sautéed mushrooms. Rinse the mushrooms, but do not peel. Blot dry so they won't spatter when you put them in "jumping hot" butter or other fat. Mushrooms are cooked in four or five minutes since they are as good raw as cooked.

MUSHROOM CASSEROLE A LA Russe

- 1 package (½ lb.) fresh mushrooms
- 4 tablespoons butter or margarine
- 1 clove garlic
- ½ cup finely chopped onion
- 1 tablespoon flour
- ½ cup milk
- 1 cup dairy sour cream
- 1 egg yolk
- ¼ teaspoon salt
- 1/16 teaspoon ground red pepper
- 2 tablespoons finely chopped dill

Rinse, pat dry and halve fresh mushrooms. In a large skillet melt butter. Add garlic and brown; remove and discard. Add mushrooms and onion; sauté 5 minutes. Stir in flour. Gradually blend in milk; cook and stir until thickened, about 2 minutes. Mix sour cream, egg yolk, salt and red pepper. Stir into mushroom mixture. Cook over low heat just until hot (do not boil). Stir in dill. Serve with toasted bread points, if desired. Yield: 6 portions.

MUSHROOM AND ONION CASSEROLE

- 1 package (½ lb.) fresh mushrooms
- 6 tablespoons butter or margarine, divided
- 2 tablespoons flour
- 1½ cups milk
- ½ cup shredded Cheddar cheese
- ½ cup chopped parsley, divided
- ¼ teaspoon oregano leaves
- 1 can (1 lb.) whole small white onions, drained
- 1½ cups soft bread crumbs

Rinse and pat dry mushrooms; set aside. In a medium skillet melt 4 tablespoons of the butter. Add mushrooms and sauté for 5 minutes. Remove mushrooms from skillet to a 1½-quart casserole. To butter remaining in skillet add flour; cook and stir for 1 minute. Add milk; cook and stir until mixture comes to a boil; reduce heat; cook and stir 1 minute longer. Blend in cheese, 2 tablespoons of the parsley and the oregano. Add onions and heat until hot. Pour over mushrooms; stir gently. In a small saucepan melt remaining 2 tablespoons butter. Add bread crumbs and remaining 2 tablespoons parsley. Sprinkle over mushrooms and onions in casserole. Bake in a preheated very hot oven (475 degrees) for 7 to 8 minutes or until hot and golden. Yield: 6 portions.

From meats to desserts

New choices for cookbook shelves

by FRAN HECKART

"Dessert is the happy ending to a satisfactory repast," says Margaret Storm, author of "The Dessert Lovers' Cookbook" ($1.25).

What she doesn't say is that most of her "scrumptious" creations are devastating to waistlines. The book offers step-by-step instructions for making some 30 desserts. Babas au Rhum, Chocolate Eclairs, Cherries Jubilee, Biscuit Tortoni, Crepes Suzette, Hungarian Apple Strudel and Baked Alaska Flambe are only a few of the "happy endings."

A profusion of superlatives — elaborate, intricate, enchanting creations — leaves no doubt that Margaret Storm has enthusiasm for her topic.

LAYER CAKES, sheet cakes and conventional tortes were purposely omitted. On the other hand, "enchanting creations you associate exclusively with the empyreal pastry chefs of the fabulous European restaurants" abound.

The type of desserts found in the book are treated with reverence on diet and nutrition-oriented menus. And ingredients like whipping cream, honey, Jamaica rum, good champagne and fresh white figs are far beyond modest budgets.

If calories and budgets are not major concerns and desserts are your forte, then "The Dessert Lovers' Cookbook" belongs on your book shelves.

The following recipe for Watermelon Sherry is typical of the book's elaborate offerings and can be found in a chapter on Quick Ones.

WATERMELON SHERRY

8 measuring cups watermelon pulp, diced or in balls
1/2 cup granulated sugar

Mostly For Men

by Charles Flynn

Summertime is salad time! With all kinds of greens coming to the market, I'll suggest some methods to get away from the traditional tossed salad.

One favorite is leaf spinach with hot dressing. Wash 1 pound fresh spinach, removing any woody stems, and tear into small pieces.

For the dressing fry 4 slices of bacon until crisp. Remove, drain and crumble. Pour off bacon fat, then return just 2 tablespoons to the frying pan. Over low heat add 2 tablespoons flour, 1 teaspoon salt, and 2 1/2 tablespoons sugar, stirring constantly.

Slowly add 1 cup milk, continuing to stir constantly. Bring to a boil and cook for 3 minutes. Remove from heat and slowly pour this mixture into a bowl in which you have beaten 2 eggs slightly. Add 3 tablespoons vinegar and blend. This can be kept hot in top of a double boiler.

When ready to serve put spinach in a large salad bowl, sprinkle with crumbled bacon, pour over dressing and toss. Some people like to allow this salad to sit 15 minutes before serving. I prefer to serve at once. Lettuce, endive or a combination of greens can be substituted for spinach, but in this case, always serve immediately after adding the hot dressing. Makes 4 large salads.

NOTHING IS better with a summer meal than cucumbers in sour cream. Peel 3 cucumbers and slice thin, layering into a collander and salting each layer. Allow to stand 10 minutes. Slice 3 medium-sized sweet onions. In a refrigerator dish with lid mix cucumbers and onion slices.

Beat together 2 tablespoons sugar, 1 cup sour cream and 1 1/2 tablespoons vinegar to make smooth dressing. Pour over cucumbers and onions and chill well before serving to a.

And, from the Pennsylvania Dutch country comes Bald Eagle Valley tomato salad. Chill 4 large, ripe tomatoes. Peel and cut into chunks into a serving dish. Dilute 1/2 cup vinegar with 1/2 cup water, add 1 tablespoon sugar, then taste for desired sweetness. Mix in 1 tablespoon finely minced onion and sprinkle with black pepper. Great eating for 4.

Do you have a favorite summer salad or a question about food? Write Chuck Flynn, care of Paddock Publications, P.O. Box 280, Arlington Heights, Ill. 60006.

For personal reply, please send self-addressed, stamped envelope.

2 cups diced fresh pineapple

1 cup sherry

Put the watermelon pulp in a large mixing bowl. Drain the pineapple and add it to the watermelon pulp.

Sprinkle the sugar over the fruit, stirring the fruit gently as you sprinkle. Continue to stir gently until the sugar is dissolved, being careful not to damage the fruit.

Pour on the cup of sherry. Mix thoroughly. Chill for 2 hours. Serve in compote dishes.

"Honey and Your Health" (60 cents) by Dodog F. Beck and Doree Smedley should perhaps be taken with a grain of salt.

The book purports to be the story of honey. The authors consider it nature's "miracle" health food and feel it should be a staple in daily diets.

Containing a rather lengthy text on the virtues of all types of honey, the book also offers a few recipes featuring the alternative to sugar.

All aspects of meat cookery including identification of cuts, tips on storing and freezing, carving, and seasoning are covered in "Better Homes and Gardens Meat Cookbook."

THE BOOK OFFERS a wide variety of functional recipes along with information that all cooks should know about choosing and preparing all types of meat. Chapters on pork, beef, variety meats, fish and seafood, and poultry are included along with others.

A chapter, "Food Fun with Action-Meals," provides menus and recipes for a clambake, patio dinner, a Hawaiian party and other entertaining ideas.

This book can be considered one of the better on basic meat preparation and is worth every penny of its modest price, $1.25.

Cheeseburger Pie is only one of the examples provided in the book of how ground beef can be used in a simple main dish that's a step beyond ordinary.

CHEESEBURGER PIE

1 pound ground beef
1/2 cup evaporated milk
1/2 cup catsup
1/3 cup fine dry bread

Crumb

1/4 cup chopped onion

1/2 teaspoon dried oregano, crushed

Plain pastry

4 ounces process American cheese, shredded (1 cup)

1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce

Combine first 6 ingredients, 3/4 teaspoon salt and 1/8 teaspoon pepper. Prepare basic pastry to line one 8-inch pie plate or use one frozen unbaked pie shell. Fill with meat mixture. Bake at 350 degrees for 35 to 40 minutes. Toss cheese with Worcestershire sauce; sprinkle atop pie. Bake 10 minutes more. Remove from oven; let stand 10 minutes before serving. Trim with pickle slices, if desired. Serves 6.

All of the preceding books are paperback editions published by Bantam Books, New York.

This book can be considered one of the better on basic meat preparation and is worth every penny of its modest price, $1.25.

Cheeseburger Pie is only one of the examples provided in the book of how ground beef can be used in a simple main dish that's a step beyond ordinary.

CHEESEBURGER PIE

1 pound ground beef

1/2 cup evaporated milk

1/2 cup catsup

1/3 cup fine dry bread

Crumb

1/4 cup chopped onion

1/2 teaspoon dried oregano, crushed

Plain pastry

4 ounces process American cheese, shredded (1 cup)

1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce

Combine first 6 ingredients, 3/4 teaspoon salt and 1/8 teaspoon pepper. Prepare basic pastry to line one 8-inch pie plate or use one frozen unbaked pie shell. Fill with meat mixture. Bake at 350 degrees for 35 to 40 minutes. Toss cheese with Worcestershire sauce; sprinkle atop pie. Bake 10 minutes more. Remove from oven; let stand 10 minutes before serving. Trim with pickle slices, if desired. Serves 6.

WINDOWS GET SPECIAL treatment when Sue Tierney decorates. She chose and hung textured wallpaper in light, natural tones and had draperies made to match. Royal blue carpeting accents the natural shades of the living area. Low-slung leather chairs add casualness to the sleek sophistication of the room's decor along with a large gilded mirror which hangs above the off-white deep plush sofa. Accessories, many of Sue's originals, complete the individualized modern decor of her Barrington Square townhouse.

LARGE MODERN PAINTINGS high-light walls on the dining area of Sue Tierney's combination living-dining area. The oils are done in shades of blue and red with white accents. The dining area is a bit small for large dinner parties, according to Sue, but she plans to remodel the basement of the Hoffman Estates townhouse for entertaining large groups.

Suburban Living

ESPECIALLY FOR THE FAMILY

How suburbia lives

The townhouse trend

by FRAN HECKART

Suburbia, long the land of the single family dwelling, in recent years has witnessed a trend toward more structured living as townhouses began to dot the landscape.

Less private than single homes, the townhouse nonetheless seems to meet the needs of those wanting the feel of home ownership without the hassle it entails. Other than that, though, it would be difficult to find a "typical" townhouse dweller.

Instructors, salesmen, stewardesses, construction workers, engineers—these are only a few of the occupations represented by the people who sign the monthly rent or mortgage checks.

And you can't tell a townhouse resident by his age or marital status either. At Waukegan in Schumacher, for instance, single persons, retired couples, newlyweds and families occupy the 63 townhouse units, according to Sylvia Patton, rental manager.

Reasons for townhouse living are as varied as the residents. "A little grass is better than none," said one woman who has lived in a townhouse for three years.

PRIVACY. PETS, living space and all the comforts of home without the headaches of upkeep are other reasons cited.

Many townhouse residents chose those complexes that require the tenant to purchase the unit. These people are able to build equity with a modest down payment and receive all the tax breaks of home ownership.

If there is not a typical townhouse dweller, the townhouse itself falls into a pattern. Usually it is a three-level structure: basement, main floor and upstairs with two or more bedrooms. It normally has a bath and a half, semi-plush carpeting and modern kitchen appliances.

Some have garages and all feature a small lawn in front and back of the typically more deep than wide living area.

New townhouse complexes in the area sell their mini-homes with emphasis on the benefits. A golf course is a big plus for Hilldale Village in Hoffman Estates, for example. Clubhouses that feature swimming pools, saunas, exercise room, tennis courts, pool tables and party rooms also are available in many of the complexes, such as the Governor's Club of Barrington Square, another Hoffman complex. Some offer a choice of carpet shades, appliance color and washers and dryers.

The Eugene Paleks lived in a rented home near Chicago before moving to Hilldale Village three years ago.

The Paleks had a unique reason for moving to Hilldale. "My husband works for the complex so it's only natural that we live here," commented Marilyn Palek, mother of Ted, 13, and Christine, 1.

However, she added, the place is perfect for their family and they probably would not move if given the option.

"One of the big advantages of townhouse living is the modern kitchen," said Marilyn. She also is pleased with the compact living space which requires minimum upkeep and "is great for housecleaning."

Marilyn cited a better school system and security as other advantages.

ONE OF THE minor disadvantages of townhouse living, according to Marilyn, is that decorating must be done so that the rented unit may be returned to its original condition. This limits the use of wallpaper, shelves and painting.

Dark-toned paneling has been tacked on the long entry-living room wall so that it can be removed. The paneling enhances the Early American decor and helps to shorten the long wall.

Marilyn chose Early American for their townhouse and adeptly transformed the rather narrow living room into a comfortable, spacious living area. She noted proudly that her husband, who "loves to putter," built the tables that match the room's decor.

The Paleks enjoy small informal parties and find the townhouse conducive to this style of entertaining.

One of the attractions of Barrington Square in Hoffman Estates cited in its brochure is that growth has been controlled to preserve the beauty of the area.

"IT'S ALMOST like country living with all the conveniences compared with our former lifestyle in New York," said Mrs. John Tierney, who feels she and her husband couldn't have made a better choice when the couple was transferred to this area.

Originally they sought an apartment, but after seeing Barrington Square opted for the two-bedroom townhouse which they bought.

"This place is perfect for our needs," said Sue Tierney. Perhaps in five years they'll need a bigger house, but at present that's not a serious consideration, she added.

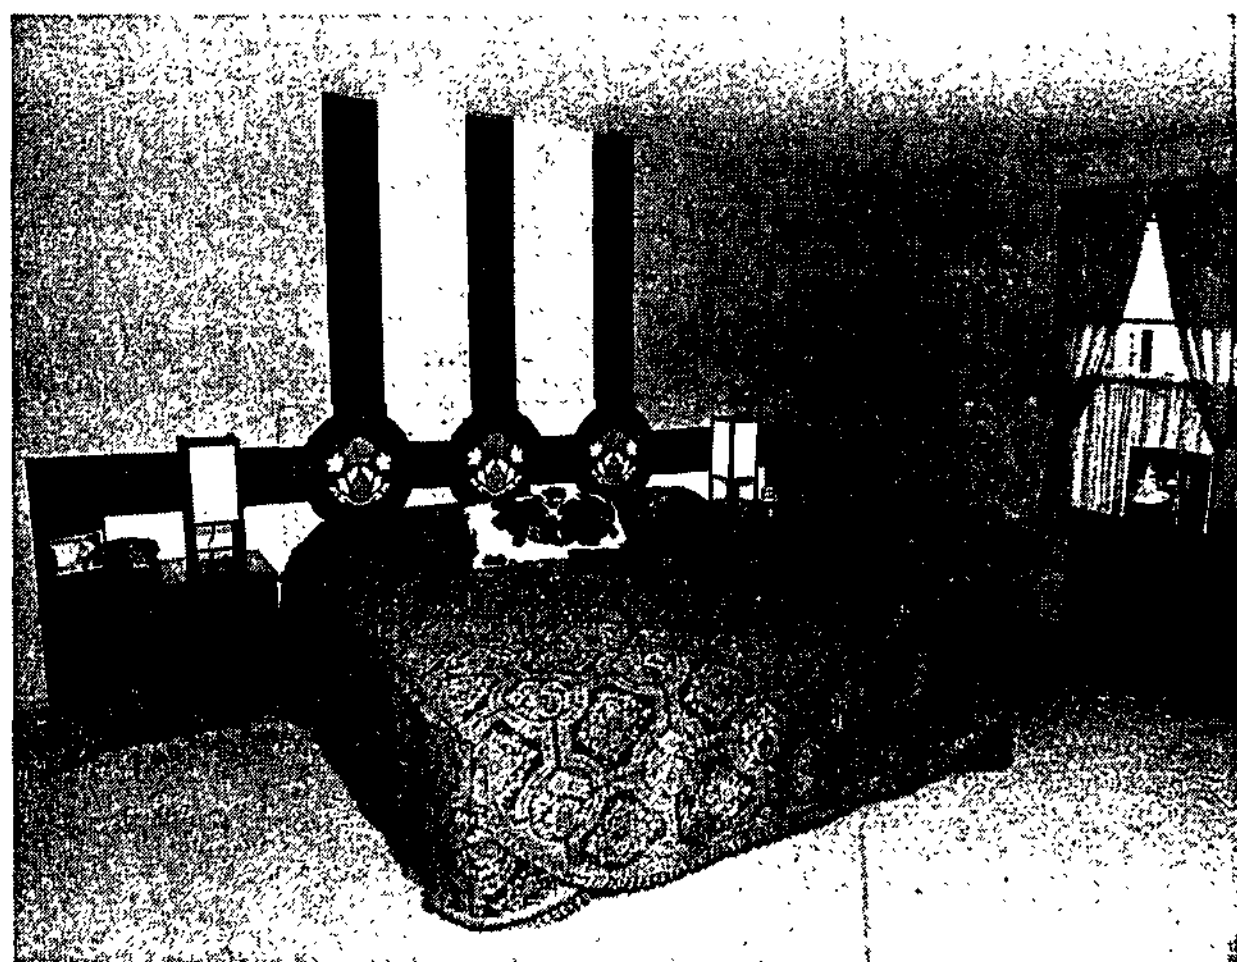

A former art instructor, Sue has directed most of her energy into decorating the townhouse and caring for their small son, Christian.

The interior of the unit reflects the sophistication of Sue's talents. Implementing exquisite taste and with more zeal than expense, Sue has created a modern decor comparable to many done professionally. To it she has added her own artistic touches from the gay murals in Christian's room to the paintings that highlight the dining room area walls and the unusual Oriental lines in the master bedroom.

SHE EXPECTS to return to teaching when, as she puts it, "I get motherhood out of my system." By then the basement where the Tierneys will do their future entertaining and Sue will have her studio will be completed, she hopes. She feels the townhouse is a little small for parties.

Sue's enthusiasm for townhouse living may be partly due to her neighbors, all of whom she describes as "great." On her street in Barrington Square, at least, neighbors are a small community within themselves. And that's one thing they have in common with those single family home folks.

ONE OF SUE TIERNEY'S original oils replaces a standard headboard in the master bedroom of her family's townhouse. Extended black and white stripes blend with orange walls and curtains. Sue designed and created the room using her skills with a paint brush and eye for color. A bath with bold patterned black and white wallpaper and yellow accents adjoins the soothing Oriental-styled room.

"A STEP SAVER" is the way Mrs. Eugene Palek describes the kitchen-dining room of her townhouse in Hilldale Village, Hoffman Estates. Patio doors open onto a small, fenced backyard where Marilyn Palek often sunbathes and her husband has space for his bonsai garden. When he wasn't tending his plants, Eugene built a storage shed for tools and bicycles.

Night care at Angel Town

Four children attend pair

Four very young attendants, all 7 and 8 years old, stood with Helen Margaret Wisniewski of Arlington Heights and Suhail E. Ghattas of Glen Ellyn for their June 2 wedding.

They are the children of the bridal pair and were their only attendants for the ceremony in the Wisniewski home at 1119 W. White Oak St., Arlington.

The groom's 7-year-old daughter Debbie was maid of honor. Her brother, 8-year-old David, and the bride's two sons, Robert, 8, and Chick, 7, were best men. The boys carried the couple's wedding rings on a long gold tray for the afternoon nuptials.

THE BRIDE AND groom met through an organization called Young Single Parents when Dr. Ghattas, a psychiatrist in the suburbs, was guest speaker for a meeting. By coincidence, that was the first time Peggy attended a YSP meeting.

Dr. Ghattas, son of Mifad Ghattas of Beirut, Lebanon, practices at Alexian Brothers Medical Center and has offices in Villa Park and Bensenville.

His bride has been active in the Arlington Heights Junior Woman's Club and last year was president of STAR, Suburban Townships Association for the Regard. She is the daughter of Mrs. Mary T. Campbell of the White Oak Street address.

FOR THE WEDDING the bride wore a floor-length white cotton lace dress tied with a wide lace sash. She wore no veil but carried a spring bouquet of yellow carnations, orange roses, and baby's breath.

Young Debbie was attired in a white and orange floral print dress and carried a bouquet to match the bride's but in a smaller arrangement. The three boys wore navy jackets, light blue shirts with white ties, and trousers striped in red, white and blue.

A reception followed in the home, at which 18 of the 44 guests were children. The couple then left for a week's honeymoon in San Francisco.

They are making their home in Glen Ellyn.

Angel Town

When day care becomes night care

by ELEANOR RIVES

When a woman must work days, she usually has a choice of nursery schools or day care centers where she can enroll her child. Daytime care is available for the preschooler; occasionally one can find after-school care for the older child.

But if that woman has the opportunity to earn more money by working unusual hours, she must turn it down for lack of a place to leave her child.

Many nurses work from 3 to 11 p.m. or from 11 to 7 a.m. The most lucrative hours for a waitress are from dinner time on. Airline personnel often work at night. Premium wages go to the night shift at most factories.

But for the woman, especially the single parent, who most needs the money, these jobs and hours are out of the question. Even Grandma is reluctant to help out at such hours.

IT IS FOR parents with problems such as these that Lorraine Angell has decided to extend the facilities and services of Angel Town, her existing day care center at 6904 Cora in Rosemont, just over the Des Plaines boundary.

Beginning July 18, the center will provide night care for as many as 20 youngsters, age 2 to 7, seven days a week if necessary. A hot evening meal will be served around 6:30 p.m. followed by evening outdoor activities in the play area. The children will sleep on low green cots, each with his own individual set of blankets.

"I'm open to all suggestions," said Mrs. Angell, who was a working mother when she raised her own three children. "We can adjust our schedules to meet any working hours, no matter how difficult they might be. My prime concern is the working mother and the 50 million problems she must go through."

FRANCINE V. GOLDBERG, licensing representative at the Illinois Department of Children and Family Services, sent her recommendation to Springfield last week that Angel Town be issued a six-month temporary permit to provide night care for a maximum of 20 children. Permits are issued usually within two weeks of her recommendation.

"It's really already official when I recommend it," she explained.

The temporary permit is later replaced by a two-year license after Mrs. Goldberg can observe the facility in full swing and evaluate it.

"There's a definite need for this type of care," she said, "especially for the late evening hours. I have received many calls inquiring about such a service."

BUT IT'S UP to the center's owner to determine the need in her own community. With O'Hare airport close by with its ring of motels, restaurants and night clubs; with four large hospitals in the general area; with the fringe of industries surrounding suburb after suburb, the need is surely there.

Although nighttime care became legal in Illinois in 1970, only two licensed night care centers exist in the whole of Cook County, one within Chicago and Angel Town.

As a daytime operation, Angel Town is licensed to accommodate up to 40 children and usually runs to capacity. There are two adults — a teacher and an aide — with every 12 children. Rates are $30 for a five-day week, including a hot noon meal each day.

FOR THE NIGHT hours, there will be a minimum of two staff members for a maximum of 20 sleeping children. Rates will be consistent with the present daytime rates.

Angel Town's night care will swing into operation July 18. Lorraine Angell invites inquiries regarding unusual hours of care for 2 to 7-year-olds. She may be contacted at 824-9104.

"Our main service is for children of parents who must work late hours, rotating shifts and weekends," she said. "But the whole thing is wide open until we see what kind of inquiries we get."

"It's possible to work out hours for the child so that his parent has time to work, time to sleep and can still spend many waking hours each day with his youngster."

Former Inverness girl, June bride

Former Inverness residents Mr. and Mrs. Robert L. Williams of Granada Hills, Calif., returned to the Chicago area for the June 9 wedding of their daughter, Lois Coffin Williams, to James Francis Antonucci.

The 3:30 p.m. service was held in St. Vincent Ferrar Church, River Forest, and the reception was held in the Inverness Golf Club.

Both Lois and her bridegroom, son of former Elmwood Park residents Mr. and Mrs. Joseph L. Antonucci who now reside in Hollywood, Fla., are 1973 graduates of the University of Miami at Coral Gables. Lois is still enrolled in the university where she will study for her master's degree in education for the deaf, and the newlyweds are making their home in Miami. In July they will honeymoon in Europe.

MATRON OF honor for the wedding was Lois' sister, Mrs. John A. Nylund, Milwaukee, Wis., and bridesmaids were Deborah Barham, Capron, Va.; Mrs.

Louis J. Antonucci, Hollywood, Fla.; and Mrs. Joseph S. Antonucci and Mrs. Oscar Wessman, Fort Lauderdale, Fla. Louis Antonucci was his brother's best man, and ushers were Dr. John A. Nylund; Phillip Mesi, Elmwood Park; and Joseph Antonucci and Oscar Wessman.

Lois chose a princess gown of silk organza with appliques of Alencon lace. Her cathedral veil was bordered in the same lace, and she carried white roses, gladiolus and English ivy. Her maids wore in buttercup chiffon with neck ruffles and Empire waists, and they carried yellow roses, baby's breath and yellow statice. Their headpieces were of the same flowers.

In college Lois became affiliated with Delta Gamma Sorority and James with Pi Kappa Alpha Fraternity.

The Consumer

by Monica Wilch

It isn't an old Chinese proverb that you should get what you bargain for; it's modern American law. But the law is often about as air-tight as a Chinese fortune cookie.

I recently opened a 19-ounce can of Chinese mixed vegetables, packed by the Great China Food Products Co. of Chicago, and found it filled almost entirely with bean sprouts, with a very few other vegetables at the bottom.

The label listed the ingredients as: bean sprouts, bamboo shoots, water chestnuts, mushrooms, pimiento, salt, cit-

Food can labels tell you little about contents ric acid and water. The picture on the label showed a bowl of mixed Chinese vegetables with the latter vegetables prominent.

But inside the can I counted about a dozen slices of water chestnut, 1/4 to 1/2 inch diameter; about half a dozen smaller pieces of bamboo shoot, and about the same number pieces of mushroom.

WONDERING IF THIS can was an exception, I bought another and dumped it out. That one had significantly more vegetables, although it still measured out to more than half bean sprouts.

The Food and Drug Administration has drawn up elaborate labeling requirements for all foods, but they are, for the most part, not mandatory and in some cases would be inadequate even if required.

The packers of the Chinese vegetables have followed FDA rules in listing ingredients in order of predominance. Nevertheless, since percentages are not given and since the picture on the label is misleading as to the actual contents, the consumer is still not getting what he thinks he is bargaining for.

Apartment hunting? If so, be wary about putting down a deposit to hold an apartment if there's a chance you might decide not to take it.

A number of northwest suburbanites have reported difficulties with various landlords in getting such deposits refunded. In some cases, the apartment shoppers just assumed they'd get the deposit back if they decided against the apartment, although there had been no agreement, verbal or written.

Other persons reported a verbal understanding that the deposit was refundable, and one reported having signed a lease application stating that the deposit would be refundable.

In all these cases, the apartment shoppers had difficulty — or were unsuccessful — in obtaining a refund when they decided not to take the apartments in question. Such deposits ranged from $25 to $100.

ACCORDING TO MIKE Park of the Apartment Council of Metropolitan Chicago, policy concerning deposits on apartments is up to the individual landlord or realty company. But, he said, many landlords ask potential tenants to sign a lease application which states that policy. Park said the usual procedure is that if the landlord rejects the would-be tenant, the deposit is refunded; but if the apartment seeker turns down the apartment, he forfeits the deposit.

The best rule for apartment seekers to follow is: always get an agreement about the deposit in writing. Do not rely on a verbal assurance, or worse, simply hand over the money without asking if it's refundable.

If there has been a written agreement that the money is refundable and the landlord refuses to return it, this is a breach of contract and subject to legal action.

Patrice Cullen marries med student

There'll be a doctor in the family of Mr. and Mrs. Philip J. Cullen, 623 S. Walnut, Arlington Heights. Their daughter, Patrice Joan, was married June 2 to Frederick Joseph Boehm who is now attending Southern Illinois University School of Medicine, Carbondale, where the newlyweds reside.

Patrice and Fred met three years ago while studying at the University of Illinois, Champaign, a '69 graduate of Sacred Heart High School. Patrice is a '72 graduate of the University of Illinois, and until her wedding was with the Cook County Department of Public Aid, Chicago. Fred is a February '73 graduate of the University of Illinois. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred J. Boehm of Decatur.

The pair's wedding took place during a 6 p.m. nuptial Mass in our Lady of the Wayside Church, Arlington Heights. It was both double ring and candlelight with Patrice wearing an Empire gown of sheer polyester with high, ruffled neckline and long sleeves, ruffled at the cuffs. Her fingertip veil was held by a headpiece of fresh white roses and small white mums, and she carried the same flowers with stephanotis.

PATRICE'S THREE sisters served as her attendants. Deborah was maid of honor, Mary Beth was bridesmaid, and 6-year-old Judith was flower girl. All wore pale green organza gowns, Empire styled with white sashes, and they carried yellow and white daisies. Judith's flowers were carried in a basket.

Linas Sadouskas was best man, and William Dickinson was groomsman. Ushers were Michael Peters and Joseph Kupish. All are from Decatur.

The service was followed by a reception for 125 at the Lancer Steak House, Schaumburg, after which the couple left on a 10-day honeymoon trip out west.

Music teacher weds in East

The end of the school year marked the beginning of married life for Rollin R. Potter, music director at Schaumburg High School. Rollin and Susan Marie Hickok were married June 23 in Christ the King Church in Worcester, Mass., and are now honeymooning in Bermuda.

Susan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Floyd A. Hickok of Scituate, Mass., and St. Petersburg, Fla., was graduated from the University of Connecticut and the University of Vermont. Accepted in the doctoral program at Boston University, she has been teaching at State College of Worcester.

Rollin, son of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Potter, Somonauk, Ill., studied at Worcester State and was graduated from De Paul University and VanderCook College of Music.

Susan was attended by a matron of honor and two bridesmaids for the 11 a.m. double ring service, and Rollin was attended by a best man and five ushers including John Hedberg of Arlington Heights and Thomas Trimbom of Palatine.

After their honeymoon the newlyweds will be residing in Barrington at 600 W. Russell St.

Newlyweds bicycling thru New England

A month-long bicycle tour of the New England states is about to end for newlyweds Orchard and Dennis Utzinger.

They chose the energetic honeymoon to follow their June 3 wedding in the chapel of St. Peter Lutheran Church, Arlington Heights. The nuptial date was the first anniversary of their meeting.

The bride is the former Orchard Lynn Battistoni, daughter of the Gene Battistoni of 110 S. Walnut, Arlington. A graduate of Arlington High School and the University of Illinois, she has been a youth development specialist for the Children's Home of Vermillion County in Danville, Ill., for the past year.

Her bridegroom is also a U of I graduate, earning a degree in architectural engineering the week after his marriage. He is the son of the Verle B. Utzingers of Glen Ellyn.

ORCHARD WAS AN especially busy bride-to-be, sewing her own gown and those of her three attendants as well as the skirt the groom wore for the afternoon ceremony.

She used India cloth for all the ensembles, making the groom's shirt in the same white color of her own wedding gown. The attendants' dresses were in a pink, lavender and turquoise floral printed India cloth.

Mr. and Mrs. Dennis Utzinger

The bride's gown was floor-length with sweetheart neckline and long puffed sleeves edged in white lace. Underneath was the petticoat her grandmother had worn at her wedding 57 years ago and at the neckline was her grandmother's gold watch and chain.

Completing the ensemble, Orchard wore a crown of white baby's breath over her hair and carried a nosegay of daisies, carnations, roses and baby's breath all in white.

SHE MADE THE attendants' gowns in the same style as her own gown but with short puffed sleeves. The girls carried nosegays of pink carnations, statice, turquoise daisies and baby's breath.

Mrs. Russ Brockman of Boulder, Colo., was her matron of honor and her sister, Jean Marie Battistoni, and Cathy Christopherson, Arlington Heights, were bridesmaids.

Mark Miller of Urbana was Dennis' best man, with John Hipkin, Champaign, and Richard O'Connell, Glen Ellyn, ushering.

A luncheon at Old Orchard Country Club for 40 relatives followed the double ring service.

The newlyweds will be moving to Storrs, Conn., on Sept. 1 to make their first home.

The Home Line

by Dorothy Ritz

Dear Dorothy: I've been annoyed by an insect about an inch long with legs on both sides of the body. It bothers me mostly at night; that is, I'm bitten at night in bed. I've used every kind of spray with no luck. We are near a body of water. Could they breed there? Hope you can help.

—Mrs. Ida R.

An inch long? Sure you haven't made an error in judging the size? I've not heard about biting bugs this large of the kind you describe. Normally, bites come from bedbugs or, if there are dogs around, ticks, but both of these usually are about a quarter of an inch or so.

Since the old pesticides are gone, it's more important than ever that insects be properly identified so the proper insecticide can be used. Best thing to do is wrap one of these things in cotton in a box, or put it in rubbing alcohol in a plastic pill container, and mail it to either your county extension agent or the university's extension division. This is a service they provide for all citizens.

Dear Dorothy: My clay pots picked up a whitish stain on the outside. A friend said this was a deposit of unused fertilizer salts. She said it would come off if soaked in a solution of one cup of chlorine bleach to two gallons of water. I did it, scrubbed them off, rinsed and dried them and they're as good as new.

Molly Gardner

When clay pots were so inexpensive, you could just shrug and replace them as needed. With inflation hitting everything, this is a useful tip and we thank you.

Dear Dorothy: When you're cleaning sour sponges with a baking soda solution, you really have to squeeze the soda water through the sponge. Otherwise, only the outside becomes sweet smelling.

—Hazel Duncan

Zero breakage

Lighter glass bottles and jars with "zero breakage" were predicted by Richard L. Cheney, a consultant to the Glass Container Manufacturers Institute, in a talk accepting the glass industry's Phoenix Award for outstanding service.

Cheney said that because of this, as well as the abundance of raw materials of which glass is made, more and more glass will be used as a replacement for containers made of other materials. He said "the new attributes of zero breakage and lighter weight, added to the chemical inertness, transparency, impermeability and lack of odor and taste of glass," will produce better containers for packaged goods.

Need an emesis basin? or a sphygmomanometer?

Maybe you'll never need a sphygmomanometer in your home — but if there's a sick member of the family who needs his blood pressure checked it's a handy gizmo to have around. So is an emesis basin (for "tossing cookies").

In its Lending Closet Arlington Heights Nurses Club has a sphyg (etc.) — which it loans to residents of Arlington Heights. It also has stethoscopes, and if the doctor orders, an aspirator.

The club also lends canes, crutches, walkers and wheelchairs (one with reclining back); hydraulic bath lifts, Hoyer lifts and paraffin baths; hospital beds, rubber sheets, back rests, bed tables and side rails; vaporizers and baby scales.

It also has such "necessary evils" as bed pans, urinals, commodes (one with elevated seat), rubber rings, toilet bars and emesis basins; and a host of miscellaneous equipment.

WITH ALL THIS equipment, lent free of charge to Arlington Heights residents, the club still welcomes suggestions for the addition of specific equipment not presently in its closet. Each suggestion will be given careful consideration according to Mrs. Raymond Shields, president.

The equipment is made available by the club as a community service and may be borrowed for a period of six months after which a committee reviews each request for longer usage on an individual basis.

CHAIRMAN OF THE closet is Mrs. Morton Clotfelter, 304-0131, and co-chairmen are Mrs. Robert Simon, 259-0272 and Mrs. Richard Ackerman, 259-0796. Because there are so many requests for vaporizers, one member is in charge of this equipment. She is Mrs. John Connor, 391-0853. Crutches are also a "popular" item and in charge of these are Mrs. George Williams, 394-4024, and Mrs. Bernard Treanowski, 253-8974.

Mrs. Raymond Shields, 392-3087, is club president.

A LITTLE ELBOW grease on the part of Ruth Park and Jeanne Kessell, with Neil Hunter of Lancer Corp. as kibitzer, polishes up a table that will be auctioned off Saturday. The auction is sponsored by the newly formed Service League of the new Rush Presbyterian St. Luke's Medical Center North to be constructed in Schaumburg. It will include furniture from Lancer model homes and will be held at the Lancer Corp., barn, 401 S. Roselle Road. Doors will open at 10 a.m., auctioning at 11. The sale is the first fund raiser of the league which is open to both men and women. Senior citizens are also urged to join by calling Mrs. Kessell, president at 885-2391.

Make reservations by July 2 for Garden Club summer meet

The summer meeting of the Garden Club of Illinois will be held Monday, July 9, at the Barn of Barrington, on Barrington Road. Barrington garden club members will be hostesses.

Mrs. Eugene J. Tamillo of Des Plaines, state president, will preside at the 10:30 a.m. business meeting. Mrs. Earl Glenn of Granite City will conduct a workshop covering requirements and eligible projects for the Environmental Improvement Program for the 1973-1975 Sears competition.

Lunch at noon will be followed by "Search for Early Man in Illinois," a program by Stuart Streuver, associate professor of anthropology at Northwestern University. Streuver will cite the latest developments at the Koster site, location of prehistoric communities.

Reservations by July 2 are being received by Mrs. Robert Wellington, Sutton Road, Barrington, 60010. Lunch and program is $6.50; checks are payable to Garden Club of Illinois, Inc. For guests arriving by train, the council has arranged transportation to the "Barn" from the North Western Railway station, Barrington.

Next On The Agenda

ARLINGTON HOMEMAKERS

Arlington Heights Homemaker Unit will learn "Truths about Pressing" at today's meeting in the Museum Lecture Hall, 110 W. Fremont St. The program begins at one o'clock.

Mrs. Shirley McCann will give the lesson. Mrs. John Rebel and Mrs. Bea Nichols are hostesses.

Area women head Michael Reese Dysfunction Center

Mrs. Elyn Wieselman of Skokie has been re-elected chairman of the Dysfunctional Child Center — Young People's Division of Michael Reese Medical Center. The group of young adults raises funds for the center which helps children with multiple handicaps due to brain dysfunction.

Other officers include Des Plaines residents Mrs. Bonny Gellner, secretary, and Mrs. Laura Tasky, chairman of the Earning Fund Program.

The newly formed organization includes many daughters from the parent Dysfunctional Child Center. The group is now forming a young people's division in the southern suburbs.

A sewing notions manufacturer has introduced a metal creation roughly similar to a bobby pin. It is a bodkin and has interlocking teeth that grip material to be threaded and a metal ring that slides the length of the shank to hold the teeth in place. Elastic can't twist, ribbon lies flat, draw strings won't get lost inside the casing — when the bodkin's on the scene.

By-the-yard apparel trims especially designed for use on children's garments include those with teddy bears, trains, baby birds, pull toys, ABCs and lots of figures of little children — tumbling, jumping and doing all sorts of joyful things. The trims are shrinkage controlled, retain appearance after repeated washing and are colorfast.

An anti-mating spray (for dogs)

Now there's an anti-mating spray for dogs. Fido won't like the news, and Fifi may not like it either. But Pet'm Laboratories of Fort Washington, Pa., is now promoting a spray called Snub which they say when applied to female dogs will make male dogs pass them by.

Although extremely pungent, Snub does not smell all that bad to humans. And, according to Pet'm Laboratories, it is not the smell of Snub that turns away male dogs, but the chemical action on the scent which emanates from the female. Snub doesn't mask this smell, but it does change its character so that male dogs simply don't get the message.

The product is now being sold through pet shops and other retail outlets. Pet'm Laboratories says the product should soon be available in all major markets.

Have A Nice Holiday

For A Happy Life

It's fun in June to:

1. Rearrange your area for washing and sorting clothes to make it more convenient.
2. Sit under a shade tree with a glass of iced tea and write a long overdue letter.
3. Amuse your little ones with a make-believe day camp at home.
4. Think Christmas! Make an apron with a pot holder to match.
5. Give your little girl a new shorter hairdo.
6. Bake a couple of dozen of Parker House rolls and have on hand in the freezer.
7. Make a change in the way you spend your day so it is more satisfying. Rearrange working hours, snacktime or mealtime.
8. Tell yourself this: "Today is the tomorrow you worried about yesterday and all is well." Author unknown.

A reminder to brides

The Herald reminds brides-to-be of the deadlines in effect for reporting wedding news. Full information is printed on forms available in all the Herald offices.

For detailed wedding story (including gown descriptions) information is due within three weeks following wedding date. Information received in Herald office after three weeks and up to five weeks following wedding date will be used for a brief story only or caption.

Accompanying picture should be a black and white glossy close-up photo (bouquet and up) of bridal pair or bride alone. At the discretion of the editors and the Herald photo department, color photos may or may not be used, depending on color tones contrast and clarity. Small snapshots are not acceptable.

We suggest the bride or some member of the family select a photo for the newspaper immediately upon receiving photographer's proof. Better yet — have the photographer make a selection and send it immediately to the Herald office. Any delay may mean missing the deadline.

If your photographer cannot comply with deadlines, write-up will be published without a photo providing information is in the Herald office before the deadline.

If wedding bells will soon be ringing in your family, we want to hear them, too. There is no charge for publishing this news.

The Potting Shed

by Mary B. Good

Good friend Paul Voykin has an important article in the July issue of Flower and Garden magazine about his specialty, lawn maintenance.

Paul is a nationally known turf expert, author of the book, "A Perfect Lawn the Easy Way" and grounds director at Brinwood Country Club in Deerfield. I was fortunate enough to get a sneak preview of his latest book, when he asked me to proof-read selected chapters for him, and it promises to be another winner for Paul when it is released.

I subscribe wholeheartedly to Voykin's watering and mowing approach to spring and summer lawn care.

Voykin doesn't believe in fertilizing or watering early in the year, or mowing home lawns lower than 2 1/2 inches. "A waste of time," "fruitless" is his assessment of spring seedling. (All lazy gardeners should immediately nominate this man for the gardeners hall of fame.)

THE THIRD WEEK of May is early enough to feed the lawn, because roots can't grow until the soil warms up anyway. Feed again around Labor Day. Paul recommends a 10-6-4, but as an organic gardener I prefer to make my own instead of buying chemical fertilizer, which I believe causes hard pan in clay soils, and does not do the job of promoting good (with as organic fertilizers do. (I use a combination of four parts Milorganite, one part granular Sea-Born seaweed, one part bone meal, a handful of blood meal and a smidgen of gypsum.)

If you wait until after July 4th to water, grass roots stretch down into the ground, and this builds a strong root system. Frequent light waterings are bad news to lawn grasses — it only teases them. Soaking the lawn thoroughly, until it squishes beneath your foot, and not oftener than once a week is the best lawn prescription.

THE ONLY TIME well spent in early lawn care is getting out the weeds (dandelion, plantain, etc.) before they become too well established. If crabgrass is starting to show up — and it's just about time this week — raise that mower blade and the lawn will crowd it out. (Crabgrass needs sun to thrive.)

If you plan to start a new lawn this season and are interested in what type of seed is best for your situation, check out Paul Voykin's article in the July issue of Flower and Garden. He gives the pros and cons of a dozen varieties.

And remember that good timing in doing the various lawn chores is the whole secret to good grass.

A Dec. 29 wedding is planned by Paula Meehling and her fiancé, Sears L. Hallett III. The couple's engagement and approaching marriage are announced by Paula's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert P. Meehling, 435 S. Beverly, Arlington Heights. Sears is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Sears L. Hallett, Barrington.

A graduate of Arlington High School, Paula is now a student at Harper College. Her fiancé, a graduate of Barrington High School, also studied at Harper. He is employed as a radio announcer.

Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Bertrand of Wheeling announce the engagement of their daughter, Annette, to Joseph D. Catania of Buffalo Grove.

The couple plan a Sept. 22 wedding.

A graduate of Wheeling High School, Annette is employed by the Nazarene Nursery School in Mount Prospect. Her fiancé, whose parents are the Joseph D. Catanas of Des Plaines, is a Notre Dame High School graduate and now vice president of Jay-See Cartage Co., Chicago.

The engagement of Kimberly Jean Voots to Randy Maday, son of the Eugene Madays of 1402 Ironwood Drive, Mount Prospect, is announced by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. David E. Voots of Joliet.

The couple's wedding date is not yet set.

Both Kimberly and Randy attend Northern Illinois University. She graduated from a Joliet high school and Randy from one in Cincinnati.

Mr. and Mrs. Anton D. Martin Jr., Arlington Heights, announce the engagement of their daughter, Valerie Faith, to Eugene Mitchell Liptak, son of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene W. Liptak, Chesterland, Ohio.

The couple is planning an early autumn wedding.

Mr. Liptak is an engineer and Miss Martin is a secretary, both working in the northwest suburban area.

The engagement of a University of Illinois pair, Mary Jane Meyers and Kenneth J. Ossola, is announced by Mary Jane's mother, Mrs. Ruth T. Meyers, 105 E. Lillian, Arlington Heights. An early fall wedding is planned.

Both Mary Jane and Ken, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph P. Ossola, Collinsville, Ill., are '73 graduates of the university where Mary Jane was affiliated with Alpha Chi Omega Sorority and Ken with Phi Gamma Delta Fraternity. Ken is now with the Aluminum Company of America, Pittsburgh, Pa.

Pamela J. Bailey of Rolling Meadows and Thomas J. Duffy of East Troy, Wis., are engaged and planning a Dec. 22 wedding. Pamela's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Matthew W. Bailey of 3601 Jay Lane South, are making the announcement.

The bride-to-be teaches at Barrington High School. She attended Sacred Heart of Mary High School and the University of Wisconsin at Whitewater.

Thomas, son of the Harry Duffys, is also a graduate of the university at Whitewater and a member of Phi Chi Epsilon Fraternity. He works for U.S. Steel in Milwaukee.

Birth notes

Stork delivers Lisa at home

Mr. Stork's timing was off the morning of June 15. He had planned to deliver Mr. and Mrs. Chester Malanowski's baby girl in Northwest Community Hospital, but things happened too fast. Within minutes of the first warning Lisa, 5 pounds 14 1/2 ounces, arrived in her own home in Wauconda with the help of a neighbor whose mother "had told her just what to do in emergencies of this type."

In the pandemonium the baby was wrapped in her 20-month-old brother, Chad's favorite blanket. The ambulance arrived and Chad's daddy took him next door — without his blanket. Mother and baby were driven to Northwest Community Hospital.

Mrs. Malanowski is the former Merry Lee Auer, daughter of the Kenneth G. Auer of Arlington Heights. Paternal grandparents of the children are the Kazimierz Malanowskis who hurried from their home in Grayslake and were also present for Lisa's unexpected arrival.

Great-grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Fleischauer of Arlington Heights.

NORTHWEST COMMUNITY
Rochelle Ann Flester is the new Palatine resident at 1171 Azalea Lane. She was born June 11, a daughter for Mr. and Mrs. Robert A. Flester. Grandparents of the 7 pound 10 1/2 ounce baby are the Arthur Olsaks, Mount Prospect, and the Elmer J. Flesters, Wheeling. John Flester, Wheeling, is one of Rochelle's great-grandparents.

Rebecca Marie Hiltburn is a sister for Janet, 7, and Glenda, 4, in the Richard Edward Hiltburn home at 10 Hinkle Lane, Schaumburg. She was born June 11 weighing 7 pounds 9 ounces. Mr. and Mrs. Philip Springer, Palatine, and Mrs. Helen Wilson, Des Plaines, are the grandparents of the girls.

Carrie Ann Iannella has joined David and Julie, 1, and Steven, 2, in the Clifford C. Iannella home, 1332 Chartwell Road, Schaumburg. Carrie was born June 17 and weighed 7 pounds 8 ounces. Mrs. Martha Larson, Chicago, and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Iannella, Park Ridge, are the grandparents of the child.

Kerrie Anne Thoma was a June 10 arrival for Mr. and Mrs. Fred Thoma, 206 W. Campbell, Arlington Heights. Grandparents of the 8 pound 1 ounce baby are Mr. and Mrs. Frank Philbin and Mr. and Mrs. George Thoma, all of Rolling Meadows.

Charles Michael Janisch is the sixth child for Mr. and Mrs. Charles Janisch, 421 Oriole Lane, Mount Prospect. He was born June 17, a brother for Sandy, 21, Kathy, 20, Danny, 18, Leslie, 17, and Kelly, 8. Mr. and Mrs. Walter Mulso, Mount Prospect, are their grandparents.

William Frederick Erickson's birth on June 19 adds a son to the Frederick L. Erickson family of 4706 Arbor Drive, Rolling Meadows. He has a sister, Karen, 2. The baby, who weighed 8 pounds 5 ounces, is the grandson of the Jack Garrosts of Orchard Lake, Mich., and the E. F. Ericksons of Cincinnati, Ohio.

Donna Jean Barron, born to Mr. and Mrs. Donald Barron of Schaumburg on June 21, weighed 6 pounds 14 ounces. She is now at home with her parents and two brothers: Mike, 7, and Steven, 4. Mrs. Lorraine Barron of Elmwood Park, Ill., and Mr. and Mrs. Peter Murray of Chicago are Donna's grandparents.

Kenneth George Reese, the newcomer a 510 S. Arlington Heights Road, Arlington Heights, is the first son but fourth child of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Reese. He arrived June 21 at 6 pounds 10 1/2 ounces. Kenneth's sisters are Tammy Lynn, 7, Jodi Rae, 5, and Jackie Gall, 21 months old.

Traci Leigh Jesse is the fifth child in the Richard L. Jesse home at 905 Hillside, Mount Prospect. Her birth on June 21 adds another sister for Jolene, 12, Deanna, 11, Jennifer, 9, and David, 7. Grandmothers of the 9 pound 13 ounce are Mrs. Helen Black of Fox River Grove and Mrs. Martha Jesse of Woodstock.

LUTHERAN GENERAL

Raffaele Druetta, born June 8 weighing 8 pounds 10 1/2 ounces, is the second son of Mr. and Mrs. Flavio Druetta of 1105 Holiday Lane, Des Plaines. His big brother is 8-year-old Palo, and their grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Giuseppe Druetta and Mr. and Mrs. Albo Deyme, all living in Italy.

Barbara Ann Eyre arrived June 9 to the delight of brothers and sisters Shaw, 11; Joanne, 10; Linda, 6; and John, 5. They are the children of Mr. and Mrs. Richard W. Eyre of Des Plaines, and the grandchildren of the James Eyres of Des Plaines and Mr. and Mrs. Carl Beck of Fox Lake. Barbara weighed 5 pounds 6 ounces.

OTHER HOSPITALS

Christine Anne Seaberg was born June 14 in Community Memorial General Hospital, La Grange, to Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Seaberg, 800 Dresser Drive, Mount Prospect. The 5 pound 11 ounce baby is a sister for 3-year-old Brian and a granddaughter for Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Barnes, La Grange, and Mr. and Mrs. Folke Seaberg, Park Ridge.

To increase citizen involvement

Park board to set up links with community groups

In an effort to improve public relations, Buffalo Grove Park Board Pres. Gene Muryn will attempt to establish liaisons with various local community organizations.

Muryn is hoping closer cooperation between the park district and community service clubs and other groups will increase citizen involvement in park activities.

"We really want to work closely with these groups on park matters," Muryn said. "We appreciate all the input we can get on what people think about parks and what they want to see us do."

MURYN SAID HE plans to send letters to the presidents of each organization, offering to provide them with agendas for park board meetings and inviting them to attend.

The board meets the second and fourth Thursday of each month at 8 p.m. in the Emmerich Park building, 150 Raupp Blvd.

Attendance at park board meetings is normally low. Muryn said he hopes local organizations will appoint one person to attend the sessions and report back to the group.

"We want to do everything we can to get as much communication going as possible," Muryn said. He was elected to head the board in May, replacing Bill Kiddle who had served as president of the board since the park district was established in 1969.

MURYN ALSO SAID he would like to see the park district cooperate with local groups to stage joint activities. He mentioned several types of special events such as bike hikes, pool parties and teen events as possible projects that the park district and organizations could stage together.

The park district presently works with Omni-House: Youth Services Bureau in Wheeling, donating free use of the Emmerich Park building for a teen coffee-house that is open Friday and Sunday evenings.

The park district also cooperates with the Buffalo Grove Recreation Association in providing a baseball program for local boys and with the Buffalo Grove Football Association.

Other groups, including the Buffalo Grove Jaycees, the Junior Woman's Club and PTA and homeowners' associations have also cooperated in park district activities.

"The whole idea is just to get as many people involved as possible," Muryn said. "We all have the same goal and that's to have good parks in Buffalo Grove."

Levitt building permits: one at a time

by PAT GERLACH

Effective immediately, building permits for all Levitt-constructed houses in Schaumburg will be issued one at a time.

Issuance of Levitt building permits will now depend entirely on satisfactory completion of the house for which the prior permit was issued, according to village board action Tuesday.

Residents' repeated complaints of "shoddy workmanship" and reports of the builder's negative or unresponsive attitude are responsible for the change.

EACH HOUSE will be individually inspected on completion and now permit fees ranging from $225 to $350 per unit will be charged by the village. The prior practice had been to issue permits based on village building department approval of plans for a specific model home, at the same time.

However, residents of Levitt's Sheffield communities have charged the builder with misrepresentation and claim that homes are not finished like the models.

Eugene P. McDonald, 1328 Elgin Ln., told trustees his house contains woodwork of five or six different wood grains and colors.

McDonald, a graduate engineer with seven years experience in the building profession, said he initially received no response to his complaint about the woodwork. The builder had "run out of stuff so you got what was left over," McDonald said he was eventually told.

"MY TIME IN Schaumburg has not been bad, but getting Levitt to meet what was presented as the great intrinsic points of the house has been hell," McDonald continued.

McDonald believes the builder should be made to include items of the quality displayed in model homes.

Trustee Herb Aigner, who later called for the stringent supervision of building permits for Levitt, told McDonald the village board could not be expected to act as a consumer education group.

"But I expect you to be consumer oriented when the builder comes to ask for a variance," the resident replied.

Plans presented and accepted in good faith should be carried through, he added.

"I just ask that you keep hearing our problems and maybe one day Levitt will come through," he concluded.

KAREN RUSSELL, who lived in a Levitt-Sheffield house for the past 18 months, also spoke.

Mrs. Russell said her house was "condemned" by the village health department sometime ago because of gases noted in her backyard. Repeated contacts have failed to bring the builder back to investigate, she added.

Mary Anne Clarke, of the same development, told of having a wet garage for two years until Levitt workers constructed a trench to carry off water last week. Pat Riley advised trustees that pillars in front of her house crumbled several months ago because of improper footings. They were not repaired until residents threatened to warn local newspapers, she added.

"I have about had it with Levitt," Aigner said. While he favored an immediate building permit cutoff for Levitt, Village Atty. Jack Segel said that would not be legally possible.

Segel, however, suggested that future building permits be issued on a single basis until the builder "demonstrates an improvement."

DADDY'S LITTLE GIRL is pretty special. Six-month-old the Joe Schermer family in Buffalo Grove. The local Amy Krisanne traveled halfway around the world to join couple is adopting the Korean orphan.

Tiny Korean orphan finds love with new family in village

by JILL BETTNER

Little Amy Krisanne squeals with delightful laughter as her new daddy shakes her playfully high above his head.

Rosy-cheeked, happy, she looks like any child responding to love.

The response is immediate, not learned, but natural for all children — even this tiny Korean orphan who's finding love for the first time.

Amy has her first real home now with the Joe Schermer family, 693 MacArthur Dr., Buffalo Grove, halfway around the world from the Korean town where she was born six months ago.

IT WAS A LONG, rough trip for everybody.

Joe and Phyllis said when they decided a year ago to adopt an overseas orphan, they had no idea there was so much red tape involved.

The Holt Adoption Agency in Eugene, Ore., handled most of the arrangements. Mrs. Schermer said, along with the Illinois Department of Children and Family Services, who conducted a home study on the Schermers.

There were interviews at home, interviews downtown, applications to fill out, medical tests for the entire family and references to obtain from friends and relatives. The Schermers compiled all the information and then they waited — and waited.

"From the time we got the applications, the whole process took from a year ago June to August," Mrs. Schermer said. "After we turned it all in, we heard nothing for two months."

SHE WAITED as long as she could. Mrs. Schermer said, and finally called the Holt agency in October. The agency told her the information on the family and Amy was in the hands of the Immigration and Naturalization Service and it would probably be another three to five months before they would know anything.

To pass the time, Mrs. Schermer went to work as a secretary at Adlai Stevenson High School in Prairie View. The women there later gave her a baby shower and another group of neighbors also surprised her with gifts.

The five-month wait stretched to six and then to seven and the Schermers learned the immigration service had lost Amy's birth certificate and some other important papers.

"It was so frustrating," Joe said. "It was like hitting our heads against a brick wall."

Finally, the Schermers learned the last week in May that Amy would arrive at O'Hare Airport Friday, June 1.

THE FAMILY, that includes three of the Schermer's own children, was ecstatic to have the baby home at last, said

Mrs. Schermer, but Amy spent only two nights with them. It was then learned that she had to go to the hospital to be treated for rickets, a vitamin D deficiency disease.

Amy spent 10 days in the hospital, but she's healthy now and home to stay.

"She just fits in beautifully," Mrs. Schermer said. "We couldn't ask for a better baby."

Mrs. Schermer is anxious to be the friend and confidant she didn't have to other couples interested in adopting overseas children.

just having somebody to talk to about it."

The couple agreed that despite the frustrations in getting Amy, they'd go through it all again.

"It requires a lot of patience and there were a few tears shed in between time, too. You think it will never happen, but it does."

The Schermers feel giving Amy a home is their way of helping someone who needs them.

"We always wanted to do something for somebody and this seemed a good way," Mrs. Schermer said. They will go (Continued on Page 3)

This Morning In Brief

The nation

In an emergency action designed to head off meat, poultry and milk shortages, the administration imposed an immediate embargo on exports of soybeans, cotton seeds and the meal and oil products from those two crops.

President Nixon, declaring it would have a crippling effect on a negotiated peace settlement, has vetoed legislation that would have cut off funds for bombing in Cambodia.

Marine Sgt. Abel Larry Kavanaugh, who returned from five years in a Viet Cong POW camp, apparently committed suicide with a gunshot in the temple, Commerce City, Colo., police reported.

The White House, breaking weeks of silence, accused ousted presidential counsel John W. Dean III of being the "principal author of the political and constitutional crisis" triggered by the Watergate scandal.

The Senate has unanimously confirmed Clarence Kelley — a veteran of 21 years with the FBI and 12 as police chief in Kansas City — as the second man ever to permanently head the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

The Senate overwhelmingly approved a 5.6 per cent across-the-board increase in Social Security benefits starting the first of next year.

Are they poultry?

Homing pigeons to be homeless?

by JEANNETTE DE WYZE

Frank Link loves his pigeons. And now that a conflict has developed between Link and Wheeling officials over the birds, he says he'll fight to keep them.

The Links have around 50 pigeons, housed in a coop behind their house at 642 Merle Ln. The birds are racing-homing pigeons, specially bred for speed. Although the Link family and their birds have been in Wheeling for over a year, they had no trouble until a Wheeling Building Department enforcement officer appeared at their door a few weeks ago, telling them that they would have to get rid of the pigeons.

Link talked to other people in the department and wrote a letter which was read before the village board, explaining why he feels he should be allowed to keep the birds. But as of yet, the Links have heard nothing further from the village.

"So we're going to just sit here and wait until we get a ticket or something. And then we'll take it to court and fight if we have to," Sue Link said.

APPARENTLY the village is still deciding the question. At the center of the controversy is a Wheeling ordinance which prohibits residents from keeping poultry on their property. The ordinance mentions chickens but not pigeons. While the building department officials say that they feel the ordinance extends to pigeons, the Links argue that it shouldn't.

Village officials also say that they've had complaints from the Link's neighbors about the birds, but the Links say that no one has ever complained to them.

Out by the wooden frame which serves as the birds' coop, a soft cooing signals the pigeons' presence. Mrs. Link said that's the only noise the birds make.

"I don't see how that could bother anyone," she said.

LINK BUILT the coop for the birds in November, to replace a smaller coop. While he's still working on improving the new coop, he said he's temporarily stopped working on it until he gets the word from the village.

"I've put over $1,000 into those two coops, and I don't want to keep pouring money into them if we're going to have to move," he said.

Link's fascination with pigeons began when he was a little boy. His father brought home a common city pigeon for him one day and he's had pigeons ever since. When the Link family moved out to Arizona several years ago they took all their pigeons with them and when they moved back to the Chicago area — back came the pigeons.

The pigeons play a big role in the Link's life. Mrs. Link said she's learned how to take care of the birds since she and her husband were married.

"I MARRIED a husband and a flock of birds," she jokes. Even the two children in the family seem to love them.

Both Link and his wife tend to the birds. Besides feeding them and cleaning the coop, the pigeons which race must also be exercised twice a day.

For exercise the pigeons are let out of their coop to fly. The Links say that the flock will fly around the area of the house and then return to the backyard when they are tired.

"Sometimes they'll fly around for an hour or so when they're feeling good," Mr. Link said.

The pigeons are also taken out two or three times a week to be trained for racing. Training begins before the birds can even fly. According to Mrs. Link the young birds are let out in the back yard so they can become familiar with the area.

Then when the birds are five to six weeks old they are taken short distances away from the house. The birds which don't return home are ignored and the remaining birds are taken out for increasingly longer distances.

A good bird can fly home from distances of more than 600 miles, Link said.

LINK, ALONG with around 30 other members of a Palatine-based pigeon club, races his pigeons several times a year. All the pigeons in a given race are taken to some spot equidistant from the homes of all the members entered in the race. The members then log in the time when the birds return on a special racing clock.

When a bird consistently wins races, its owner will use it for breeding and then auction it off for further breeding. Link said all the members of the club donate the money from auctioned birds to provide scholarships for student nurses. The Links said they can't understand why anyone would complain about the birds. "They won't land on anybody's roof but our own. They know where to go. They're very intelligent birds," Mrs. Link said. The birds even return home when her husband shakes their feed can and whistles for them.

"THEY KNOW his whistle," she said. Link said the birds also know when they're being properly treated. They won't return home unless handled gently and carefully.

Explaining why he likes the birds, Link said, "Maybe I like the way they return home."

If the village absolutely orders him to get rid of the birds, Link will ask the judge to have the birds locked up long enough for him to sell his home and move. But the Links intend to fight the village before they do that.

"I just can't live without them. They're like a part of the family," he says.

SUE LINK HOLDS one of the many racing pigeons owned by Sue and her husband. The Links keep the pigeons in a coop which they fixed up in the backyard of their Wheeling home. The village has told the Links that they must get rid of the birds because of a village ordinance prohibiting poultry. The Links say that they will fight to keep the birds.

Mosquito forecast bugs two experts

It's been an all right year, so far as mosquitoes go. But mosquito watchers differ in their forecasts of what to expect this weekend.

John L. Clarke Jr., vice president of Clarke Outdoor Spraying Co. Inc., La Grange, predicts the pesky insects will be out in full force over the weekend.

However, Wilbur R. Mitchell, director of the Northwest Mosquito Abatement District, Wheeling, says the mosquitoes shouldn't be bad at all.

Both authorities base their outlooks on the heavy storm which hit the Northwest suburban area June 16, but draw opposite conclusions from the storm and ensuing weather conditions.

CLARKE SAYS the storm produced the usual effect of carrying mosquito eggs to bodies of standing water, where, with the subsequent two weeks of warm weather, they're about ready to hatch.

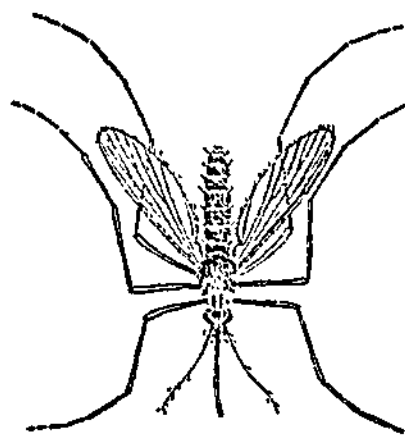

Mitchell, on the other hand, says "good

Mitchell, whose abatement district handles anti-mosquito efforts throughout the Northwest suburbs, said regular checks on the mosquito population showed "a drastic drop" in the past two days.

ORIGINAL estimates for a bumper crop of mosquitoes this season, he said, have not been fulfilled. "So far, it's shaping up real good," he added.

Clarke, whose firm has been engaged for mosquito control by 120 Chicago area communities, including Palatine, Hoffman Estates and Schaumburg, says, "At this point, the mosquito population throughout the Chicago area is very light. We are more or less between broods."

However, "we still have eggs out there," he added. "How bad it will be depends on the rainfall. The potential is still there."

Clarke gave the following yardstick for anticipating mosquito population: Half an inch of rainfall, followed by warm temperatures, produces "mild annoyance" two weeks later. An inch and a half to two inches of rainfall produces "high annoyance." Four inches of rainfall — "extreme annoyance."

First Federal Savings offers all its passbook savers everyday interest on every dollar every day it's on deposit with us.

"everyday"

Interest. That's pretty special. But there's more. That daily interest is compounded daily. Paid quarterly. So you can deposit when you like. Withdraw when you need to. Never lose interest provided you maintain $25 or more in your account at the end of the quarter. In fact, you even gain. All money deposited by the 10th earns from the 1st ... If you leave it on deposit until the end of the calendar quarter. Sounds interesting? But what does "everyday" interest mean in dollars and cents? It means that our 5% passbook interest actually earns more when compounded every day the First Federal Savings way. It makes a difference.

Schools budget OK expected

The Dist. 21 school board tonight is expected to approve the tentative $11,680,210 budget for the 1973-74 fiscal year.

The proposed budget is up about $500,000 over last year's total cash outlay of $11,121,613.

Any district residents objecting to items in the budget may express their feelings at tonight's public hearing. If there is no opposition, it is likely the board will officially pass the budget.

An executive session to discuss personnel is the first item on the agenda of the meeting that is scheduled to begin at 8 p.m. in the board room of the Dist. 21 administration building, 999 W. Dundee Rd. in Wheeling.

The board is also to consider bids for the installation of acoustical tile and plaster repair at Whitman School. The work is part of a $73,000 renovation program that has already begun at the district's oldest building.

OTHER ITEMS on the agenda include:

—General bids for shades, towel service, gym dividers, stage curtains, machinery, music equipment, heating at Twain School, a Howard Roto-tiller, paint and a delivery van and maintenance truck.

—Attendance boundaries for the two new schools in the district, Washington Irving School in Buffalo Grove and Robert Louis Stevenson School in Wheeling.

—Proposal for air conditioning Holmes Junior High School in Wheeling.

—Annual budget for the Northwest Educational Cooperative.

—Building fund for a center for the education of trainable mentally handicapped children.

—Salaries for school principals for 1973-74.

to court in about six months to legally adopt Amy.

THE COUPLE first considered adopting an American child, but they learned that there is a two or three-year waiting list of couples who want babies.

Negotiating team to weigh pay proposals

Negotiating teams of the Prospect Heights Dist. 21 school board and the Prospect Heights Education Association (PHEA) will exchange salary proposals at a special meeting June 13.

Members of both teams will meet at 7:30 p.m. July 10 to discuss the proposals and to tentatively approve the procedural part of the teachers' 1973-74 contract.

Several items — including a teacher's grievance procedure, faculty advisory committees, binding arbitration and a no-strike clause — were dropped by both sides.

"We found out we wouldn't be doing anything by applying for an American child," Joe said, "so we decided to try to get an overseas child who otherwise wouldn't have a chance."

This isn't the first time the Schermers have shared their home with an orphaned child. They have had four foster children at different times in the past nine years.

The last foster child was a baby, Mrs. Schermer said, who was very hard for the family to give up. That's when the couple began discussing a permanent adoption.

"We're all so happy to have Amy," she said, "when we had our own kids, Joe and I shared in the happiness, but with Amy the happiness is multiplied because they can share it too."

Saturday is deadline for new contract

Phone company employees vote to authorize strike

by AL MESSERSCHMIDT
Central Telephone Co. employees — protesting delays on contract settlement — last night authorized union negotiators to call a July 1 strike.

Local 336 of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers voted 496 to 207 to authorize a strike if a contract is not settled by Saturday. The union contract, which affects about 1,000 non-management employees, expires at 12:01 a.m. Sunday.

"See you on the line," Thomas Beagley, president and business manager of the union, told employees at a meeting at the American Legion Hall in Des Plaines.

Beagley said a strike is "very likely. We only have two days left and we haven't even started to talk about money yet."

Beagley said a strike could be called off if Central presents a contract proposal by Friday. "We'd even be willing to negotiate on Saturday," he said.

The vote last night was the first strike authorization in the history of the local. In 1970, the union came within five hours of a strike vote but Central presented a Sunday contract that members voted to accept before the walkout.

Union negotiators met in two sessions yesterday with Central employees to explain progress in contract talks.

The union charged, in a mimeographed handout distributed yesterday, that Central has threatened to lay off 28 employees effective July 14 in "reaction to the call for a special meeting Wednesday."

"DID THEY (CENTRAL) come to the bargaining table willing to negotiate and reach agreement by July 1? No — instead they informed the union late Tuesday afternoon that they intended to lay off 28 members," the negotiators said.

"It should be clear to everybody the company's timing on this action was intended to scare the members," union officials said.

Beagley outlined union demands in a May 7 letter to employees. The letter was accompanied by a 15-demand list.

The union is seeking a 50-cent per hour wage hike for journeymen, traffic, commercial, plant, clerical and billing department employees. Requested raise for apprentices is 30 cents an hour.

OTHER DEMANDS include:

- Double-time pay for Sunday work and overtime on Saturday. Time-and-a-half for other overtime and regularly scheduled Saturday work.

- An increase from two to three weeks vacation time after five consecutive years of employment. Ten-year employees would receive four weeks and 20-year employees would receive five weeks. The three-week step is now after seven years employment.

- Change in the pension plan to provide 2 per cent benefit based on highest five years of earnings and length of employment.

- Increases in medical benefits, including dental insurance.

A final union proposal calls for an employees' savings plan. The plan would allow deduction from employee salaries, up to six per cent. The funds would be invested in the savings plan and would not be taxed.

Scoreboard: K-Mart 2, Thieves 0

The Oakton Street K-Mart was kept busy Tuesday keeping track of its shoes and boots. The store was the site of two unsuccessful thefts.

Two young girls were taken into custody by Des Plaines police after they were stopped by a store security officer for stealing a pair of $4.97 shoes, police said.

The security officer said one of the local girls had attempted to leave the store, 1155 Oakton St., without paying.

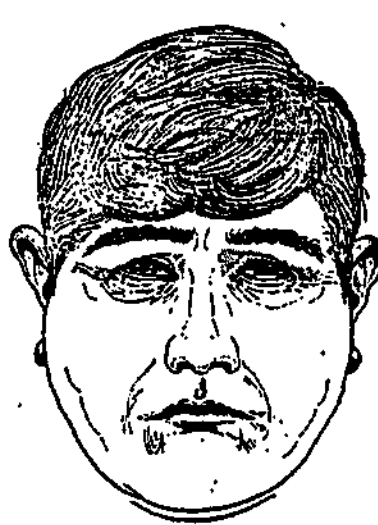

Police said two grams of marijuana were found in the purse of one of the girls after she was taken into custody. Both girls were released to their parents.

In a second incident a Chicago man and woman were arrested after they tried to leave the K-Mart with a $15.91 pair of boots, according to police.

Thomas Foster, 43 and Sarah Foster, 36, both of 2914 Belden Ave., were turned over to Des Plaines police after being stopped by store security officers.

A pair of socks was found inside the woman's purse, police said.

The two were charged with theft and released on bond. They have been scheduled to appear in Des Plaines branch of Cook County Circuit Court July 26.

IDENTI-KIT composites of two men in connection with a series of recent Pandora Steak House robberies.

62 billion faces

Identi-kit fights crime

by JOHN MAES

It starts with a victim — someone who has experienced the impact and trauma of being robbed, raped or mugged and must compose himself enough to try to describe his attacker to police.

But it all happened so fast — and it was dark. The victim can't remember much about his assailant except the guy was tall, had a large face and thinning hair on top.

Even as the victim attempts the vaguest description of his aggressor, the police are putting together more than just a mental picture of the offender.

That something more is the Identi-kit composite sketch, by which police can build a facial picture of a suspect.

THE SYSTEM uses hundreds of combinations of transparent plates, or foils, containing different facial features such as chins, noses, eyes and eyebrows, beards, mustaches, hairlines and even eyelids.

From witness descriptions, police are able to construct a face by selecting foils of features most likely to fit the offender and place them one on top of the other until the composite is complete.

The system, developed 13 years ago by an ex-detective with the Los Angeles police department is now used by police and federal law enforcement agencies in 45 states and 15 foreign countries.

An estimated 62 billion different face combinations can be made with Identi-kit foils.

"THE IDENTI-KIT," said Des Plaines Police Det. Larry Zumbrock, "helps investigators determine the unknown about a suspect. A large segment of people can be eliminated as suspects when we have a sketch rather than just a bulletin on what an offender looks like."

Once a composite sketch is finished, foil code numbers are sent to other departments where an identical composite is made.

"When we get a sketch from another department," Zumbrock said, "we may see the suspect in Des Plaines and be able to make the arrest."

Zumbrock said Identi-kit composites aided police in capturing two men last year in connection with a series of grocery store robberies in Des Plaines.

"I realized exactly who they were while I was making the composite."

ZUMBROCK, ALONG with Detectives Al Freitag, John Meese and Robert Ziemet and Sgt. William Kuta learned the system at special training sessions conducted by Niles police Capt. Edward Dennis.

Dennis, who estimated half of all Illinois police departments have an Identi-kit "box," said officers attending the week-long school study human facial characteristics with emphasis on recalling descriptions of suspects.

Dennis' students also practice making composites from snapshots.

"It's not a crystal ball," said Dennis, "but it eliminates a lot of people from the field of suspects."

"For instance," he said, "there are a lot of white males 6 feet 2 inches tall. But with this information plus a composite, we've eliminated all white six foot two inch tall males that don't look just like him."

HE SAID Identi-kit sketches by U.S. Postal Inspectors he had taught helped break up a postal robbery ring operating statewide two years ago.

"It's actually the greatest practical crime-fighting aid since fingerprints," Dennis said.

Police can also tell how people have changed their appearance in between crimes, Zumbrock said. "A suspect may have a beard and a clean shaven face on two different sketches, but the face is the same on both."

"We could make a composite of a 110 year-old person," he said. "But to pick him out of a crowd, we wouldn't need Identi-kit."

Ex-mayoral hopeful may head 1976 bicentennial

Former mayoral candidate David Wolf may direct the Des Plaines celebration of America's 200th birthday in 1976.

Wolf, two-time historical society president and former head of the local Illinois sesquicentennial celebration in 1968, has been nominated for chairmanship of the city's bicentennial commission by a special city council committee headed by Ald. Spencer Chase (3rd).

NOMINATED to serve on the commission are:

- Daniel Morava, 2036 Eastview, a member of Wolf's mayoral steering committee. Morava is a cashier at Des Plaines National Bank and is a member of the city library board.

Council group to discuss city remodeling

Des Plaines City Council, meeting as a committee of the whole, will discuss downtown redevelopment today at 8 p.m. in city hall.

"The purpose of this meeting will be to review, air and discuss various facets of the downtown redevelopment program," Mayor Herbert Behrel said.

The council on June 18 authorized City Atty. Robert DiLeonardi to prepare an ordinance approving superblock zoning. Aldermen critical of the project were unexpectedly quiet during the debate, although project backers were prepared to present an updated report on the shopping mall-office building plan.

Ald. Arthur Erbach (5th) requested the committee of the whole meeting because "there are a lot of unanswered questions about this." A final council vote to approve the plan is expected in July.

- Susan D'Hondt, 339 Alles, president of the League of Women Voters.

- Jared Birchfield, 2656 Spruce. He is the son of Mrs. Irene Birchfield, 5th Ward alderman. A "history buff," he wrote in 1971 a report on the history of Des Plaines. Birchfield is a college student.

- Terry Sherwood, 2080 Webster Ln., immediate past president of Des Plaines Chamber of Commerce. Sherwood is a member of Des Plaines housing commission.

- Dan Messenbrink, 701 S. Manor, principal at Central School in Des Plaines.

- Jim Williams, 993 Margaret, president of the historical society.
- Ellen Erbach, 1275 Prospect, wife of Ald. Arthur Erbach (5th). She is a former journalist and will direct publicity.

- Art Weiss, 403 Pinchurst, president of 1st National Bank in Des Plaines.

Chase is expected to ask city council approval of the nominees Monday.

"This looks like a really impressive group," Chase said yesterday.

THE NINE-MEMBER commission was formed by the city council in February "to plan, encourage, develop and coordinate the commemoration of the bicentennial."

Wolf was tabbed as a possible commission chairman in January, during consideration of the ordinance and before the spring mayoral race. Wolf lost election to Mayor Herbert Behrel in April.

The commission will include a chairman, co-chairman, treasurer, secretary and a liaison chairman with subcommittees. The state bicentennial commission recommends naming of five subcommittees — heritage, festival, horizon, communications and finance.

WOLF ATTENDED a state bicentennial meeting in Springfield Nov. 18, 1972. He recommended that Des Plaines "become immediately and actively committed to a program of celebrating and Can there be such a thing as too much parade?

Last week's headlines dubbed the state VFW extravaganza "superparade" — and it was.

For three hours, progressively weary spectators watched in awe as 462 units tramped down Lee Street from Oakton to Ellinwood.

It was a good parade — but a long parade, billed as the largest ever held in the Northwest suburbs and possibly the largest in the nation, if not the world.

And, according to Parade Marshal Al Hartig, superparade was practically trouble free.

THERE WERE no fights, only two first aid cases (neither serious), few complaints from residents and thousands of happy spectators.

"We estimated there were between 23,000 and 30,000 people watching the parade," said Hartig. "When you march in a parade you get a feeling from the spectators. The people this time were very much parade minded, very enthusiastic, very respectful of the national colors — and the marchers were very happy."

I can attest to that.

We stood just north of the Soo Line railroad tracks in one of the more sparsely populated areas along the parade route. (At Algonquin and Lee there were hundreds and hundreds of people standing 2 and 3 deep in some spots.)

THE PARADE began with a — no not a band, color guard or mayor — a freight train. Just as the first unit was ready to set foot on the tracks the red lights flashed and the gates went down.

The crowd cheered. After nearly an hour's wait the train, which local residents cuss out daily, seemed the touch of irony any superparade must have.

After 120 freight cars the parade was again under way. Everyone was applauded. The mayor was all smiles as our small rooting section waved and clapped.

Local units got the best response. The firefighters from the Des Plaines Fire Department who were pulling the antique horse cart and pumper (all sporting real or fake mustaches) received rounds of applause during the entire parade. Out front was Lt. Charles "Pro" Provanzano smiling, waving and having a great time as he led his treasured fire equipment through the town.

The Des Plaines Vanguards Drum and Bugle Corps were also welcomed warmly, as were the marchers and color guard from VFW Post 2992 of Des Plaines.

GREETED MORE with laughter than anything else were the other two freight trains that held up the parade.

Hartig said both city officials and VFW officials had contacted Soo Line to ask that trains avoid the Lee Street crossing during the parade. They were assured . . . well, you know the story.

Spectators were told that the parade was expected to run for five hours. It all seemed like fun when the first units turned the corner. But about two hours later small children were getting cranky and adults were tiring.

Yet, from what we could see, few people left. The end of the parade appeared over the tracks and the final cheer was a mixture of joy and relief.

Can there be too much parade? This one wasn't — almost, but not quite. But a five hour parade. Probably.

THE GUARDSMEN drum and bugle corps will host the Des Plaines Chamber of Commerce sponsored Drum and Bugle competition July 3 at 7:30 p.m. at Maine West High School.

Where's your stop sign? Ask policeman Bob Neil

Not too long from now, anyone wishing to know anything about a traffic light, stop sign, yield or no-parking sign in Des Plaines will need only to ask policeman Bob Neil.

By that time, Neil will have counted every last one of them — if he doesn't run out of fingers and toes first.

And, not unlike other police department operations, this myriad mathematical meandering also has its purpose.

Neil is surveying all local traffic lights and signs as part of an updating process for the city ordinances book.

"IT'S JUST part of special detail to write down where the signs are at and get them counted to update the ordinance book," Neil said.

Neil, who has been on the sign surveying detail for two weeks, could not estimate how long it will take him to finish. He said the worst is yet to come.

"The next part of the survey," he said, "are the no-parking signs and that's going to take quite a while because in some neighborhoods there are three or four signs on one block."

Is Neil enjoying the detail? "It's a laugh a minute," he said.

Next time you see a traffic light, stop sign, no parking or yield sign in town remember — Bob Neil's seen it too.

Abandoned auto ruined in fire

Fire of an undetermined cause ruined an abandoned car early Tuesday in a lot south of the Casa Royale Restaurant in the 900 block of Lee Street, said Des Plaines police.

Damage to the vehicle was estimated at only $25, police said, because the car had been stripped of its tires, battery and radio.

Witnesses told police they saw a man throw something into the car and run to a house at 780 Lee St. before the blaze broke out. A police check of the house turned up no suspects.

Police have been unable to locate the owner of the auto, adding a pair of license plates were found in the trunk.

Ballard School budget hearing explode

by REGINA OEHLE

The gym at Ballard School was hot and stifling. Tempers were even hotter. It was a Dist. 63 budget hearing, complete with yelling, charges, counter charges and gavel pounding.

More than 150 parents and teachers crowded into the gym Tuesday night and demanded the East Maine Elementary School Board reconsider the budget. Parents are objecting to a cut of 32 teaching positions for next year.

The attempt failed. Only one board member, Larry Reiss, voted against final approval of the budget. "Considering the amount of opposition," Reiss said, "I think there would be no harm in reconsidering the budget as proposed tonight."

Phyllis Friedland presented a sheaf of petitions to the board, asking that the teaching positions not be cut. About 900 parents had signed.

"I can get you more names," she said.

TWELVE TEACHING positions have been cut in the two junior highs. Teachers will now be teaching 150 students each, instead of 100, and holding six classes instead of four.

Twenty teaching positions are being cut in the nine grade schools. These schools show a definite drop in enrollment, but no one has predicted a significant drop in enrollment in the junior highs for the coming year.

Dist. 63 Supt. G. Allan Gogo told parents that the district cannot continue to have 25 children in the first grade to provide the "luxury" of staffing the junior highs on an 18 to 1 ratio. "We have to continue to focus much more attention on children in the elementary schools," he said.

THE BUDGET PASSED by the board Tuesday, despite parent protest, shows a cut of 22 teachers. Enough extra money was budgeted for approximately 10 extra teachers, if they were needed, said Gogo.

Parents demanded to know why Gogo was being given a 13 per cent increase when the district was having financial problems and had to cut the 32 teaching positions. "How in good conscience can you accept a 13 per cent raise with all the problems this district is having?" asked one parent. The average raise for administrators is 7.6 per cent, for teachers 6.8 per cent.

Gogo did not answer. Later he said the raise was the board's decision and he felt he should not comment on the question.

Parents insisted on an answer through most of the meeting. Repeatedly, board members told them the raise was given to Gogo because the board approved the job the superintendent was doing. John DiPrima, acting president in the absence of Irene Luck, said the board directed Gogo not to answer the question.

Matters of salaries for individuals are, by law, discussed in private by board members.

"DOES HE HAVE to be protected?" asked the parent. Gogo sat back in his chair, calmly puffing a pipe and listened.

"Is this district going to be run by the school board or a teachers' organization?" demanded board member William Allen. Teachers in the district have also been protesting the teacher cuts and criticized Gogo. In May they held a rally during a board meeting.

"We are parents," one member of the audience yelled.

"I'm sick and tired of being accused of being dupes of some teachers' organization," yelled Mrs. Friedland. "I don't want to hear that again."

The audience also questioned the need for a business manager, a public relations director and one assistant superintendent. They felt teachers could be hired instead.

BOARD MEMBERS agreed to take the comments of the parents into consideration and report back at a later board meeting. They said it would not be too late to amend the budget and hire more teachers if they decided more teachers were needed.

Parents also questioned spending $12 a yard for carpeting, a total of $14,784. However, board members approved the expenditure later in the meeting.

Reiss was the only dissenting vote. The carpeting is a special type of commercial carpeting that will withstand years of wear, according to assistant business manager Patricia Kolvak.

Parents feel the money should be used for teaching salaries. Several board members explained that money out of the building fund could not, legally, be used for teaching salaries — it could only be used for the buildings.

The board also approved moving custodial salaries and heating costs — totaling $120,415 — from the building fund into the educational fund. These are two of the few things that can be put into either fund.

commemorating the bicentennial.

Committee members have mentioned construction of a civic center or historical museum in Des Plaines as part of the celebration. Construction could include moving of historic Rand Mill, now at River Road and Miner Street, to a permanent location, Wolf has said.

America's birthday party begins July 4, 1975 and will end July 1, 1976.

$10 storage shed stolen from building

Thieves stole a metal storage shed worth $40 owned by a Chicago man, Lee Sweetman, 1227 Jarvis Ave., said Des Plaines police.

The 5-by-7 foot shed had been purchased by Sweetman, police said, and was discovered missing Tuesday from in back of a building at 841 Pearson St. slated for demolition.

Burglars steal $130 in apartment theft

Burglars stole $130 in cash after forcing their way into the apartment of Bradley Harring, 1570 Woodland Ave., early Tuesday, Des Plaines police said.

Harring told police he discovered the break-in returning home from work Tuesday afternoon.

Charge resident with assault

A local man was arrested Tuesday after he allegedly threatened two Des Plaines policemen with a baseball bat.

Although no injuries were reported in the incident, Charles Benson, 19, of 1541 Algonquin Rd., was charged with aggravated assault and resisting arrest along with three traffic violations.

Police said Benson had been stopped near First Avenue and Walnut Street for a traffic violation while on his motorcycle and had been directed to walk the cycle home, and accompany patrolmen Jack Whetstone and William Spyrisson to the police station.

Benson emerged from his house with a baseball bat, however, and was wrestled to the ground by Spyrisson.

Benson also was charged with driving with a suspended license and improper license classification.

He was released on $1,000 bond and has been scheduled to appear in Des Plaines branch of Cook County Circuit Court July 26.

July 4 gaiety set for kickoff

Independence Day festivities are ready to roll.

"Music In Motion," the Des Plaines Chamber of Commerce and Industry Drum and Bugle corps competition, will begin at 8 p.m., July 3, at the Maine West High School stadium, Howard Street and Wolf Road.

Corps from four states and Canada will take the field in competition. The Guardsmen, a local corps, will host the show and put on an exhibition.

Tickets are available at local stores and the Chamber office, 800 Lee St. Adult tickets are $1.50; tickets for children under 12 may be purchased at the gate for 75 cents.

One hundred units will line up for the 10th annual parade July 4. Kickoff time is noon at Oakton and Lee streets.

The parade will travel north on Lee to Ellinwood Street and east on Ellinwood to the city parking lot. A reviewing stand will be set up at 738 Lee St. in the parking lot of Casa Royale.

Roland Fletcher will serve as parade marshal, supervising the assembly of the floats, marching units, antique cars, drill teams and musical units.

C. W. "Tony" Kaitschuck, executive secretary of the chamber and parade coordinator, has announced the parade lineup as follows:

"everyday"

Interest. That's pretty special. But there's more. That daily interest is compounded daily. Paid quarterly. So you can deposit when you like. Withdraw when you need to. Never lose interest provided you maintain $25 or more in your account at the end of the quarter. In fact, you even gain. All money deposited by the 10th earns from the 1st . . . If you leave it on deposit until the end of the calendar quarter. Sounds interesting? But what does "everyday" interest mean in dollars and cents? It means that our 5% passbook interest actually earns more when compounded every day the First Federal Savings way. It makes a difference.

City may switch to thin garbage bags

The city council sanitation committee has delayed purchase of plastic garbage bags to "get more facts" on possible waste in the program.

The decision to purchase the bags from Tobin Stahr Company Inc., Elk Grove Village was stopped Tuesday.

Price and thickness of the 312,000 bags were the big questions. Both Niles and Palatine are using cheaper and thinner bags.

"Niles and Palatine are using the 2-mm bags. From what I understand — the bags are working there," Ald. John Seltz (7th) said.

Des Plaines is presently using 3-mm bags.

Ald. Daniel Kisslinger (4th) said the public works department researched the different bags and recommended the three-millimeter bags when the program was started because "of the extra strength the thicker bags offered."

The committee also asked why Des Plaines received only one bid in time for the June 11 deadline, when Palatine received six bids for its program.

KISSLINGER said that the increasing price of the bags has now become the issue. Tobin Stahr's bid price is $8 per 1,000 bags more than last year's.

Ald. Richard Ward (8th) asked if the city can buy direct from a manufacturer, instead of a broker like Tobin Stahr. "This would be one way to save the city money," he said.

Ward said the committee should write letters to the Illinois Municipal League and the manufacturers, "asking them to survey garbage bag use in other cities and give out specifications."

"The committee should not have to do all the researching when other, bigger resources are available," Ward said.

"I would like to get in touch with the gentlemen running the garbage bag programs in Niles and Palatine. I want them to come in and sit down and talk to us," Kisslinger said.

Ald. John Seltz (7th) said he has been receiving phone calls from people saying they know where to buy bags cheaper.

"In Niles, a resident can go to city hall, present some identification and buy 50 two-millimeter bags for $3.50," Seltz said.

Des Plaines residents are now paying $5 for 50 (3 millimeter) bags.

No charges yet in tollroad tri-fatality

Charges had not been filed as of late yesterday in a triple-fatality auto accident on the Northwest Tollway near Higgins and Oakton roads. The accident occurred at 1 a.m. yesterday.

Illinois State Police said Robert Lilley, 28, of 1125 Perth Dr., Schaumburg, was traveling westbound about 1 a.m. when he lost control of the car and crossed the median strip, striking an eastbound car head-on.

Killed in the eastbound car were Anthony Wilson, 29, of Island Lake, Beverly Mackson, 27, and Ralph Peters, 30, both of Chicago. All were dead on arrival at Northwest Community Hospital.

Lilley was admitted to Northwest Community Hospital with face cuts and leg injuries.

According to an Elk Grove Village Police Department report, Lilley walked away from the accident and was found dazed, in the Hyatt Chalet Motel, 1920 E. Higgins Rd.

According to the report, Lilley said he had been boating on Lake Michigan with friends and then went to a party. He said he did not remember what happened in the accident and kept asking if anyone had been hurt, police said.

A spokesman for the state police department said an investigation was under way, but there was no indication what charges, if any, would be filed.

Motel guest leaves — with the room's TV

Des Plaines police are looking for a man who checked out of a local motel guestroom and apparently decided to take the room's television set with him.

Police said the man checked out of the room at the Drury Northwestern Motel, 374 Lee St. Saturday. Employees discovered the set had been stolen.

The man was described as about 18-years-old, five-foot seven-inches tall with long blonde hair.

Local man accused of burning roommate

A Des Plaines man was charged with battery after police said he burned a roommate with an iron during a dispute over rent payments on their apartment.

The man, Troy Edwards, 22, of 173 River Hill, was being held by Des Plaines police after the victim, Emmett Davis, 21, told police Edwards burned him.

The dispute, according to police, began when Davis told Edwards to move from their apartment for not paying his share of the rent.

Police said Edwards later entered with an iron saying he wanted to iron a shirt but instead burned Davis on the arm.

Davis was treated and released from Holy Family Hospital Monday morning.

Edwards has been scheduled to appear in Des Plaines branch of Cook County Circuit Court July 19.

Arrest local woman for $2.54 shoe theft

A Rosemont woman was arrested Saturday after police said she attempted to steal a $2.54 pair of shoes from the K-Mart store, 1155 Oakton Street.

Cheryl Mynagh, 19, 9445 Maple was charged with theft after she had allegedly put the shoes on and tried to leave the store without paying for them.

The woman was released on $100 bond and has been scheduled to appear in Des Plaines branch of Cook County Circuit Court, July 26.

Trustees to stay firm on sidewalk work by Centex

Elk Grove Village trustees say they will stay firm in their demands for Centex Homes Corp. to replace all defective sidewalks and driveway aprons in the Exmoor and Yarmouth roads residential area.

The village has refused for the past three years to accept the 210 driveway approaches in that section of the village because the concrete is crumbling and flaking. The trustees have asked Centex to repair the deteriorating driveways, but so far no action has been taken.

Village Engineer Don Ciaglia met recently with Centex officials, who proposed that Centex replace all driveways with 20 per cent or more of the surface flaking. The Centex officials said the company would pay the repair cost and contact the affected residents.

HOWEVER, AT A village board meeting this week, trustees said bluntly they wanted no part of a 20 per cent flaking criterion. "Defective driveway apron approaches are defective, and we shouldn't peg replacement on percentages," Trustee Ed Kenna said.

"Let's replace driveways that need replacement and forget about 20 per cent. It is too hard to measure 20 per cent," said Trustee Ron Chernick.

The trustees then approved Kenna's proposal that all driveways and aprons determined to be defective by the village engineer should be replaced by Centex at no cost to the village.

Kenna said he was tired of seeing the problem unsolved year after year and wanted some action on the matter in the next 30 days. "If this goes beyond 30 days, then we (trustees) are poorly doing our job," he said.

KENNA SUGGESTED putting pressure on Centex by holding up progress on its new subdivision west of Ill. Rte. 53. However, Chernick said the village cannot legally hold up action on future developments because of past action.

In April, Centex agreed to repave 109 driveway aprons in the Exmoor and Yarmouth roads area, but so far the village has not agreed that these are the only driveways needing repair.

Ciaglia was told to walk through the area and list all driveway approaches that should be replaced. The trustees also said Centex later may be required to replace sidewalks and aprons that are deteriorating in the Cosman and Arlington Heights roads section of the village.

Village's 20th; nation's 200th

Anniversary plans for '76 under way

Plans are under way for a Memorial Day to Labor Day birthday party to celebrate the 200th anniversary of the nation and the 20th birthday of Elk Grove Village in 1976.

Village Trustee Nanci Vanderweel, celebration chairwoman, said yesterday that since plans for the summer-long salute were announced last month, organizations have begun planning their parts in the festivities.

"The central idea of the celebration is the community, because it is the village's birthday party," she said. "We want a great deal of participation from the community — its groups, organizations, churches and citizens."

Mrs. Vanderweel said no theme has been chosen for the summer of 1976 and is asking anyone with a suggestion to mail it to her at the village hall, 901 Wellington Ave. She said the theme should be a short phrase referring to both the nation's and the village's birthday.

PERSONS INTERESTED in helping plan the celebration also are asked to contact Mrs. Vanderweel.

The dual birthday parties probably will be started with Memorial Day ceremonies at the village hall, she said. "I want the village to start with a dedication ceremony and maybe a birthday cake at the municipal building." In addition to formalities, Mrs. Vanderweel suggested an open house at the village hall including a historical exhibit about the town.

The celebration committee will research what it was like to live in the Elk Grove Village area 20 years and 100 years ago, she said. "We hope people in the community can help us find old photographs and other memorabilia from our past," Mrs. Vanderweel added.

Although arrangements are far from definite, Mrs. Vanderweel said some organizations have tentatively scheduled activities. The Lions Club, which has sponsored Fourth of July celebrations for the past 10 years in the village, probably will have July 4 weekend in 1976, she said.

THE VILLAGE Jaycees are considering scheduling their annual Peony Parade that year near the village's actual birthday on July 14, Mrs. Vanderweel said. The close of the summer festivities will be on the Labor Day weekend, but no plans have been made so far, she added.

A time capsule may be buried as one of the 1976 activities. Mrs. Vanderweel said she was not sure at this time what would be placed inside, but it could be items like newspapers and pictures.

Mrs. Vanderweel said the celebration committee would be contacting village clubs and churches to invite them to participate. She suggested groups could have county fairs with arts and craft displays and preserve judging, ethnic festivals depicting the dances and costumes of the residents' ancestors, and pet parades and block parties.

Other activities could be band concerts with music written for the occasion, village picnics, trade fairs in the Industrial park and puppet shows, she said.

Mrs. Vanderweel said the celebration committee also will try to locate the first 20 residents of the village. "It will be interesting to see how many of the original villagers are still living here," she said.

25 to learn baseball from 'the other side'

About 25 students at Holmes Junior High School will be talking about themselves if they complain about the poor job the umpire is doing at future sporting events.

The students are enrolled in the special summer class, "Want a Better Ref? Be One!", at the Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 school in Mount Prospect. After completing the six-week class, the students will be awarded a special certification card that awarded them to officiate at school sports contests, primarily those in the intramural program.

Phillip Crail, a counselor and assistant principal at Holmes, teaches the referee class, which was one of his ideas for a special summer school program.

WHEN THE DISTRICT began planning this year's summer program, it was decided that summer school should offer different classes than the students take during the regular school year. Teachers and principals at the schools were asked to suggest unusual and interesting classes students might want to take.

Crail suggested the umpire class. The suggestion was accepted and he is surprised at the response. "I thought 10-12 students would be interested in the class.

25 students to learn fine art of 'umping'

The enrollment is double what I thought it would be," he said.

Many of the students in the class are interested in becoming players in the different sports, according to Crail. He said that by learning how to umpire or referee a sport, they will become better players and have a better attitude and understanding toward officials.

"It is easy to yell at the referee until you realize how much is involved in the job," said Crail.

Five sports will be covered in the class: basketball, flag football, volleyball, floor hockey and the common rules of baseball softball.

FOR EACH SPORT, the students will first study and pass a written test on the rules for that sport. They will then practice judging an actual contest, learning where the officials should be during a game, how to spot an infraction of the rules and what penalty to call.

The larger than expected class is a benefit, according to Crail. He said there are enough students to have some playing a game, others acting as officials and the rest observing and commenting on how the student-officials do their job.

The "on the job" training is important to Crail because mere knowledge of how a game is played and what the rules are is not enough. "You can have a very good 'head knowledge' of a sport and still be a poor judge of what is going on," he said.

Crail said the students will follow the district's policy of having officials be more than judges, also acting as instructors. The students, when they call penalties, will have to explain why they were called, what rule was violated and why the particular penalty is imposed.

SOME PROBLEMS are expected with students in a game who don't respect an official who is a fellow classmate. "They (student-officials) have to learn they run the game. They are in charge. They don't have to take anything from anyone,"

Crail said the training students receive should be thorough enough to impress the school coaches and the players "that this is a qualified referee."

Mental health aid on way?

Two measures have been approved in the Illinois General Assembly that may ease the financial crunch facing the Elk Grove-Schaumburg Townships Mental Health Center.

One bill has passed both houses in the legislature authorizing townships to levy a tax, without referendum, to finance mental health activities. The tax could be levied providing the township was not at its maximum tax rate already. Currently, townships cannot use tax funds for mental health expenditures.

The tax levy for Elk Grove and Schaumburg townships could be up to $2.50 for a home with $10,000 assessed valuation.

Jordan Rosen, executive director of the center, said if the bill is signed by Gov. Daniel Walker and "assuming we can work with the townships," the tax would eliminate most of the center's funding problems. If the bill is signed into law, the tax would not be levied until next year.

THE SECOND BILL, which passed the Senate and was sent to the House, increases the appropriation for the state department of mental health from $321 million to $338 million.

The mental health center had requested a $92,000 grant for the coming fiscal year from the department. The request was reduced to $52,000, the same amount as this year's grant.

Rosen has attempted to have the grant increased, contending service would be reduced without the full grant request.

Rosen said department officials have said if their total appropriation is increased, the grant request could be reconsidered. He said if the increased appropriations bill is passed by the House and signed into law, the center could be eligible for an increased grant.

Bond sale interest rate will save area $65,000

A $65,000 savings for Schaumburg Township residents during the next 16 years will come because of a 4.9 per cent interest rate obtained in a $2 million bond sale.

A contract for the bonds was awarded Tuesday by the Elementary School Dist. 54 board of education to the Continental Bank of Chicago.

The financing, part of a $7.3 million bond issue approved by voters in 1970, will be used to defray the costs at five schools now under construction in the district.

They include Eisenhower Junior High School, Hoffman Estates; Hoover Elementary School, Schaumburg; Link Elementary School, Elk Grove Village, and Einstein and Walden elementary schools in Hanover Park.

"An increased investor's rating resulted in a total of eight bids for the bonds with all interest rates well below the 5 1/4 per cent rate the district was seeking," said Marvin Lapicola, assistant superintendent-finance. This is the largest number of bids ever received for a Dist. 54 bond sale, he added.

THE DISTRICT had expected to pay approximately $1,003,000 in interest costs on the bond. "Now with the exceptionally good lower interest rate we received, we will profit by approximately $65,000," he added.

Lapicola said the district has, for the past six years, been given a triple B rating by Moody's Investor Rating. "After telephone contacts and exchanges of financial information we convinced Moody our rating should be raised to an A," said Lapicola.

"The district had a lower rating in previous years because of its rapid growth and lack of increasing tax base.

"When we were able to show that our tax base took a 25 per cent jump from the previous year, we got a higher rating," said Lapicola. The district's 1972 total assessed valuation is approximately $260,814,428.

Lapicola said investors are usually reluctant to purchase bonds unless a school district is rated highly by investor's rating houses. Most school districts in this area are rated A and the only two higher ratings above it, are double-A and Triple-A.

LAPICOLA said the district is especially pleased about its ability to attract good, low bidders because this means tax rates in the districts should continue to drop.

"This year's tax rate dropped by 11 cents from $2.89 per every $100 of assessed valuation to the present tax rate of $2.78.

"Next year's tax rate should drop to at least $2.72," predicts Lapicola.

Two named to housing unit

Two Elk Grove Village residents were appointed to the village Housing Commission this week to bring the commission's strength to seven members. Two of the nine commission seats remain vacant.

Albert Claps, 1210 Hemlock Dr., and Melvin Bytnar, 236 Wellington Ave., were appointed to the Housing Commission Tuesday by village Pres. Charles Zettek.

The Housing Commission existed through most of the past year without a quorum, and Cathy Duoba, commission chairwoman, said recently that new members were needed for the commission to get its work done.

Mrs. Duoba said the commission is currently concerned with devising a plan to implement moderate-income housing in the village. She said the members will be studying housing plans in neighboring communities before making recommendations.

"everyday"

interest. That's pretty special. But there's more. That daily interest is compounded daily. Paid quarterly. So you can deposit when you like. Withdraw when you need to. Never lose interest provided you maintain $25 or more in your account at the end of the quarter. In fact, you even gain. All money deposited by the 10th earns from the 1st ... if you leave it on deposit until the end of the calendar quarter. Sounds interesting? But what does "everyday" interest mean in dollars and cents? It means that our 5% passbook interest actually earns more when compounded every day the First Federal Savings way. It makes a difference.

Tiny Korean orphan finds love for the first time

by JILL BETTSER

Little Amy Krievan squeals with delight as her new daddy shakes her playfully high above his head. Itsy-checked, happy, she looks like any child responding to love.

The response is immediate, not learned, but natural for all children — even this tiny Korean orphan who's finding love for the first time.

Amy has her first real home now with the Joe Schermer family, 603 MacArthur Dr., Buffalo Grove, halfway around the world from the Korean town where she was born six months ago.

IT WAS A LONG, rough trip for everybody.

Joe and Phyllis said when they decided a year ago to adopt an overseas orphan, they had no idea there was so much red tape involved.

The Holt Adoption Agency in Eugene, Ore., handled most of the arrangements. Mrs. Schermer said, along with the Illinois Department of Children and Family Services, who conducted a home study on the Schermers.

There were interviews at home, interviews downtown, applications to fill out, medical tests for the entire family and references to obtain from friends and relatives. The Schermers compiled all the information and then they waited -- and waited.

"From the time we got the applications, the whole process took from a year ago June to August," Mrs. Schermer said. "After we turned it all in, we heard nothing for two months."

SHE WAITED as long as she could. Mrs. Schermer said, and finally called the Holt agency in October. The agency told her the information on the family and Amy was in the hands of the Immigration and Naturalization Service and it would probably be another three to five months before they would know anything.

To pass the time, Mrs. Schermer went to work as a secretary at Adlai Stevenson High School in Prairie View. The women there later gave her a baby shower and another group of neighbors also surprised her with gifts.

The five-month wait stretched to six and then to seven and the Schermers learned the immigration service had lost Amy's birth certificate and some other important papers.

"It was so frustrating," Joe said. "It was like hitting our heads against a brick wall."

Finally, the Schermers learned the last week in May that Amy would arrive at O'Hare Airport Friday, June 1.

THE FAMILY, that includes three of the Schermer's own children, was ecstatic to have the baby home at last, said Mrs. Schermer, but Amy spent only two nights with them. It was then learned that she had to go to the hospital to be treated for rickets, a vitamin D deficiency disease.

Amy spent 10 days in the hospital, but she's healthy now and home to stay.

"She just fits in beautifully," Mrs. Schermer said. "We couldn't ask for a better baby."

Mrs. Schermer is anxious to be the friend and confidant she didn't have to other couples interested in adopting overseas children.

"If ANYBODY wants help, perhaps I could give them a few shortcuts," she said. "I know I would have appreciated just having somebody to talk to about it."

The couple agreed that despite the frustrations in getting Amy, they'd go through it all again.

"It's all worth it," Mrs. Schermer said. "It requires a lot of patience and there were a few tears shed in between time, too. You think it will never happen, but it does."

The Schermers feel giving Amy a home is their way of helping someone who needs them.

"We always wanted to do something for somebody and this seemed a good way," Mrs. Schermer said. They will go to court in about six months to legally adopt Amy.

THE COUPLE first considered adopting an American child, but they learned that there is a two or three-year waiting list of couples who want babies.

"We found out we wouldn't be doing anything by applying for an American child," Joe said, "so we decided to try to get an overseas child who otherwise wouldn't have a chance."

This isn't the first time the Schermers have shared their home with an orphaned child. They have had four foster children at different times in the past nine years.

The last foster child was a baby, Mrs. Schermer said, who was very hard for the family to give up. That's when the couple began discussing a permanent adoption.

"We're all so happy to have Amy," she said, "when we had our own kids, Joe and I shared in the happiness, but with Amy the happiness is multiplied because they can share it too."

Committee adopts goals for students

Teaching children reading, writing, arithmetic and how to listen and talk almost became the single goal of School Dist. 54.

"And, if we could successfully accomplish that sole goal with each student, we'd be doing a darn good job," said Donnie Hudd, school board president.

Hudd was joking when he made the suggestion as he chaired a committee of residents, teachers, administrators and school board members who met Tuesday to define long range goals for students and the district.

But, several people present agreed it should be the basis of the district's written statement of what it expects from students and itself.

The committee adopted eight student goals and six district goals and will recommend these be accepted by the board of education at its July 5 meeting.

THE WHITTE program plan must be submitted to the State Superintendent of Public Instruction by Jan. 1, 1974.

It is required of all school districts in the state. Each district must tell the state what it is asking of itself and students, how it expects to accomplish these things and how it will judge students and itself.

Community input is required by the state and in Dist. 54 there was much evidence of community involvement.

Citizens worked side by side with teachers and administrators to compile these goals.

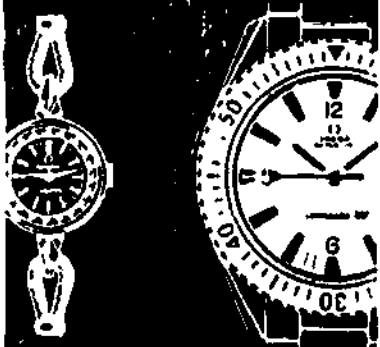

For students, the goals are:

- All students should have the basic skills of reading, listening, written and verbal communication, mathematics and problem-solving.
- All students should have a feeling of adequacy and self-worth.
- All students should develop a positive attitude towards learning.
- All students should express their creativity.
- All students should be adaptable to a world of change.
- All students should appreciate and have a positive attitude toward all persons.
- All students should be aware of the many opportunities in training for the world of work.
- All students should have habits and attitudes associated with citizenship responsibility.

BOARD MEMBER Brenda Pulla was unsuccessful in amending the seventh student goal, to make it explicitly anti sex discriminatory.

Although she received some support, the committee decided the district, by stating it was providing opportunities for all students, was not discriminatory.

Village to wage war against pesky mosquitos

Don't let that funny noise you sometimes hear during the evenings bother you. Nor the accompanying smelly mist. Unless, that is, you're a mosquito.

The noise and, mainly, the mist are the latest efforts to kill mosquitos that make the mistake of venturing into Palatine.

Residents may have become unaccustomed to the sound and smell of doing away with mosquitos, because, until this week, no spraying has taken place in the village since 1969.

An ordinance adopted in spring of 1970 prohibited the spraying of certain types of chemicals, one of which, Malathion, had been used by the Northwest Mosquito Abatement District.

Mosquitos had this year? Experts disagree. Story on Page 3.

But village trustees, seeking an effective way to combat mosquitos, contracted earlier this month for Clarke Outdoor Spraying Co. Inc., LaGrange, to spray in Palatine.

THE FIRST FOGGING took place last Saturday. Others are scheduled for Monday and Tuesday nights.

Both Clarke and the abatement district will be working toward the same goal — eliminating mosquitos — with some overlap of efforts.

The abatement district has had four trucks working in Palatine Township since April, mainly treating potential breeding spots.

Clarke also will be treating catch basins and bodies of standing water, which breed mosquitos, in addition to its spraying program. Also, larvae-eating minnows will be stocked into ponds in mid-July.

John L. Clarke Jr., vice president of the firm, said one unusual problem in treating Palatine's mosquito population is the high number of breeding spots.

A SURVEY of the village and immediately adjacent areas turned up 628 acres of potential breeding areas, according to Clarke. A more typical amount for a municipality of Palatine's size, he said, would be 200 acres.

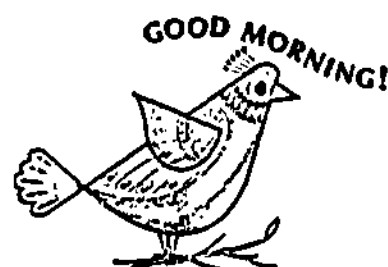

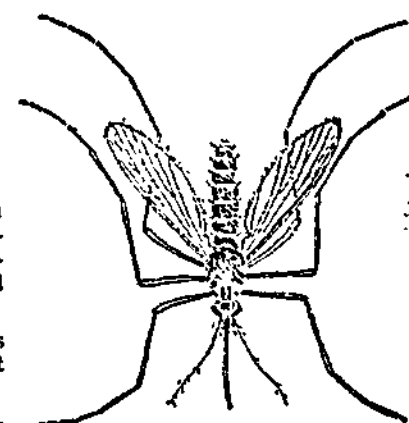

Clarke attributed the large amount of breeding spots to a number of low areas which retain water.

He offered a few tips for mosquito-bitten residents:

- Make sure roof gutters are clean.
 - Flush bird baths weekly.
 - Empty water-holding containers.
- Residents also are advised to keep an eye on the family dog during the mosquito season. If he shows signs of sluggishness or shortness of breath, he could be infected with heart worm.

About 12 per cent of the dogs in this area are estimated to contract heart worm, which is not fatal if treated.

The disease is spread by mosquitos who bite dogs after previously biting disease-carrying birds.

Day care center hires teachers, opens signup

Teachers have been hired and volunteers selected for the Palatine Township day care center scheduled to open this fall, and registration for preschoolers is starting now.

Children ages 3 to 5 will attend the preschool full time when it opens the first week in September. The center has been organized by a township-appointed committee in the past year, after township social worker Ginny Johnson told officials of the need for full-time day care, particularly for children of mothers who must work.

The center will be based in a wing of Palatine's Presbyterian Church, at Rohlfing and Palatine roads. The first year of operation will cost approximately $39,000, to be paid through tuition fees, state aid and a loan from a local bank.

PALATINE Township officials have promised to help support children in the center who come from families that could not afford to pay the fees charged by a private center.

Twenty children, all attending full time, will be enrolled in the program. Interested parents may call Mrs. Johnson at the township hall, 338-6700, or come into the offices at 37 N. Plum Grove Rd., Palatine, to pick up the required registration and medical forms. Registration costs $10.

'Doughnut Day' gains Salvation Army $1,000

More than $1,000 was raised in Palatine during the recent "Doughnut Day" sponsored by the Salvation Army.

A total of $1,010.00 was donated locally toward the Chicago-area goal of $195,000.

Contributions are used to fund day care centers, work therapy programs for the handicapped, a dental clinic for substandard income areas and family and individual counseling.

Local chairman of the doughnut tag sale was Mabel Becker. William Heise Jr. is secretary of the Salvation Army organization in Palatine, and Orville Helms is treasurer.

Local carpenters or woodworking hobbyists are being sought by the day care committee to build doll furniture, cabinets and other equipment this summer before the center opens. Anyone interested in volunteering to prepare the center or work with the children when the day care facilities open next fall should contact Mrs. Johnson.

ARLENE ALVIS was hired this week as teacher and director of the township day care center. She is currently an assistant teacher and director at Flower Garden Nursery School, a position she has held since 1962. Mrs. Alvis formerly directed a Rolling Meadows nursery school.

Mrs. Alvis' assistant will be Karen Frisinger, from Hoffman Estates, who also works at Flower Garden Nursery, and is working for a childhood development degree at Harper College.

Professional volunteers for the center include Professor Charles Joley, a Harper College staff member, who will act as the school's psychologist; Ruth Browne, who operates the Flower Garden Nursery in Palatine and will act as a volunteer consultant; and Rose Marie Poppler, a registered dietitian.

ONE POSITION, that of a part-time cook, is still open at the center.

The day care facility is technically called the Community Childcare Center of Palatine Township, with Mrs. Poppler, president; Terry Kral, vice president; secretary Jerry Pinderski and treasurer Dr. Calvin Robinson.

The center is partially intended to relieve some lower-income mothers in the township, enabling them to work full time and still insure child care for their preschool youngsters at a cost they can afford. Differences between the full tuition and the amount that a needy family can afford will probably be made up with township revenue sharing funds. The township auditors have not given final approval to the request for some $10,000 to implement the program, but they promised to support the center last month.

Outmoded exit ramps, signs

Accidents plague tollway

by TONI GINETTI

You're traveling westbound at 65 miles per hour on the Northwest Tollway when you backed up from the Barrington Road exit ramp.

If you're lucky, you've applied your brakes in time to avoid a collision. If not, you become another victim of the most accident-prone spot on the tollway, according to Michael Hartigan, chief engineer with the Illinois Toll Highway Authority.

The Barrington Road exit has been one of the tollway's most problem ramps because "there's just too much traffic" for it to handle, Hartigan said. Like most of the tollway systems' ramps, it was designed in the mid 1950s when consulting engineers determined where entrance and exit ramps would be placed based on traffic standards at the time.

TODAY THE tollway traffic volume in the suburbs has vastly increased, but most of the tollway's engineered layout apparently will not change.

While the Barrington Road ramp is being redesigned with traffic lights at the end of the ramp to enhance the flow of traffic there, most other ramps are destined to remain the work of 20-year-old planning, according to Hartigan.

"In most cases, the ramps were designed more amply than standards called for at the time," Hartigan said. "Any additional ramps built since then have been based on traffic studies which show the level of traffic in various areas."

In designing the location of ramps, Hartigan said engineers consider what traffic demands are in an area, whether an access ramp would overtax the system in terms of traffic and safety, and also whether the tollway authority could afford the cost of construction.

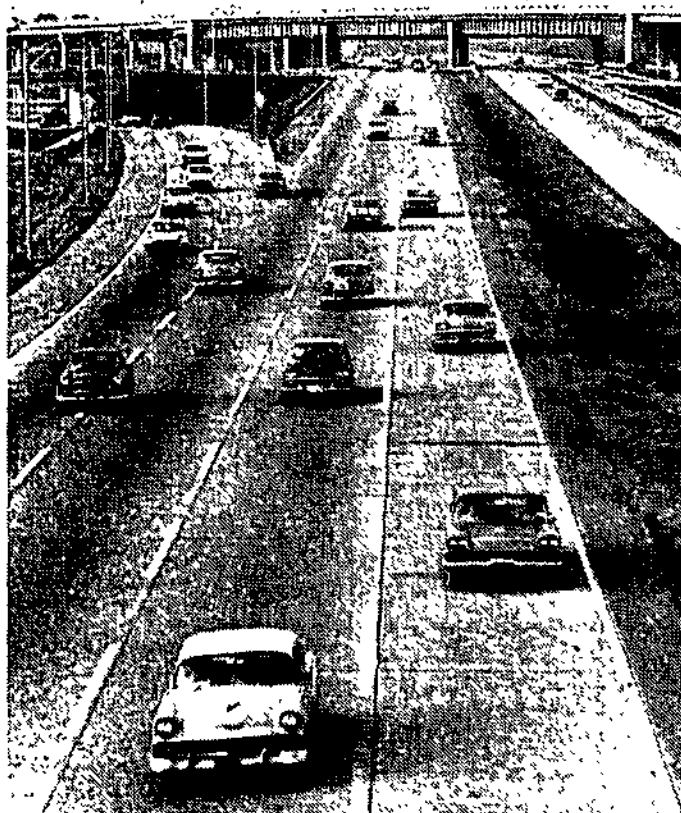

ACCIDENT REPORTS are considered, too, in determining the need for changes in access points, he said. But often, a clear history of traffic problems in an area must be determined before changes are considered.

At the interchange of the Northwest Tollway, Algonquin Road, Rte. 53 for example, Hartigan said the year-old section simply doesn't have enough traffic "history" to warrant a traffic change study.

Rolling Meadows police, who along with state police patrol that section of road, say there have not been many accidents at the interchange, although Police Chief Lewis Case said the section is engineered poorly.

"It lacks a lot of safety engineering but apparently that was

WHEN THESE CARS traveled the tollway it was no different than it is today. Engineers designing the access points to the Northwest Tollway 20 years ago did so based on traffic patterns at that time. Things have changed drastically since then, but not the tollway ramps.

Petition asks hearing for ousted chief

A Palatine resident has initiated a petition demanding a public hearing for ousted Police Chief Robert R. Centner.

Siegmar Olaf Schneider, 44 S. Winston Dr., said he started the petition because "I as a citizen have a right to know what this man has done wrong."

Centner, 44, resigned Monday under pressure from Republican members of the village board.

Schneider, who served as a Village Independent Party precinct captain during the recent local election, said his starting the petition "has nothing to do with parties. The question is, do we have a right to know what's going on in the village?"

IN CALLING for a public hearing, the petition states that the demolition of any village official should not take place without a public hearing in which evidence and witnesses are provided to substantiate the reasons.

Fifteen persons — "everyone I approached," said Schneider — signed the petition during the first two hours it was circulated yesterday afternoon.

Schneider said he hopes to obtain 100 to 150 signatures by Monday night, when he will present the petition to the village board.

Village Mgr. Berton G. Braun, who has been an outspoken critic of the board's action in forcing Centner's resignation, also has called for a public hearing.

This Morning In Brief

The nation

In an emergency action designed to head off meat, poultry and milk shortages, the administration imposed an immediate embargo on exports of soybeans, cotton seeds and the meal and oil products from those two crops.

President Nixon, declaring it would have a crippling effect on a negotiated peace settlement, has vetoed legislation that would have cut off funds for bombing in Cambodia.

Marine Sgt. Abel Larry Kavanaugh, who returned from five years in a Viet Cong POW camp, apparently committed suicide with a gunshot in the temple, Commerce City, Colo., police reported.

The White House, breaking weeks of silence, accused ousted presidential counsel John W. Dean III of being the "principal author of the political and constitutional crisis" triggered by the Watergate scandal.

The Senate has unanimously confirmed Clarence Kelley — a veteran of 21 years with the FBI and 12 as police chief in Kansas City — as the second man ever to permanently head the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

The Senate overwhelmingly approved a 5.6 per cent across-the-board increase in Social Security benefits starting the first of next year.

A Federal Trade Commission chief hinted the FTC is thinking about going to court to break up the big oil companies in a move to end the gasoline shortage.

The state

A panel of three U.S. Court of Appeals judges in Chicago ruled Governor Walker could be brought into federal court on possible contempt charges. The court acted in connection with a suit brought by Donald Adams of Quincy, who charges his rights were violated when fired as chairman of the liquor commission.

Tiny Korean orphan finds love here

by JILL BETTNER

Little Amy Krisanne squeals with delightful laughter as her new daddy shakes her playfully high above his head. Rosy-cheeked, happy, she looks like any child responding to love.

The response is immediate, not learned, but natural for all children — even this tiny Korean orphan who's finding love for the first time.

Amy has her first real home now with the Joe Schermer family, 693 MacArthur Dr., Buffalo Grove, halfway around the world from the Korean town where she was born six months ago.

IT WAS A LONG, rough trip for everybody.

Joe and Phyllis said when they decided a year ago to adopt an overseas orphan, they had no idea there was so much red tape involved.

The Holt Adoption Agency in Eugene, Ore., handled most of the arrangements. Mrs. Schermer said, along with the Illinois Department of Children and Family Services, who conducted a home study on the Schermers.

There were interviews at home, interviews downtown, applications to fill out, medical tests for the entire family and references to obtain from friends and relatives. The Schermers completed all the information and then they waited — and waited.

"From the time we got the applications, the whole process took from a year ago June to August," Mrs. Schermer said. "After we turned it all in, we heard nothing for two months."

SHE WAITED as long as she could, Mrs. Schermer said, and finally called the Holt agency in October. The agency

Pleasant Hill residents fear worse flooding

Residents of the Pleasant Hill subdivision in Palatine challenged Village Engineer Walter Hodel this week over his contention that the improvement of Colfax Street will not worsen flooding in their subdivision.

Several residents of Pleasant Hill, including the president of the area's homeowners association, confronted Hodel at the village board meeting Monday night.

They insisted that the installation of a large storm sewer designed to drain water from the train station at Colfax and Smith streets would cause more flooding downstream.

HODEL, HOWEVER, asserted that the amount of water added to Salt Creek by the new storm sewer would be "negligible."

"You will have water as you've had before," he told the residents. "But in my opinion, you won't have more water than you had before."

Hodel said a baffle designed to regulate the flow of storm water from the proposed Colfax Street sewer to the creek would limit to "immaterial" the amount of water affecting the Pleasant Hill area.

Residents, however, disputed Hodel's opinion. Carol Zempel, president of the Homeowners Association of the Pleasant Hill Area, presented a letter on behalf of the 70 families in the organization objecting to the new storm sewer as "an extremely shortsighted solution."

"Salt Creek cannot handle the water now," she said. "Therefore, any increase obviously will cause more problems."

Another resident, Dan Magel, 244 Pleasant Hill Blvd., questioned whether "The magic baffle is going to do everything for us."

Hodel's projections were based on "typical" rainfalls for this area, as defined by the U.S. government. But Trustee Bryan P. Coughlin Jr. challenged the definition of "typical," saying, "I have lived through rains in this town. Let's talk about what really happens, not what the government talks about in its publications."

FLOODING overshadowed the one-hour discussion of the Colfax Street improvement project, which some trustees would like to revise.

Coughlin, who believes the two-lane street should be repaved rather than widened, referred to plans for a four-lane road as a "VIP memorial highway."

His reference was to the plans having been developed by the previous village board, which was dominated by Village Independent Party members. The majority of the board now is Republican.

Village Mgr. Berton G. Braun pointed out that the monetary savings in retaining the present two lanes of Colfax between Smith Street and Quentin Road rather than expanding the road would be minimal. He described the project as "feasible," and said "it makes sense" as currently drawn.

The $1.4 million project was originally planned more than two years ago, but has been tied up in litigation over how to split the costs. A Cook County Circuit Court jury last spring agreed with the village's plan to assess Colfax Street property owners 30 per cent of the cost, and to provide the remaining 70 per cent from village funds.

Kenneth O. Stonesifer, attorney for the Palatine Board of Local Improvements, said any major changes in the improvement plans would mean starting from the beginning, and could possibly involve another lawsuit.

The village has until July 7 to accept or reject bids submitted on the project. Low bid was $1,319,183.50 from Rock Road Co., Des Plaines.

Mosquito forecast bugs two experts

It's been an all right year, so far as mosquitoes go. But mosquito watchers differ in their forecasts of what to expect this weekend.

John L. Clarke Jr., vice president of Clarke Outdoor Spraying Co. Inc., La Grange, predicts the pesky insects will be out in full force over the weekend.

However, Wilbur R. Mitchell, director of the Northwest Mosquito Abatement District, Wheeling, says the mosquitoes shouldn't be bad at all.

Both authorities base their outlooks on the heavy storm which hit the Northwest suburban area June 16, but draw opposite conclusions from the storm and ensuing weather conditions.

CLARKE SAYS the storm produced the usual effect of carrying mosquito eggs to bodies of standing water, where, with the subsequent two weeks of warm weather, they're about ready to hatch.

Mitchell, on the other hand, says "good ol' Mother Nature" has taken care of the mosquito larvae. Heat from the sun has dried up many natural breeding areas,

Mitchell says, and as a result, "there won't be anything near what we anticipated."

Mitchell, whose abatement district handles anti-mosquito efforts throughout the Northwest suburbs, said regular checks on the mosquito population showed "a drastic drop" in the past two days.

ORIGINAL estimates for a bumper crop of mosquitoes this season, he said, have not been fulfilled. "So far, it's shaping up real good," he added.

Clarke, whose firm has been engaged for mosquito control by 120 Chicago area communities, including Palatine, Hoffman Estates and Schaumburg, says, "At this point, the mosquito population throughout the Chicago area is very light. We are more or less between broods."

However, "we still have eggs out there," he added. "How bad it will be depends on the rainfall. The potential is still there."

Clarke gave the following yardstick for anticipating mosquito population: Half an inch of rainfall, followed by warm temperatures, produces "mild annoyance" two weeks later. An inch and a half to two inches of rainfall produces "high annoyance." Four inches of rainfall — "extreme annoyance."

Old-fashioned '4th' for Palatine

An old-fashioned Fourth of July is in the works for Palatine, complete with parades, pie-eating contests and tugs-of-war. To top off the day, aerial fireworks will end the celebration.

Palatine Jaycees are organizing the event, starting with a parade at 11:45 a.m. at Paddock School, Washington Court, U. S. Rep. Phillip Crane, R-12th, will be grand marshal and featured speaker at the 1 p.m. ceremony. Former Village Pres. Jack Moodie will ride in the parade as honorary grand marshal.

Chicago disk jockey Larry (the Legend) Johnson will also be featured in the parade.

Paraders will go east from Paddock School to Johnson Street, then turn north onto Breckway, and east on Wood Street to Community Park.

MOST OF the afternoon activities will be in Community Park, 262 E. Palatine Rd., starting with a noon art fair by the Palatine Jaycees' Wives.

The midway opens at 12:30 p.m., with parade awards and addresses at 1 p.m.

At 2 p.m., teams of eight men will face off over a muddy puddle for the First Annual Tug-of-War contest. Late entries for the tug-of-war will be accepted by calling Dennis Lundgren at 359-3941. Teams must be men and include eight regulars and two reserves. No spikes or heavy shoes are allowed on the pullers, with bare feet or tennis shoes preferred. Registration fees are $10 per team.

PIE-EATING contests and family games will be sponsored by the Palatine Kiwanis, with pie-eaters starting at 2 p.m. and games beginning at 2:45.

The Palatine Fire Department will take on the village trustees at 4 p.m. in a water fight.

Mustaches will be scrutinized for Le Grande Moustache Contest at 5 p.m. Contestants can sign up for the competition until judging time in one of two divisions: mustaches started before May 1 this year, or new mustaches started since May 1. Later in the day, local rock groups will start a Battle of the Bands at 5:30.

The Palatine Village Band strikes up at 8 p.m., and a 9:50 p.m. fireworks display at the Palatine High School track will round out the holiday.

All profits from the various events will be contributed to the Palatine Firemen's Ambulance Fund.

"everyday"

interest. That's pretty special. But there's more. That daily interest is compounded daily. Paid quarterly. So you can deposit when you like. Withdraw when you need to. Never lose interest provided you maintain $25 or more in your account at the end of the quarter. In fact, you even gain. All money deposited by the 10th earns from the 1st ... If you leave it on deposit until the end of the calendar quarter. Sounds interesting? But what does "everyday" interest mean in dollars and cents? It means that our 5% passbook interest actually earns more when compounded every day the First Federal Savings way. It makes a difference.

Senior citizens to work with children

Grandparents are special people and so are grandchildren. A new program at Maryville Academy in Des Plaines will attempt to bring the two together.

The Foster Grandparent Program is tentatively scheduled to start at Maryville Academy in mid-July. Initially, it is hoped that 10 senior citizens from the Des Plaines area can be found to participate in the program.

The Foster Grandparent Program offers senior citizens and youngsters an opportunity to form a mutually beneficial relationship. Senior citizens work on a one to one basis with physically, mentally and emotionally handicapped children at residential institutions like Maryville. The children receive a meaningful contact and the foster grandparents a feeling of being gainfully employed.

Children identified as needing the most love and attention are assigned to the foster grandparents. The foster grandparents spend two hours a day, five days a week working with these children. They are paid $1.60 an hour for a maximum of 20 hours.

Maryville Academy will provide transportation and lunches for the senior citizens involved in the program.

TO BE ELIGIBLE to participate in the program a person must be over 60 and have an income not exceeding $2,100 if they are single or $2,725 if they are married.

Applications for the program are available at the Northwest Opportunity Center, 3411 Kirchoff Rd., Rolling Meadows, or by calling Rita DeGonia at the Cook County Office of Economic Opportunity at 922-9158. Applicants all will be interviewed by a staff member of the Foster Grandparent Program prior to being assigned to Maryville Academy.

The Foster Grandparent Program is funded by Action, an umbrella organization of all federally funded voluntary organizations. The program, operated mainly by the Cook County Office of Economic Opportunity, is slated to run for five years.

All foster grandparents go through a two-week, 40-hour, training program before they start working alone with the children.

THIS SAME program was started at Little City in Palatine in February but suspended three months later because of transportation problems. Although there were plans to involve 10 senior citizens in the program at Little City only three were actually working with the children at the time it was suspended.

the only way they could design it there," Cave said.

"The biggest problem there seems to be with eastbound traffic on the tollway trying to decide whether to go south on I-90 or continue on the tollway," he said. He said some sign changes have been made at the section to alert drivers of the cutoff, but television films taken by the tollway authority before and after the changes show there still is confusion and indecision on the part of drivers approaching the cutoff.

"You don't want to make the signs too complicated, but you want to provide enough information for people to be able to make a decision," Hartigan said. "You must have something that can be grasped in a few seconds."

NEXT TO problems of access onto and off the tollway, Hartigan said signs on the tollway are the things that present other headaches for the authority.

"We get complaints from people wanting signs and sign changes all the time," he said. "Generally speaking, all the signs are in accordance with the state guidelines that they be visible from 1000 feet, and it's frustrating to get calls from people complaining the signs aren't big enough."

"California did a study several years ago on highway signs and through it they came up with three classes of drivers: those who know where they're going and how to get there; those who know where they're going and don't know how to get there; and those who don't know where they're going and don't know how to get there. The last class creates the most problems."

Hartigan said other complaints involving signs often come from civic groups whose towns are not recognized by signs along the tollway.

"I often think that it's a chamber of commerce type of thing rather than a directional thing," Hartigan said. "People ask why we have a sign for Milwaukee when it's not even in Illinois. My reaction is that interstate travelers have more interest in Milwaukee than Waukegan. We're trying to pull people through major interchanges."

"IF THERE is a major traffic generator, we put up a sign there," he said. One such sign is that leading to the Arlington Park Race Track. "There are 30,000 people who go to the track and about five per cent are new people. You don't want them wandering around the road because then there would be accidents for sure."

Hartigan said even though a sign for the track is located on the tollway, there are still complaints from people who miss the exit. "People say because of us they missed the first race and that they had the sure winner and we cost them $14.20!"

"Signing is almost an art and a difficult art," Hartigan said. "What we should do is do the signing for the New York Thruway and have them do the signing for the Illinois Tollway because the person who travels a road all the time doesn't need the signs. It's the unfamiliar traveler who needs them."

Hartigan said there are no particular problems on the tollway in the area of O'Hare Airport.

"We do have another exit being built near O'Hare that will handle traffic from the northbound Tri-State Tollway. It will connect with the River Road ramp," he said. Hartigan said new toll plazas at the location will help divert about 40 per cent of the volume of traffic now using the existing three-toll plaza there.

Future changes in the tollway ramp system may depend on the success of a new computer system recording accident figures and studies, Hartigan added. Hartigan said the system "should help us keep on top of the situation," and may help in the designing of future tollway access changes.

Day care center hires teachers, opens signup

Teachers have been hired and volunteers selected for the Palatine Township day care center scheduled to open this fall, and registration for preschoolers is starting now.

Children ages 3 to 5 will attend the preschool full time when it opens the first week in September. The center has been organized by a township-appointed committee in the past year, after township social worker Ginny Johnson told officials of the need for full-time day care, particularly for children of mothers who must work.

The center will be based in a wing of Palatine's Presbyterian Church, at Rohlfing and Palatine roads. The first year of operation will cost approximately $19,000, to be paid through tuition fees, state aid and a loan from a local bank.

PALATINE Township officials have promised to help support children in the center who come from families that could not afford to pay the fees charged by a private center.

Twenty children, all attending full time, will be enrolled in the program. Interested parents may call Mrs. Johnson at the township hall, 358-6700, or come into the offices at 37 N. Plum Grove Rd., Palatine, to pick up the required registration and medical forms. Registration costs $10.

Clearbrook given '73 station wagon

The Suburban Township Association for the Retarded (STAR) will donate a 1973 station wagon to the Clearbrook Center in Rolling Meadows for use in transporting Clearbrook interns to jobs in the area.

STAR is a subgroup of the Illinois Association for the Mentally Retarded serving retarded persons in Elk Grove, Palatine, Wheeling, Schaumburg and Moline townships.

Local carpenters or woodworking hobbyists are being sought by the day care committee to build doll furniture, cabinets and other equipment this summer before the center opens. Anyone interested in volunteering to prepare the center or work with the children when the day care facilities open next fall should contact Mrs. Johnson.

ARLENE ALVIS was hired this week as teacher and director of the township day care center. She is currently an assistant teacher and director at Flower Garden Nursery School, a position she has held since 1962. Mrs. Alvis formerly directed a Rolling Meadows nursery school.

Mrs. Alvis' assistant will be Karen Frisinger, from Hoffman Estates, who also works at Flower Garden Nursery, and is working for a childhood development degree at Harper College.

Professional volunteers for the center include Professor Charles Joley, a Harper College staff member, who will act as the school's psychologist; Ruth Browne, who operates the Flower Garden Nursery in Palatine and will act as a volunteer consultant; and Rose Marie Poppler, a registered dietitian.

ONE POSITION, that of a part-time cook, is still open at the center.

The day care facility is technically called the Community Childcare Center of Palatine Township, with Mrs. Poppler, president; Terry Kral, vice president; secretary Jerry Pliderski and treasurer Dr. Calvin Robinson.

The center is partially intended to relieve some lower-income mothers in the township, enabling them to work full time and still insure child care for their preschool youngsters at a cost they can afford. Differences between the full tuition and the amount that a needy family can afford will probably be made up with township revenue sharing funds. The township auditors have not given final approval to the request for some $10,000 to implement the program, but they promised to support the center last month.

Outmoded exit ramps, signs

Accidents plague tollway

by TONI GINETTI

You're traveling westbound at 65 miles per hour on the Northwest Tollway when you spot a line of cars ahead of you backed up from the Barrington Road exit ramp.

If you're lucky, you've applied your brakes in time to avoid a collision. If not, you become another victim of the most accident-prone spot on the tollway, according to Michael Hartigan, chief engineer with the Illinois Toll Highway Authority.

The Barrington Road exit has been one of the tollway's most problem ramps because "there's just too much traffic" for it to handle, Hartigan said. Like most of the tollway systems' ramps, it was designed in the mid 1950s when consulting engineers determined where entrance and exit ramps would be placed based on traffic standards at the time.

TODAY THE tollway traffic volume in the suburbs has vastly increased, but most of the tollway's engineered layout apparently will not change.

While the Barrington Road ramp is being redesigned with traffic lights at the end of the ramp to enhance the flow of traffic there, most other ramps are destined to remain the work of 20-year-old planning, according to Hartigan.

"In most cases, the ramps were designed more amply than standards called for at the time," Hartigan said. "Any additional ramps built since then have been based on traffic studies which show the level of traffic in various areas."

In designing the location of ramps, Hartigan said engineers consider what traffic demands are in an area, whether an access ramp would overtax the system in terms of traffic and safety, and also whether the tollway authority could afford the cost of construction.

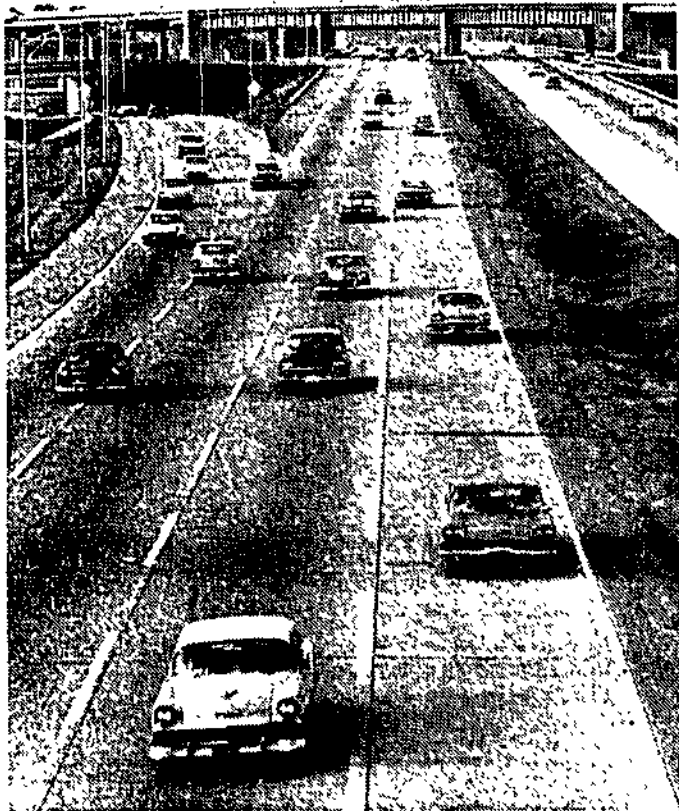

ACCIDENT REPORTS are considered, too, in determining the need for changes in access points, he said. But often, a clear history of traffic problems in an area must be determined before changes are considered.

At the interchange of the Northwest Tollway, Algonquin Road, Rte. 53 for example, Hartigan said the year-old section simply doesn't have enough traffic "history" to warrant a traffic change study.

Rolling Meadows police, who along with state police patrol that section of road, say there have not been many accidents at the interchange, although Police Chief Lewis Case said the section is engineered poorly.

"It lacks a lot of safety engineering but apparently that was

WHEN THESE CARS traveled the tollway it was no different than it is today. Engineers designing the access points to the Northwest Tollway 20 years ago did so based on traffic patterns at that time. Things have changed drastically since then, but not the tollway ramps.

No charges yet in tri-fatality on tollroad

Charges had not been filed as of late yesterday in a triple-fatality auto accident on the Northwest Tollway near Higgins and Oakton roads. The accident occurred at 1 a.m. yesterday.

Illinois State Police said Robert Lilley, 28, of 1125 Perth Dr., Schaumburg, was traveling westbound about 1 a.m. when he lost control of the car and crossed the median strip, striking an eastbound car head-on.

Killed in the eastbound car were Anthony Wilson, 29, of Island Lake, Beverly Mackison, 27, and Ralph Peters, 39, both of Chicago. All were dead on arrival at Northwest Community Hospital.

Lilley was admitted to Northwest Community Hospital with face cuts and leg injuries.

According to an Elk Grove Village Police Department report, Lilley walked away from the accident and was found dazed, in the Hyatt Chalet Motel, 1920 E. Higgins Rd.

According to the report, Lilley said he had been boating on Lake Michigan with friends and then went to a party. He said he did not remember what happened in the accident and kept asking if anyone had been hurt, police said.

A spokesman for the state police department said an investigation was under way, but there was no indication what charges, if any, would be filed.

One named to library board; 3 reappointed

Three persons were reappointed to the Rolling Meadows Library Board and one person was added to the board Tuesday in appointments announced by Mayor Roland Meyer.

John Lund, 2001 Campbell; John Morris, 3409 Bobolink, and Phoebe Garland, 4448 Hoover, were reappointed to serve on the board through 1978. George C. Dorner, 2163 Vermont, was named to serve on the board through 1974 to fill the vacancy left by resigning board member Billy McMillin.

Dorner is a professor in the math and physical science departments at Harper College.

Macklin appointed to plan commission

Bernard Macklin, a member of the Rolling Meadows Zoning Board of Appeals, has been appointed to the city's plan commission to replace William Kenney, who recently resigned.

Macklin was appointed Tuesday by Mayor Roland Meyer. He has been a member of the zoning board for three years. In April, he ran unsuccessfully against Ald. Fredrick Jacobson for a 3rd Ward seat on the city council.

Macklin lives at 4601 Magnolia Dr. His appointment will run to April 30, 1976.

Senate sets hospital licensing probe

An investigation of the licensing procedure for the Schaumburg branch of Rush-Presbyterian-St. Luke's Medical Center will be made, the Illinois Senate announced yesterday.

The inquiry will be made by the Senate's Public Health and Welfare Committee, said State Sen. David Regner, R-Mount Prospect, who sponsored a resolution requesting the investigation.

A possible conflict of interest will be taken up by the committee regarding Dr. Mark Lepper, who receives $35,000 annually as state director of comprehensive health planning, Regner said yesterday.

Lepper, who is also on the RPSS staff earning a $27,500 annual salary, signed the license on the branch facility to be constructed on the north side of Schaumburg Road, west of Roselle Road.

"THERE IS no accusation of hanky-panky," Regner said yesterday. The inquiry is being done to decide, "is this in the best interest of the state," he added.

Dr. Lepper welcomes the investigation to clear his name because he doesn't believe these is any conflict of interest, said Regner.

"There were no dissenting voices (to the resolution) indicating there's no politics involved in this," said Regner, adding, however, that he has a complete file on the issue to pass on to the committee "hoping to clear the record."

The committee, chaired by Sen. Jack Knepper (R-Elmhurst), has set no date for the investigation and Regner has no idea when they'll get to it.

THE $12 million hospital in Schaumburg is planned to open in 1975.

Regner, when proposing the inquiry last month, also said he is "troubled" by Dr. Joyce Lashof's appointment as director of the Illinois Department of Public Health. She too is a staff member at RPSS in Chicago.

Regner has criticized Gov. Dan Walker for allowing the appointees to maintain private positions while holding key governmental posts.

"If you have to pay more money to attract the kind of people the state needs, then it's up to the legislature for higher salaries," he said. "Otherwise, when you are paying people like Dr. Lepper $35,000 a year, you're not really getting a full-time employee."

This Morning In Brief

The nation

In an emergency action designed to head off meat, poultry and milk shortages, the administration imposed an immediate embargo on exports of soybeans, cotton seeds and the meal and oil products from these two crops.

President Nixon, declaring it would have a crippling effect on a negotiated peace settlement, has vetoed legislation that would have cut off funds for bombing in Cambodia.

Marine Sgt. Abel Larry Kavanaugh, who returned from five years in a Viet Cong POW camp, apparently committed suicide with a gunshot in the temple, Commerce City, Colo., police reported.

The White House, breaking weeks of silence, accused ousted presidential counsel John W. Dean III of being the "principal author of the political and constitutional crisis" triggered by the Watergate scandal.

The Senate has unanimously confirmed Clarence Kelley — a veteran of 21 years with the FBI and 12 as police chief in Kansas City — as the second man ever to permanently head the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

The Senate overwhelmingly approved a 5.6 per cent across-the-board increase in Social Security benefits starting the first of next year.

A Federal Trade Commission chief hinted the FTC is thinking about going to court to break up the big oil companies in a move to end the gasoline shortage.

The state

A panel of three U.S. Court of Appeals judges in Chicago ruled Governor Walker could be brought into federal court on possible contempt charges. The court acted in connection with a suit brought by Donald Adams of Quincy, who charges his rights were violated when fired as chairman of the liquor commission.

A former mental patient charged with the rifle slayings of four, and a suspect in the killings of three others in Palos Hills, was placed in a hospital yesterday for psychiatric care.

The Illinois Senate approved a $1.8 million program to help fund passenger rail service between Chicago and other major cities in Illinois.

The world

President Juan Maria Bordaberry, backed by the military in Montevideo, Uruguay, dissolved congress in a blood-less coup and replaced it with a 20-member council of state.

A Mekong River ship convoy, battered by Communist groundfire, despite strong American air cover, limped into Phnom Penh with badly needed food and fuel for the Cambodian capital.

THE TENNIS CRAZE has hit Rolling Meadows with open courts at Rolling Meadows High School becoming a thing of the past and long waiting lines common. Above two young tennis enthusiasts patiently wait their turn picking up some do's and don'ts from those already on the courts.

Park district didn't get weed violation

The Rolling Meadows Park District was not issued a ticket last week for a violation of the city's maximum 30-inch weed height, according to the police department. In a recent story, the Herald said the park district was cited by police for a portion of land having weeds growing taller than the 30-inch maximum.

The violation was instead reported to the public works department, according to police. Steve Person, director of parks and recreation, said when questioned the park district does not own the land in question.

Weekend mosquito forecast: take your pick

It's been an all right year, so far as mosquitoes go. But mosquito watchers differ in their forecasts of what to expect this weekend.

John L. Clarke Jr., vice president of Clarke Outdoor Spraying Co. Inc., La Grange, predicts the pesky insects will be out in full force over the weekend.

However, Wilbur R. Mitchell, director of the Northwest Mosquito Abatement District, Wheeling, says the mosquitoes shouldn't be bad at all.

Both authorities base their outlooks on the heavy storm which hit the Northwest suburban area June 16, but draw opposite conclusions from the storm and ensuing weather conditions.

CLARKE SAYS the storm produced the usual effect of carrying mosquito eggs to bodies of standing water, where, with the subsequent two weeks of warm weather, they're about ready to hatch.

Mitchell, on the other hand, says "good ol' Mother Nature" has taken care of the mosquito larvae. Heat from the sun has dried up many natural breeding areas, Mitchell says, and as a result, "there won't be anything near what we anticipated."

Mitchell, whose abatement district handles anti-mosquito efforts throughout the Northwest suburbs, said regular checks on the mosquito population showed "a drastic drop" in the past two days.

ORIGINAL estimates for a bumper crop of mosquitoes this season, he said, have not been fulfilled. "So far, it's shaping up real good," he added.

Clarke, whose firm has been engaged for mosquito control by 120 Chicago area communities, including Palatine, Hoffman Estates and Schaumburg, says, "At this point, the mosquito population throughout the Chicago area is very light. We are more or less between broods."

However, "we still have eggs out there," he added. "How bad it will be depends on the rainfall. The potential is still there."

Clarke gave the following yardstick for anticipating mosquito population: Half an inch of rainfall, followed by warm temperatures, produces "mild annoyance" two weeks later. An inch and a half to two inches of rainfall produces "high annoyance." Four inches of rainfall — "extreme annoyance."

Levitt building permits: one at a time

by PAT GEHLACH

Effective immediately, building permits for all Levitt-constructed houses in Schaumburg will be issued one at a time.

Issuance of Levitt building permits will now depend entirely on satisfactory completion of the house for which the prior permit was issued, according to village board action Tuesday.

Residents' repeated complaints of "shoddy workmanship" and reports of the builder's negative or unresponsive attitude are responsible for the change.

EACH HOUSE will be individually inspected on completion and new permit fees ranging from $225 to $350 per unit will be charged by the village. The prior practice had been to issue permits based on village building department approval of plans for a specific model home, at the same time.

However, residents of Levitt's Sheffield communities have charged the builder with misrepresentation and claim that homes are not finished like the models.

Engene P. McDonald, 1328 Elgin Ln., told trustees his house contains woodwork of five or six different wood grains and colors.

McDonald, a graduate engineer with seven years experience in the building profession, said he initially received no response to his complaint about the woodwork. The builder had "run out of stuff so you got what was left over," McDonald said he was eventually told.

"MY TIME IN Schaumburg has not been bad, but getting Levitt to meet what was presented as the great intrinsic points of the house has been hell," McDonald continued.

McDonald believes the builder should be made to include items of the quality displayed in model homes.

Trustee Herb Aigner, who later called for the stringent supervision of building permits for Levitt, told McDonald the village board could not be expected to act as a consumer education group.

"But I expect you to be consumer oriented when the builder comes to ask for a variance," the resident replied.

Plans presented and accepted in good faith should be carried through, he added.

"I just ask that you keep hearing our problems and maybe one day Levitt will come through," he concluded.

KAREN RUSSELL, who lived in a Levitt-Sheffield house for the past 18 months, also spoke.

Mrs. Russell said her house was "condemned" by the village health department sometime ago because of gases noted in her backyard. Repeated contacts have failed to bring the builder back to investigate, she added.

Mary Anne Clarke, of the same development, told of having a wet garage for two years until Levitt workers constructed a trench to carry off water last week. Pat Riley advised trustees that pillars in front of her house crumbled several months ago because of improper footings. They were not repaired until residents threatened to warn local newspapers, she added.

"I have about had it with Levitt," Aigner said. While he favored an immediate building permit cutoff for Levitt, Village Atty. Jack Siegel said that would not be legally possible.

Siegel, however, suggested that future building permits be issued on a single basis until the builder "demonstrates an improvement."

Housing permits for Levitt: one at a time, please

Senate slates licensing probe of St. Luke's

An investigation of the licensing procedure for the Schaumburg branch of Rush-Presbyterian-St. Luke's Medical Center will be made, the Illinois Senate announced yesterday.

The inquiry will be made by the Senate's Public Health and Welfare Committee, said State Sen. David Regner, R-Mount Prospect, who sponsored a resolution requesting the investigation.

A possible conflict of interest will be taken up by the committee regarding Dr. Mark Lepper, who receives $35,000 annually as state director of comprehensive health planning, Regner said yesterday.

Lepper, who is also on the RPSL staff earning a $27,500 annual salary, signed the license on the branch facility to be constructed on the north side of Schaumburg Road, west of Roselle Road.

"THERE IS no accusation of hanky-panky," Regner said yesterday. The inquiry is being done to decide, "Is this in the best interest of the state," he added.

Dr. Lepper welcomes the investigation to clear his name because he doesn't believe there is any conflict of interest, said Regner.

"There were no dissenting votes (to the resolution) indicating there's no politics involved in this," said Regner, adding, however, that he has a complete file on the issue to pass on to the committee "hoping to clear the record."

The committee, chaired by Sen. Jack Knuepfer (R-Elmhurst), has set no date for the investigation and Regner has no idea when they'll get to it.

THE $12 million hospital in Schaumburg is planned to open in 1975.

Regner, when proposing the inquiry last month, also said he is "troubled" by Dr. Joyce Lashof's appointment as director of the Illinois Department of Public Health. She too is a staff member at RPSL in Chicago.

Regner has criticized Gov. Dan Walker for allowing the appointees to maintain private positions while holding key governmental posts.

"If you have to pay more money to attract the kind of people the state needs, then it's up to the legislature for higher salaries," he said. "Otherwise, when you are paying people like Dr. Lepper $35,000 a year, you're not really getting a full-time employee."

Resident's repeated complaints of "shoddy workmanship" and reports of the builder's negative or unresponsive attitude are responsible for the change.

ONE LITTLE, TWO LITTLE . . . 6 of the 13 O'Malley children get together to weed in the family garden as their mother, Mrs. Donald O'Malley, supervises with a smile. Mrs. O'Malley occasional need to supervise with a hand placed firmly against a backside.

12 gallons of milk a week, for instance . . .

Raising 13 kids isn't easy or cheap

by DIANE STEFANOS

When you're feeding 13 kids, 10 pounds of potatoes doesn't go very far. In fact, it's the minimum amount required for any one meal.

So attests Mrs. Ann O'Malley of 137 Bradley Ln., Hoffman Estates, the mother of 13.

In a large house upon which extra rooms have been added, each room rings with the sounds of television, radios and records, and the cries of human laughter and play a good part of 24 hours each day.

Raising 13 children hasn't been and still is not an easy job. It's not an inexpensive operation, and it definitely is a job that requires considerable amounts of humor, patience and firmly established inter-cooperation, according to the O'Malleys.

"Raising a family however small or big requires the same elements of love and understanding and discipline. There have been unique rewards from raising a big family like ours, but also it has had its drawbacks when it came to expenses," said Mrs. O'Malley.

Everyone's struggling with rising food and clothing costs. Considering the weekly grocery bill, the only way to get around the high prices is to do like other mothers do — compare prices closely and shop in large quantities on sale items.

"WE BUY ABOUT six gallons of milk twice a week and at least 10 dozen oranges a week."

One refrigerator stores the milk and fruit while another stationed in the family's kitchen houses other refrigerated goods. With a large freezer, sale turkeys and pot roasts are bought in quantities.

"I sadly hauled out our last turkey the other day. I bought it on sale for 38 cents a pound. Now they are all 69 cents a pound and they only last a meal," she said.

As with most economically minded women, Mrs. O'Malley has been using more macaroni and rice in her meals. Her family indulges in a special concoction of Lipton noodle soup with lots of rice added to offer a "filling and inexpensive meal in itself."

"In fact, my kids love soup. They eat that, and Campbell's soups for every meal of the day. Most of them eat soup and cream cheese on rye bread for breakfast, and soup and sandwiches again for lunch," said the mother of 13.

Although it's more economical that way, conventional breakfasts of eggs, bacon and toast are Sunday morning traditions.

Leftovers are unheard of in the O'Malley house. Friday night is snack night for the younger children who are allowed soft drinks and special treats of candy and Fritos.

"The older children who are over 16 pay for their own snacks and soft drinks. They even pay for their own clothes and personal items because they have jobs. The ones out of high school pay for room and board. They realize the expenses we incur as they grow older," according to Mr. and Mrs. O'Malley.

HAVING COME from a large family, the couple now married 27 years, had originally wanted one or two children.

"Now we're playing chauffeur to nearly 13 of them with our family station wagon. Some of the older kids have cars but they're at work all day," said Mrs. O'Malley.

The children range from 8 to 22 years of age, each a year apart from the other except for two children who are two years apart because, "that was the year we bought a house instead," says Mr. O'Malley.

"Large families were in fashion when we were planning ours. We were avid Catholics and didn't believe in birth control."

"I don't especially believe in that now, but I did believe I was doing the right thing at the time and I never regret having all of my children although I wouldn't recommend large families," she said.

There certainly is no lack of communication in this house between parents and children. With everyone constantly coming and going with jobs and play, everyone still has a chance to talk and be

Reading, writing, arithmetic — just some of schools' goals

Teaching children reading, writing, arithmetic and how to listen and talk almost became the single goal of School Dist. 54.

"And, if we could successfully accomplish that sole goal with each student, we'd be doing a darn good job," said Donnie Rudd, school board president.

Rudd was joking when he made the suggestion as he chaired a committee of residents, teachers, administrators and school board members who met Tuesday to define long-range goals for students and the district.

But, several people present agreed it should be the basis of the district's written statement of what it expects from students and itself.

The committee adopted eight student goals and six district goals and will recommend these be accepted by the board of education at its July 5 meeting.

THE WRITTEN program plan must be submitted to the State Superintendent of Public Instruction by Jan. 1, 1974.

It is required of all school districts in the state. Each district must tell the state what it is asking of itself and students, how it expects to accomplish these things and how it will judge students and itself.

Community input is required by the state and in Dist. 54 there was much evidence of community involvement.

Citizens worked side by side with teachers and administrators to compile these goals.

For students, the goals are:

- All students should have the basic skills of reading, listening, written and verbal communication, mathematics and problem-solving.

- All students should have a feeling of adequacy and self-worth.

- All students should develop a positive attitude towards learning.

- All students should express their creativity.

- All students should be adaptable to a world of change.

- All students should appreciate and have a positive attitude toward all persons.

- All students should be aware of the many opportunities in training for the world of work.

- All students should have habits and attitudes associated with citizenship responsibilities.

School officials ask comments on goals

Elementary Dist. 54 officials want to know what Schaumburg Township residents want from their schools.

Administrators, teachers, and residents seek comments from the public on the tentative goals adopted Tuesday.

The proposed goals will be submitted to the board of education for approval at student goal, to make it explicitly anti-sex discriminatory.

Although she received some support, the committee decided the district, by stating it was providing opportunity for all students, was not discriminatory.

Goals for the district are designed to state how the district's education and support programs can assist the student accomplish his goals.

These district goals are; regarding district governance policy and practices:

- Dist. 54 will provide equal educational opportunities.

- Policies of the board of education should be written, easily understood and accessible.

District administrative structure and practices goals are:

- Dist. 54 will designate within its organizational structure specific responsibilities of each administrator in regard to meeting the educational policies, goals and philosophies set by the board.

- Dist. 54 will utilize modern budgeting and fiscal control techniques and will have an evaluation program for its administrative personnel.

THE DISTRICTS policies regarding rights and responsibilities of individuals are:

- The district will have programs which provide for career awareness and exploration; provide for individual needs; have a broad range of relevant curriculum offerings and provide appropriate programs for its bilingual and non English speaking students.

- Dist. 54 will have programs and provide an atmosphere to prepare students for full citizenship; have an adequate program of media services to meet the curricular and instructional needs; and evaluate its curriculum and instructive processes.

The district's support services goals are:

- To provide adequate and safe transportation as needed, to promote optimum health practices and to provide facilities required to maintain adequate food services as needed.

The district's staff development and teacher goals are to provide teachers who are fully qualified to teach; provide an adequate program of in-service training and promote teacher excellence and encourage professional growth of its staff.

No charges yet in tri-fatality on tollroad

Charges had not been filed as of late yesterday in a triple-fatality auto accident on the Northwest Tollway near Higgins and Oakton roads. The accident occurred at 1 a.m. yesterday.

Illinois State Police said Robert Lilley, 28, of 1125 Perth Dr., Schaumburg, was traveling westbound about 1 a.m. when he lost control of the car and crossed the median strip, striking an eastbound car head-on.

Killed in the eastbound car were Anthony Wilson, 29, of Island Lake, Beverly Jackson, 27, and Ralph Peters, 30, both of Chicago. All were dead on arrival at Northwest Community Hospital.

Lilley was admitted to Northwest Community Hospital with face cuts and leg injuries.

According to an Elk Grove Village Police Department report, Lilley walked away from the accident and was found dazed, in the Hyatt Chalet Motel, 1920 E. Higgins Rd.

According to the report, Lilley said he had been boating on Lake Michigan with friends and then went to a party. He said he did not remember what happened in the accident and kept asking if anyone had been hurt, police said.

man Estates Fire Protection District.

The village board, which is expected to adopt its 1973-74 budget Monday night, said only that it would consider the request and respond as soon as possible.

The district has asked for the donation from village revenue sharing funds to meet an anticipated fire district budget deficit of up to $32,000.

Fire Dist. Atty. Gene Kelly said the district could manage a $7,000 deficit perhaps by deferring some items. The village board questioned the possibility of increasing the fire district levy or increasing the amount of tax anticipation warrant loans to cover the deficit but fire district officials responded they are levying at the maximum the law allows.

Dist. Board Pres. William Brilliant said one possible means of meeting the deficit would be to charge a fee for emergency rescue service, meaning ambulance service. The district is discussing that alternative with hospitals now serving residents of the area, Brilliant said.

Also, said Brilliant the fire district plans to seek referendum approval either late this summer or early in the fall of a tax of 25 cents per hundred dollars assessed valuation to pay for ambulance service. The ambulance costs now come out of general operating funds.

Raising 13 kids isn't easy...or cheap with one another in the evenings and over the weekends, and then it's "tell it like it is," said Mrs. O'Malley.

Where most of the children double up in the bedrooms, each is responsible for keeping his room clean, although Mrs. O'Malley does all of the general housework, washing, ironing and dishwashing.

"LIKE ANY parent, you love each one of your children and you care for them and bring them up the best way you can. Now that a lot of my kids are older, they'll soon be moving out of the house and sharing apartments," she said.

Their 21-year-old son John is the only married child and the only O'Malley youth living outside of the house.

"I want to see them all get out on their own. It teaches them a certain sense of responsibility. My husband and I are both looking forward to the day when they all grow up and go out on their own. That's when we'll have the opportunity to do some of the things we've never been able to do."

Her husband, Donald, partner in an Elk Grove Village carpet contracting firm, is still able to spend a lot of time with his family.

It was always a unique situation. Going out to the movies or dinner or carnivals always drew comments like "Are they all yours," or "oh, my goodness, look at all the children."

Like a federal program, everything in the O'Malley house has occurred in distinct "phases."

"When we only had the first half-dozen kids, we did a lot of things together. But in the next five or six years following, after the rest of our children were born, it was really hard," said Mrs. O'Malley.

THIS PHASE two was marked by "too many small children and not enough big ones to help" as she puts it. But, now that many of the children are older, "we're into an easier Phase III."

The days of dressing 13 little ones right down the row with mittens and boots in the winter are gone for Mr. and Mrs.

O'Malley. Days of going out and having 13 children trailing along are also a part of their past. But a constant watch on the unnecessary use of water and electricity, and a time limit on a constant use of the telephone and bathroom are still in order.

And discipline? Well, with 13 small children, a wrong move warranted a quick and easy "well directed crack in the rear," says Mrs. O'Malley.

"You give them advice, teach them and love them. After that, their personality and the individual they are has a lot to do with what kind of person that child will be. The parent, school and church can only do so much."

Suddenly laughter and conversation come in the backdoor of the house, the telephone rings and a sudden burst of radio music fills the air. Is it a raid, a charge? No, it's just one third of the O'Malley clan returning home from an afternoon at the pool. Rest time's over mom, and dad, at least until tomorrow afternoon for a few hours.

School board awards $2 million bond

A $53,000 savings for Schaumburg Township residents during the next 16 years will come because of a 4.9 per cent interest rate obtained in a $2 million bond sale.

A contract for the bonds was awarded Tuesday by the Elementary School Dist. 34 board of education to the Continental Bank of Chicago.

The financing, part of a $7.3 million bond issue approved by voters in 1970, will be used to defray the costs at five schools now under construction in the district.

They include Eisenhower Junior High School, Hoffman Estates; Hoover Elementary School, Schaumburg; Link Elementary School, Elk Grove Village, and Einstein and Walden elementary schools in Hanover Park.

"An increased investor's rating resulted in a total of eight bids for the bonds with all interest rates well below the 5 1/2 per cent rate the district was seeking," said Marvin Lapicola, assistant superintendent-finance. This is the largest number of bids ever received for a Dist. 34 bond sale, he added.

THE DISTRICT had expected to pay approximately $1,003,000 in interest costs on the bond. "Now with the exceptionally good lower interest rate we received, we will profit by approximately $65,000," he added.

Lapicola said the district has, for the past six years, been given a triple B rating by Moody's Investor Rating. "After telephone contacts and exchanges of financial information we convinced Moody our rating should be raised to an A," said Lapicola.

"The district had a lower rating in previous years because of its rapid growth and lack of increasing tax base.

"When we were able to show that our tax base took a 25 per cent jump from the previous year, we got a higher rating," said Lapicola. The district's 1972 total assessed valuation is approximately $260,814,428.

Lapicola said investors are usually reluctant to purchase bonds unless a school district is rated highly by investor's rating houses. Most school districts in this area are rated A and the only two higher ratings above it, are double-A and Triple-A.

LAPICOLA said the district is especially pleased about its ability to attract good, low bidders because this means tax rates in the districts should continue to drop.

"This year's tax rate dropped by 11 cents from $2.89 per every $100 of assessed valuation to the present tax rate of $2.78.

"Next year's tax rate should drop to at least $2.72," predicts Lapicola.

2 bills in Springfield

Mental health aid on way?

Two measures have been approved in the Illinois General Assembly that may ease the financial crunch facing the Elk Grove-Schaumburg Townships Mental Health Center.

One bill has passed both houses in the legislature authorizing townships to levy a tax, without referendum, to finance mental health activities. The tax could be levied providing the township was not at its maximum tax rate already. Currently, townships cannot use tax funds for mental health expenditures.

The tax levy for Elk Grove and Schaumburg townships could be up to $2.50 for a home with $10,000 assessed valuation.

Jordan Rosen, executive director of the center, said if the bill is signed by Gov. Daniel Walker and "assuming we can work with the townships," the tax would eliminate most of the center's funding problems. If the bill is signed into law, the tax would not be levied until next year.

THE SECOND BILL, which passed the Senate and was sent to the House, increases the appropriation for the state department of mental health from $321 million to $338 million.

The mental health center had requested a $92,000 grant for the coming fiscal year from the department. The request was reduced to $52,000, the same amount as this year's grant.

Rosen has attempted to have the grant increased, contending service would be reduced without the full grant request.

Rosen said department officials have said if their total appropriation is increased, the grant request could be reconsidered. He said if the increased appropriations bill is passed by the House and signed into law, the center could be eligible for an increased grant.

River Trails schools leader 'didn't work out'

by MARY HOULIHAN
A news analysis

It was a small mountain of little problems that apparently forced the departure of Supt. Thomas Warden from River Trails Dist. 26 recently.

Included in the frustrating series of events were lack of action on pressing projects, teacher dissatisfaction, and a serious lack of judgment in the hiring of a school principal, according to informed board sources.

Warden resigned as superintendent at the end of May. Though school board members refused to comment on whether the board had asked for Warden's resignation, it was obvious that the board bought up Warden's contract when the board gave him a check for $14,000 in addition to the remainder of this year's salary.

According to board sources, Warden was at odds with the school board as early as fall, 1972.

PAIDMOUNT AMONG the problems that popped up in board members' minds, according to sources, were Warden's reassignment of two Dist. 26 principals in spring, 1972, and the lack of progress in teachers' negotiations in the fall.

In spring, 1972, Warden recommended the reassignment of Bea Amundson, principal at Feehanville School, and Jim Ackley, principal at the River Trails Junior High School, to other positions in the district.

"The principal transfers were obviously disruptive. But the choice there seemed reasonable to the board then," one official explained.

In fact, at that time all the board members except Ted Wattenberg were new to the board and none had any cause to question Warden's judgment as superintendent.

According to board sources, Warden recommended the principal transfers because of a question of "administrative competence."

Though both principals protested the reassignments at first, they both decided to acquiesce after the board granted them each a private hearing.

Thomas Warden

THE PRIVATE hearings did nothing to change the situation, however. Miss Amundson was subsequently transferred from her first assignment at the River Road School to teaching a self-contained classroom at the River Trails Junior High School. Ackley stayed at his reassignment as director of district resource centers. After Warden's resignation, he was reassigned as principal, this time at Feehanville School.

Ackley said he thought his transfer was not motivated out of any personal problems with Warden. "He just didn't think I was the man for the junior high," he explained. "But that's the superintendent's prerogative. I think the board played it as a board should. You hire the superintendent to run the schools. If you want to run the schools, you get rid of the superintendent."

Teacher dissatisfaction with lack of progress on negotiations was also beginning to bother the board, according to one source. The problem was "the fact that nobody was addressing themselves to the question of where we were and what lack of progress there was," the source said. "When you get that kind of dissatisfaction, there is usually a cause."

To stem the tide of teacher dissatisfaction, several board members decided to sit in on teacher negotiations themselves. About two weeks after school had started, teachers signed a contract with the board.

"IT WAS THE little things that really started to gnaw on people," a spokesman explained. "Letters not being written or sent out. There were a number of phone calls from people who'd been in the district a long time who were familiar with things. They didn't like the things they saw going on, the lack of results, and the problems that upset teachers that weren't being taken care of."

According to sources, Warden wasn't having problems with just the teachers and parents. As less administrative functions were getting done, Assistant Supt. James Retzlaff was finding it harder to deal with Warden, the spokesman said. "Retzlaff had a choice of keeping quiet or trying to get things done," said the source. "The more he tried to get things done, the more defensive Tom got, and the association deteriorated."

There had been rumors that Retzlaff was trying to undermine Warden as superintendent to catapult his own career. According to one informed board source,

Students to learn fine art of 'umping'

by FRED GACA

About 25 students at Holmes Junior High School will be talking about themselves if they complain about the poor job the umpire is doing at future sporting events.

The students are enrolled in the special summer class, "Want a Better Ref? Be One!", at the Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 school in Mount Prospect. After completing the six-week class, the students will be awarded a special certification card that awarded them to officiate at school sports contests, primarily those in the intramural program.

principal at Holmes, teaches the referee class, which was one of his ideas for a special summer school program.

WHEN THE DISTRICT began planning this year's summer program, it was decided that summer school should offer different classes than the students take during the regular school year. Teachers and principals at the schools were asked to suggest unusual and interesting classes students might want to take.

Crail suggested the umpire class. The suggestion was accepted and he is surprised at the response. "I thought 10-12 students would be interested in the class. The enrollment is double what I thought it would be," he said.

Many of the students in the class are interested in becoming players in the different sports, according to Crail. He said that by learning how to umpire or referee a sport, they will become better players and have a better attitude and understanding toward officials.

"It is easy to yell at the referee until you realize how much is involved in the job," said Crail.

Five sports will be covered in the class: basketball, flag football, volleyball, floor hockey and the common rules of baseball-softball.

FOR EACH SPORT, the students will first study and pass a written test on the rules for that sport. They will then practice judging an actual contest, learning where the officials should be during a game, how to spot an infraction of the rules and what penalty to call.

The larger than expected class is a benefit, according to Crail. He said there are enough students to have some playing a game, others acting as officials and the rest observing and commenting on how the student-officials do their job.

The "on the job" training is important to Crail because mere knowledge of how a game is played and what the rules are is not enough. "You can have a very good 'head knowledge' of a sport and still be a poor judge of what is going on," he said.

Crail said the students will follow the district's policy of having officials be more than judges, also acting as instructors. The students, when they call penalties, will have to explain why they were called, what rule was violated and why the particular penalty is imposed.

SOME PROBLEMS are expected with students in a game who don't respect an official who is a fellow classmate. "They (student-officials) have to learn they run the game. They are in charge. They don't have to take anything from anyone," he said.

Crail said the training students receive should be thorough enough to impress the school coaches and the players "that this is a qualified referee."

Negotiating team to weigh pay proposals

Negotiating teams of the Prospect Heights Dist. 23 school board and the Prospect Heights Education Association (PHEA) will exchange salary proposals at a special meeting June 13.

Members of both teams will meet at 7:30 p.m. July 18 to discuss the proposals and to tentatively approve the procedural part of the teachers' 1973-74 contract.

Several items — including a teacher's grievance procedure, faculty advisory committees, binding arbitration and a no-strike clause — were dropped by both sides.

Hooray! Main Street to open

Hooray!

Main Street in downtown Mount Prospect is scheduled to reopen tomorrow, ending seven weeks of construction.

The next-to-final street surface was laid yesterday by Glaze Construction Co. crews. Main Street has been closed off in the block from Central Road to Busse Avenue.

Work has begun on new traffic signals at the Main Street-Evergreen Avenue and Main Street-Northwest Highway intersections. All are part of the same project to increase safety and traffic capacity of the three-block Main Street section, which includes the crossing at Chicago and North Western Railway tracks.

MOUNT PROSPECT

Blood drawing Saturday

The monthly blood drawing for Mount Prospect will be Saturday at Lions Park, 411 S. Maple St.

Donors are still needed and those willing to give are asked to call the village hall at 312-6900 to arrange appointments. The Jaycees, who are operating the blood program for the first year, estimate that 100 pints are needed to keep the program operating.

Under an agreement with the North Suburban Blood Center, all Mount Prospect residents are guaranteed an unlimited supply of blood if 4 per cent of the population gives a pint of blood each year. So far, more than 500 pints have been donated.

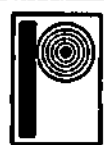

Shoplifters grab clothing, flee

Two shoplifters grabbed $200 worth of women's clothing from the Montgomery Ward store at Randolph Shopping Center Tuesday.

Police said the man and woman ran out of the store and got into a late model purple Cadillac, which was later seen traveling in Buffalo Grove. Two other persons were seen in the car, police said.

Oak Park police have reported similar shoplifting incidents in that community. The Mount Prospect theft occurred shortly after 8 p.m.

17 streets designated for priority maintenance

Residents of 17 streets in Mount Prospect will be happy to learn that their streets will soon be named collector streets.

It's not the name "collector" that will mean anything to them — it will be the priority given to their streets when it comes to snow removal, maintenance, drainage improvements and street lighting.

A collector street is one used by most drivers to get from other streets within a subdivision to major streets within the village. The village board has approved a list of collector streets and will soon pass the needed ordinance.

The streets are: Burning Bush Lane, Council Trail, Elmhurst Avenue from Central to Kensington roads, Emerson Street from Golf to Central roads, Gregory Street from Waterman Avenue to Rand Road, Highland Street and Lincoln Street from Meier Road to Elmhurst Avenue.

River Road educational expenses

Bill to speed school paybacks

It may not be long before River Trails Dist. 25 will be receiving current reimbursement for educational costs for the River Road School at Maryville Academy, Des Plaines.

At present the district has to wait from six to 15 months to be reimbursed for money expended for the school. Under a bill sponsored by State Rep. Arthur Berman, D-Chicago, the district would be able to receive reimbursement on a quarterly basis.

The legislation is in the form of an amendment to House Bill 1790, which passed in the Senate this week. The bill now needs only to be agreed to in its current state in the House and signed by Gov. Daniel Walker to become law.

According to Dist. 25 Acting Supt. James Retzlaff, passage of the bill will mean "less reluctance now to satisfy the recognized needs at Maryville."

"It caused a little reluctance on the part of the board to know that if they pay for something in September, they won't receive the money for 15 months," Retzlaff explained.

Passage of the bill would also mean less need to issue tax anticipation warrants (loans) on the following year's tax receipts each year, Retzlaff said.

however, Retzlaff was just trying to do his job. "To show an example of his general attitude toward his trying to be reasonable and helpful, he (Retzlaff) suggested in the staffing plan this spring that he move over to a principalship," the source said. "And he volunteered to do that. Even at a reduction in pay."

ACCORDING TO sources, there was no one incident or incidents that led the board directly to act in the matter of the superintendent. "It's hard to say what brought it to a head. The board has to have confidence in a superintendent, but at what point does a board continue to accept answers that are not satisfying?" the source asked.

Without a doubt, however, the four-month delay of action on construction of a new roof at Peckhamville School and problems with Arthur Adelberg, the principal at Peckhamville who had a history of problems as a superintendent in Elmhurst Dist. 3, were instrumental in bringing about action by the board.

"The main thing was what was happening to the district in terms of education," one spokesman explained. "The element that was probably most pronounced was that he didn't do the proper homework when handling Adelberg."

Also, the board apparently was beginning to think of Warden as much too abrasive for a school superintendent. "Early in this year, Tom really didn't have the greatest attitude towards the board," the source explained. "Really, it was something less than cooperative and respectful of people as people. Tom cannot conceive that he has any deficiencies. Everybody else is bad, at fault and wrong."

ASKED IF WARDEN'S problems in Elk Grove Township School Dist. 59 (he was transferred from the principalship of Forest View Elementary School by Supt. Don Thomas) figured in the board's decision at all, the board source said, "This board was de-tuned from 59 details. He (Warden) was evaluated, pure and simple, on what he did in Dist. 25."

Thomas reassigned Warden as curriculum coordinator for the district in 1971. Thomas later filed his resignation as superintendent.

Though the Dist. 26 board viewed Warden as "a hard guy to work with," there are those in Dist. 26 who worked closely with Warden and who felt just the opposite.

ACCORDING TO one Dist. 26 administrative worker who had a "close association" with him while Warden was in Dist. 59 and 26, the man was not that hard to get along with.

"He tended to be a perfectionist," the source said, "so I think it drove you to try to do your best. But somehow, you do it and you're happy to do it."

"I would say his forte is that he is a tremendously creative person. He has ideas that just won't quit."

Asked if there was ever a difference of opinion with the superintendent, the administrative source answered that Warden "would listen any time I had ever worked with him."

A telling statement the source made about Warden, however, was one that perhaps means the most in the whole controversy surrounding the superintendent's resignation.

"People who worked very closely with him were much more aware of his capabilities than those who didn't," the source said.

No charges yet in tri-fatality on tollroad

Charges had not been filed as of late yesterday in a triple-fatality auto accident on the Northwest Tollway near Higgins and Oakton roads. The accident occurred at 1 a.m. yesterday.

Illinois State Police said Robert Lilley, 28, of 1125 Perth Dr., Schaumburg, was traveling westbound about 1 a.m. when he lost control of the car and crossed the median strip, striking an eastbound car head-on.

Killed in the eastbound car were Anthony Wilson, 29, of Island Lake, Beverly Mackson, 27, and Ralph Peters, 30, both of Chicago. All were dead on arrival at Northwest Community Hospital.

Lilley was admitted to Northwest Community Hospital with face cuts and leg injuries.

According to an Elk Grove Village Police Department report, Lilley walked away from the accident and was found dazed, in the Hyatt Chalet Motel, 1920 E. Higgins Rd.

According to the report, Lilley said he had been boating on Lake Michigan with friends and then went to a party. He said he did not remember what happened in the accident and kept asking if anyone had been hurt, police said.

A spokesman for the state police department said an investigation was under way, but there was no indication what charges, if any, would be filed.

Tiny Korean orphan finds love for the first time

by JILL BETTNER

Little Amy Krisanne squeals with delightful laughter as her new daddy shakes her playfully high above his head. Rosy-cheeked, happy, she looks like any child responding to love.

The response is immediate, not learned, but natural for all children — even this tiny Korean orphan who's finding love for the first time.

Amy has her first real home now with the Joe Schermer family, 693 MacArthur Dr., Buffalo Grove, halfway around the world from the Korean town where she was born six months ago.

IT WAS A LONG, rough trip for everybody.

Joe and Phyllis said when they decided a year ago to adopt an overseas orphan, they had no idea there was so much red tape involved.

The Holt Adoption Agency in Eugene, Ore., handled most of the arrangements, Mrs. Schermer said, along with the Illinois Department of Children and Family Services, who conducted a home study on the Schermers.

There were interviews at home, interviews downtown, applications to fill out, medical tests for the entire family and references to obtain from friends and relatives. The Schermers compiled all the information and then they waited — and waited.

"From the time we got the applications, the whole process took from a year ago June to August," Mrs. Schermer said. "After we turned it all in, we heard nothing for two months."

SHE WAITED as long as she could, Mrs. Schermer said, and finally called the Holt agency in October. The agency told her the information on the family and Amy was in the hands of the Immigration and Naturalization Service and it would probably be another three to five months before they would know anything.

To pass the time, Mrs. Schermer went to work as a secretary at Adlai Stevenson High School in Prairie View. The women there later gave her a baby shower and another group of neighbors also surprised her with gifts.

The five-month wait stretched to six and then to seven and the Schermers learned the immigration service had lost Amy's birth certificate and some other important papers.

"It was so frustrating," Joe said, "it was like hitting our heads against a brick wall."

Finally, the Schermers learned the last week in May that Amy would arrive at O'Hare Airport Friday, June 1.

THE FAMILY, that includes three of the Schermer's own children, was ecstatic to have the baby home at last, said Mrs. Schermer, but Amy spent only two nights with them. It was then learned that she had to go to the hospital to be treated for rickets, a vitamin D deficiency disease.

Amy spent 10 days in the hospital, but she's healthy now and home to stay.

"She just fits in beautifully," Mrs. Schermer said. "We couldn't ask for a better baby."

Mrs. Schermer is anxious to be the friend and confidant she didn't have to other couples interested in adopting overseas children.

"IF ANYBODY wants help, perhaps I could give them a few shortcuts," she said. "I know I would have appreciated just having somebody to talk to about it."

The couple agreed that despite the frustrations in getting Amy, they'd go through it all again.

"It's all worth it," Mrs. Schermer said. "It requires a lot of patience and there were a few tears shed in between time, too. You think it will never happen, but it does."

The Schermers feel giving Amy a home is their way of helping someone who needs them.

"We always wanted to do something for somebody and this seemed a good way," Mrs. Schermer said. They will go to court in about six months to legally adopt Amy.

THE COUPLE first considered adopting an American child, but they learned that there is a two or three-year waiting list of couples who want babies.

"We found out we wouldn't be doing anything by applying for an American child," Joe said, "so we decided to try to get an overseas child who otherwise wouldn't have a chance."

This isn't the first time the Schermers have shared their home with an orphaned child. They have had four foster children at different times in the past nine years.

The last foster child was a baby, Mrs. Schermer said, who was very hard for the family to give up. That's when the couple began discussing a permanent adoption.

"We're all so happy to have Amy," she said, "when we had our own kids, Joe and I shared in the happiness, but with Amy the happiness is multiplied because they can share it too."

Two villages in agreement on flood basin

The Arlington Heights and Mount Prospect flood control committees have reached agreement on the size and type of storm water reservoir they want to see built to cut flooding in both villages.

The basin, if built, would be north of Central Road at Busse Road, and would hold only storm water, not combined storm and sanitary waste, as had been proposed by the Village of Arlington Heights.

Mount Prospect officials had objected to combining storm water and sanitary sewage because of a fear that such a facility would produce unpleasant odors in the area.

The storage of storm water only would mean about $10,000 worth of modification to parts of Arlington Heights combined sewer system, said Trustee Frank Palmatier, chairman of Arlington Heights Citizens Action Committee Against Flooding.

The storm water reservoir would alleviate flooding conditions in east-central Arlington Heights and much of Mount Prospect, officials say.

The estimated cost of the project is $12 million. The villages will ask the Metropolitan Sanitary District (MSD) to fund the work.

Plans for the basin and a request for funds will be discussed at a meeting with MSD officials on July 9.

Village accepting requests for new sidewalk squares

The Village of Mount Prospect still is accepting applications for this year's sidewalk replacement program.

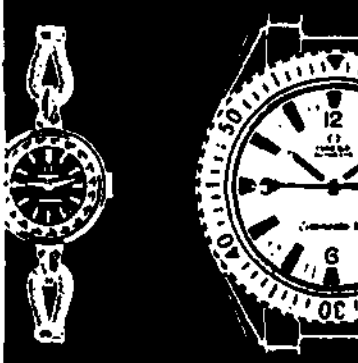

The village engineering department reports that only 125 homeowners, or about a third of those who could be handled, have applied so far. Under the program, the village and the homeowner share on an equal basis the cost of removing and replacing old worn-out sidewalks.

The cost to the homeowner will be $13.25 for each 5-foot-by-5-foot square of sidewalk. About $10,000 is available for the village's share of the program, but that sum includes curb replacements. F & V Construction Co. of Chicago will do the work this year.

Persons wanting to sign up for the program can get an application form from either the village's finance office, 112 E. Northwest Hwy., or engineering office, 11 S. Pine St. An application must be accompanied by a check to cover the resident's share of the cost. The resident must then mark with paint the squares he wishes replaced.

Applications will be accepted until available funds are exhausted.

Village may not be able to wait for parking funds

by KURT BAER
A news analysis

For three years the Village of Arlington Heights has been chasing an elusive butterfly.

It was in June, 1970, that the first appraisal was made of property at the southeast corner of Arlington Heights Road and Northwest Highway, the Hill-Behan Lumber Co., for use in a village application for federal funds to buy the site for a commuter parking lot.

During the intervening three years, village officials have won some "preliminary approvals" and a whole lot of delays from state and federal transportation departments.

Recently, the U.S. Department of Transportation set July 10 for a hearing on Arlington Heights' application for $100,000 in federal money, two-thirds of the estimated cost of buying and then demolishing Hill-Behan's lumber compound.

THE STATE'S transportation department

Sidewalk work signup deadline is Friday

Friday is the deadline for village homeowners who want to schedule replacement of cracked or broken sidewalks.

Under a cooperative sidewalk replacement agreement, the homeowner and the village share evenly in the cost of replacing a walk, each paying 62 cents per square foot.

Two exceptions to the "50-50" split are that the homeowner must pay the entire cost of removal and replacement across his driveway, which is $1.34 per square foot for concrete one inch thicker than regular walk; and that the village will pay the entire cost at street corners and across village alleys.

All sidewalk work will be completed by Oct. 1, according to Village Engineer Sander. Further information on the program may be obtained by calling Sander at 233-2110.

ment in January approved $56,000 for the commuter parking project. But the state's generosity is conditioned upon like approval from the federal agency.

But after three years, time may be running out, says Village Mgr. L. A. Hanson, because the lumber yard's owners cannot be expected to wait indefinitely on the sale of the property.

Hanson says it took him four years to get the company to agree to sell and move to another site. But the sale may never be made, because the village is still waiting for the federal funds to make the deal.

"The seller is not in a position to just sit. This is a business proposition and needs some clear-cut alternatives," said Village Pres. Jack Walsh, adding that after the July 10 hearing, he will ask the village board whether it wants to go ahead with the purchase, with or without the federal money.

From the public hearing, the Arlington Heights application, which is lumped with grant requests from 18 other communities, will be forwarded to Washington.

But there is no way of knowing how long it might take to get final approval, said Darryl Kenning, assistant village manager.

ESTIMATES ARE that 168 additional commuter parking spaces could be squeezed onto the Hill-Behan site. Its proximity to the railroad station makes it an "ideal" location, Kenning said.

The terms of the grant application would provide Arlington Heights with $400,000 in federal funds, and leave the village and state to raise $200,000.

Walsh said Arlington Heights definitely was not withdrawing its parking grant application, but added that the village board may want to act now without federal funds.

"We're not closing any options, just withholding an ultimate decision on which route to take," he said.

The public hearing on the parking program will take place at 7:30 p.m., Tuesday, July 10 at the Skokie Public Library, 5215 W. Oakton St., Skokie.

Outmoded exit ramps, signs

Accidents plague tollway

by TONI GINETTI

You're traveling westbound at 65 miles per hour on the Northwest Tollway when you spot a line of cars ahead of you backed up from the Barrington Road exit ramp.

If you're lucky, you've applied your brakes in time to avoid a collision. If not, you become another victim of the most accident-prone spot on the tollway, according to Michael Hartigan, chief engineer with the Illinois Toll Highway Authority.

The Barrington Road exit has been one of the tollway's most problem ramps because "there's just too much traffic" for it to handle, Hartigan said. Like most of the tollway systems' ramps, it was designed in the mid 1950s when consulting engineers determined where entrance and exit ramps would be placed based on traffic standards at the time.

TODAY THE tollway traffic volume in the suburbs has vastly increased, but most of the tollway's engineered layout apparently will not change.

While the Barrington Road ramp is being redesigned with traffic lights at the end of the ramp to enhance the flow of traffic there, most other ramps are destined to remain the work of 20-year-old planning, according to Hartigan.

"In most cases, the ramps were designed more amply than standards called for at the time," Hartigan said. "Any additional ramps built since then have been based on traffic studies which show the level of traffic in various areas."

In designing the location of ramps, Hartigan said engineers consider what traffic demands are in an area, whether an access ramp would overtax the system in terms of traffic and safety, and also whether the tollway authority could afford the cost of construction.

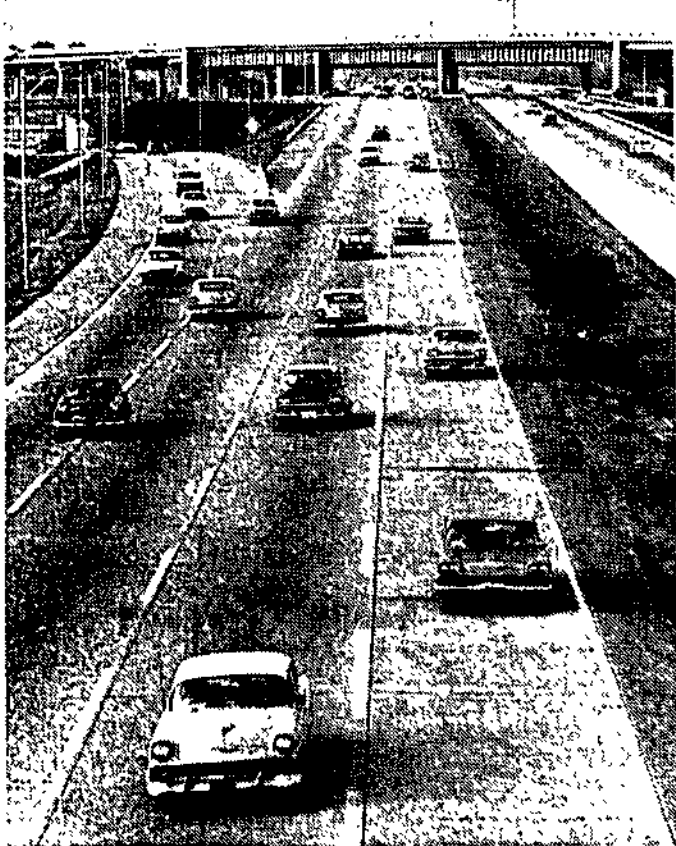

ACCIDENT REPORTS are considered, too, in determining the need for changes in access points, he said. But often, a clear history of traffic problems in an area must be determined before changes are considered.

At the interchange of the Northwest Tollway, Algonquin Road, Rte. 53 for example, Hartigan said the year-old section simply doesn't have enough traffic "history" to warrant a traffic change study.

Rolling Meadows police, who along with state police patrol that section of road, say there have not been many accidents at the interchange, although Police Chief Lewis Case said the section is engineered poorly.

"It lacks a lot of safety engineering but apparently that was

WHEN THESE CARS traveled the tollway it was no different than it is today. Engineers designing the access points to the Northwest Tollway 20 years ago did so based on traffic patterns at that time. Things have changed drastically since then, but not the tollway ramps.

No plan board advise on Harper site

The Arlington Heights Plan Commission will send no definitive recommendation to the board of trustees regarding the possibility of a campus for Harper College on Palatine and Schoenbeck roads in the village.

Following a public hearing last night on Harper's request that the 146-acre parcel of land be set aside in the village master plan for educational use, four commissioners voted in favor of the request, one voted against it and three passed.

The request for the change in the master plan will now go to the board of trustees for consideration and the board will "have no recommendation from us," O.V. Anderson, plan commission chairman said following the vote.

The commission took its action after hearing presentations from Harper officials on the need for the site and hearing a request from officials of the Mayo Foundation, operators of the Mayo Clinic in Rochester, Minn., and owners of the land, that the request be denied.

IF THE LAND is designated for a Harper site, any request from a private developer to build on the land would be held up for a year from the time of his request so the college could buy the land, according to Illinois law.

William Mann, Harper College vice president of business affairs, told the commission the college board had studied several parcels of land and had decided the site was the most suitable.

Before the site can be purchased, according to Mann, the college must obtain permission from the Illinois Junior College Board and the Illinois Board of Higher Education.

The board of higher education has held up Harper's request for a second campus until it can complete a study of enrollments and needs for all state colleges.

OFFICIALS FOR the Mayo Foundation said they oppose the Harper request because of the chances for lengthy delay before the college will know whether it can buy the land.

The foundation is paying $4,000 a year more in taxes than the rent it receives from the owners of the land and wants to sell the land quickly so the proceeds can be invested to provide income for the foundation's medical education and research programs, according to Karl Lader, Mayo treasurer.

Gregg Orwell, attorney for Mayo, said the foundation is sympathetic with Harper needs, but added, "We think there is considerable doubt that a second campus is going to be developed at all."

Orwell also said that although Mayo could still sell the land if it were set aside for Harper on the master plan, the price the foundation would receive for the land would probably be lower.

COMMISSIONER Madeline Schroeder, a member of the citizen's committee which suggested that Harper study the possibility of a second campus, said she was "dismayed" that officials had gone ahead with seeking the site before further study. "Perhaps we should take a little more time to look at the factors involved," she said.

On the final vote, Commissioner Leo Mueller voted against designating the site for Harper and Mrs. Schroeder, Russell Colvin and chairman Anderson passed.

A direct line to the Tower of London

Moving: that great suburban pastime...

You soon will be able to call Belgium to check up on Junior during his summer tour of Europe by dialing directly, if your telephone prefix is 398.

Or you could call Japan without the operator's help to find out the status of the transistor radio market, for $9, for the first three minutes.

How's the Swiss bank account doing? Once again, you can dial directly for $6.75 for the first three minutes if your exchange is 398.

Illinois Bell Telephone announced effective July 1, customers with the 398 prefix (mostly Arlington Heights residents) will be able to dial a total of 23 foreign countries directly through International Direct Distance Dialing (IDDD).

The 398 prefix will be able to take advantage of IDDD because of the new computerized switching system that handles those telephone calls.

Howard Hammer, telephone company spokesman, said the service was primarily aimed at business with overseas connections. The system would also be useful to families with relatives still living in Europe or the United Kingdom, he said.

HAMMER SAID IDDD is a time-saving system, rather than a money-saver.

According to him, only directly-dialed calls to the United Kingdom would have lower rates than those placed through the various overseas and foreign operators.

Paul Arnold, Illinois Bell Manager, said almost a quarter of Bell's customers would be served by offices with the computer switching system necessary for IDDD by 1976.

Some telephones in Elk Grove Village are already part of the IDDD system.

Countries served by IDDD range from Venezuela to Australia through Hong Kong and Sweden.

If you should ever need to call (or ring up as they say) the Tower of London, it's just a small matter of dialing 011 (the international access code) then 44 (the country's code) then 1 (routing code) then 709-0765 (the Tower's number). Who knows, someday it may come in handy.

Mosquito forecast bugs two experts

It's been an all right year, so far as mosquitoes go. But mosquito watchers differ in their forecasts of what to expect this weekend.

John L. Clarke Jr., vice president of Clarke Outdoor Spraying Co. Inc., La Grange, predicts the pesky insects will be out in full force over the weekend.

However, Wilbur R. Mitchell, director of the Northwest Mosquito Abatement District, Wheeling, says the mosquitoes shouldn't be bad at all.

Both authorities base their outlooks on the heavy storm which hit the Northwest suburban area June 16, but draw opposite conclusions from the storm and ensuing weather conditions.

CLARKE SAYS the storm produced the usual effect of carrying mosquito eggs to bodies of standing water, where, with the subsequent two weeks of warm weather, they're about ready to hatch.

Mitchell, on the other hand, says "good ol' Mother Nature" has taken care of the mosquito larvae. Heat from the sun has dried up many natural breeding areas, Mitchell says, and as a result, "there won't be anything near what we anticipated."

Mitchell, whose abatement district handles anti-mosquito efforts throughout the Northwest suburbs, said regular checks on the mosquito population showed "a drastic drop" in the past two days.

ORIGINAL estimates for a bumper crop of mosquitoes this season, he said, have not been fulfilled. "So far, it's shaping up real good," he added.

Clarke, whose firm has been engaged for mosquito control by 120 Chicago area communities, including Palatine, Hoffman Estates and Schaumburg, says, "At this point, the mosquito population throughout the Chicago area is very light. We are more or less between broods."

However, "we still have eggs out there," he added. "How bad it will be depends on the rainfall. The potential is still there."

Clarke gave the following yardstick for anticipating mosquito population: Half an inch of rainfall, followed by warm temperatures, produces "mild annoyance" two weeks later. An inch and a half to two inches of rainfall produces "high annoyance." Four inches of rainfall — "extreme annoyance."

No charges yet in tollroad tri-fatality

Charges had not been filed as of late yesterday in a triple-fatality auto accident on the Northwest Tollway near Higgins and Oakton roads. The accident occurred at 1 a.m. yesterday.

Illinois State Police said Robert Lilley, 28, of 1125 Perth Dr., Schaumburg, was traveling westbound about 1 a.m. when he lost control of the car and crossed the median strip, striking an eastbound car head-on.

Killed in the eastbound car were Anthony Wilson, 29, of Island Lake, Beverly Mackson, 27, and Ralph Peters, 39, both of Chicago. All were dead on arrival at Northwest Community Hospital.

Lilley was admitted to Northwest Community Hospital with face cuts and leg injuries.

According to an Elk Grove Village Police Department report, Lilley walked away from the accident and was found dazed, in the Hyatt Chalet Motel, 1920 E. Higgins Rd.

According to the report, Lilley said he had been boating on Lake Michigan with friends and then went to a party. He said he did not remember what happened in the accident and kept asking if anyone had been hurt, police said.

A spokesman for the state police department said an investigation was under way, but there was no indication what charges, if any, would be filed.

Bomb at construction site causes $5,000 in damage

A pipe bomb exploded Tuesday at an Arlington Heights construction site causing more than $5,000 damage to an earth-scraping machine.

Police said a black powder charge inside a two-inch diameter plumbing pipe blew up the motor of the machine owned by Rock Road Construction Co., Des Plaines.

The scraper was on a construction job in the 1100 block of S. Fernandez Avenue.

A spokesman for the company said he knew of "absolutely no reason" for the bombing.

The spokesman said there were no labor troubles involving the company nor was he aware of any conflicts with neighbors.

Arlington Heights Police Capt. Maurice

English said the pipe bomb is a relatively easy device to assemble. A high school science student could make one, he said.

ENGLISH SAID, "If you wanted to put one of those things (earth moving machines) out of business, they put the bomb just where it would do the job."

English declined to speculate on the reason for the blast. He said investigation would check out former employees as well as juveniles.

The blast was first reported Tuesday night, but investigating officers thought the explosion was the result of a faulty oil tank.

However, workmen arriving at the scene yesterday morning discovered large pieces of shrapnel in and around the machine.

English said findings from the blast site are being forwarded to the National Bomb Data Center in Dover, N.J. The center is operated with the cooperation of Justice Department and the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

Police investigate Rand School break-in Arlington Heights police report that Rand Junior High School was broken into sometime Tuesday night, and the thief escaped with an unknown amount of money.

According to police reports, entry to the school was gained by breaking a window. Once inside, the police said, the thief used a screwdriver to jimmy the office door.

A secretary's desk was searched and two coin machines were broken into, the police said. There was no estimate made on the amount of cash taken.

A youngster may be involved in the incident. Imprints made by a small gym shoe found near the broken window are being investigated.

Ice cream social slated

TENTS BEGAN to go up Wednesday for Festival '73 in Arlington Heights. The festival will be held on the site of the proposed Arlington Heights Cultural Center, north of the Arlington Memorial Library. It will run from Friday through July 4, featuring music, a carnival and a variety of exhibits.

Gas stations urged: spruce up!

Village gas station owners are being encouraged by the Arlington Beautification Council to improve the general appearance of their businesses, according to Jo Hayes, president.

"We're trying to encourage local gas station owners to spruce up," she said. "We're not suggesting anything structural."

"Since gas stations have some of the strategic locations in town, we feel that the esthetics should be improved."

Survey teams consisting of council members went to all the village stations last month. Besides suggesting beautification ideas, they also listened to problems owners had in trying to improve appearance.

The most common complaints were tural Center, north of the Arlington Memorial Library. It will run from Friday through July 4, featuring music, a carnival and a variety of exhibits.

salt sprays destroying grass areas and youths riding through properties on their bicycles and littering. Another problem was asphalt ground, which prevents the planting of flowers and shrubs.

"We realized that most owners don't have thousands of dollars for landscaping, so we are drumming up possible solutions for them," she said. "For example, the owner with asphalt grounds can set up tubs of seasonal flowers. Barberry hedges can be planted . . . kids wouldn't want to ride through that."

The teams will revisit each station in July and give owners ideas on improving their stations. "We don't expect overnight miracles, but rather than bearing down on the negative, we'd like to show people what can be done."

Villages agree on proposed basin

The Arlington Heights and Mount Prospect flood control committees have reached agreement on the size and type of storm water reservoir they want to see built to cut flooding in both villages.

The basin, if built, would be north of Central Road at Busse Road, and would hold only storm water, not combined storm and sanitary waste, as had been proposed by the Village of Arlington Heights.

Mount Prospect officials had objected to combining storm water and sanitary sewage because of a fear that such a facility would produce unpleasant odors in the area.

The storage of storm water only would mean about $10,000 worth of modification to parts of Arlington Heights combined sewer system, said Trustee Frank Palmatier, chairman of Arlington Heights Citizens Action Committee Against Flooding.

The storm water reservoir would alleviate flooding conditions in east-central Arlington Heights and much of Mount Prospect, officials say.

The estimated cost of the project is $1.2 million. The villages will ask the Metropolitan Sanitary District (MSD) to fund the work.

Plans for the basin and a request for funds will be discussed at a meeting with MSD officials on July 9.

the only way they could design it there," Case said.

"The biggest problem there seems to be with eastbound traffic on the tollway trying to decide whether to go south on I-90 or continue on the tollway," he said. He said some sign changes have been made at the section to alert drivers of the cutoff, but television films taken by the tollway authority before and after the changes show there still is confusion and indecision on the part of drivers approaching the cutoff.

"You don't want to make the signs too complicated, but you want to provide enough information for people to be able to make a decision," Hartigan said. "You must have something that can be grasped in a few seconds."

NEXT TO problems of access onto and off the tollway, Hartigan said signs on the tollway are the things that present other headaches for the authority.

"We get complaints from people wanting signs and sign changes all the time," he said. "Generally speaking, all the signs are in accordance with the state guidelines that they be visible from 1000 feet, and it's frustrating to get calls from people complaining the signs aren't big enough."

"California did a study several years ago on highway signs and through it they came up with three classes of drivers: those who know where they're going and how to get there; those who know where they're going and don't know how to get there; and those who don't know where they're going and don't know how to get there. The last class creates the most problems."

Hartigan said other complaints involving signs often come from civic groups whose towns are not recognized by signs along the tollway.

"I often think that it's a chamber of commerce type of thing rather than a directional thing," Hartigan said. "People ask why we have a sign for Milwaukee when it's not even in Illinois. My reaction is that interstate travelers have more interest in Milwaukee than Waukegan. We're trying to pull people through major interchanges."

"IF THERE is a major traffic generator, we put up a sign there," he said. One such sign is that leading to the Arlington Park Race Track. "There are 30,000 people who go to the track and about five per cent are new people. You don't want them wandering around the road because then there would be accidents for sure."

Hartigan said even though a sign for the track is located on the tollway, there are still complaints from people who miss the exit. "People say because of us they missed the first race and that they had the sure winner and we cost them $14.20!"

"Signing is almost an art and a difficult art," Hartigan said. "What we should do is do the signing for the New York Thruway and have them do the signing for the Illinois Tollway because the person who travels a road all the time doesn't need the signs. It's the unfamiliar traveler who needs them."

Hartigan said there are no particular problems on the tollway in the area of O'Hare Airport. "We do have another exit being built near O'Hare that will handle traffic from the northbound Tri-State Tollway. It will connect with the River Road ramp," he said. Hartigan said new toll plazas at the location will help divert about 40 per cent of the volume of traffic now using the existing three-toll plaza there.

Future changes in the tollway ramp system may depend on the success of a new computer system recording accident figures and studies, Hartigan added. Hartigan said the system "should help us keep on top of the situation," and may help in the designing of future tollway access changes.

2 homes burglarized, residents on vacation

Two Arlington Heights residents reported their homes were burglarized while they were on vacation, according to police.

Darade A. Sublette, 1232 N. Yale, told police his home was entered sometime last week. Police investigation revealed the house was entered by slipping the screen door and slipping a lock.

Reported missing were a boy's bicycle and a liquor bottle filled with coins.

Barbara Poledor, 1014 W. Alexandria, told police her home was also burglarized last week. Police said entry was gained by breaking the window of the basement door.

Mrs. Poledor reported the loss of $60 in silver coins, $15 in assorted coins, a man's jewelry case, a diamond ring, a man's watch and an undetermined amount of liquor.

Honorary initiates
